SUMMONS

In the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon, for Washington County.
Charles L. Lousignont, Plaintiff, vs.
Emma Lousignont, Defendant.

To Emma F. Lousignont, Defendant.
In the name of the State of Oregon:

You are hereby required to appear and answer the complaint filed against you in the above entitled suit, on or before the expiration of six weeks from and after the date of the first publication of this summons, to-wit: The 15th day of January, 1914, and if you fail to answer for want thereof the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief prayed for in the complaint, to-wit: For the dissolution of the marriage contract now existing between plaintiff and defendant, and for such other relief as may seem meet and equity in the premises, on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment, rendering his life burdensome.

This summons is published by the order of the Hon. J. U. Campbell, Judge of the Fifth Judicial District of Oregon, and said order being made on the 25th day of November 1913.

The date of the first publication of this summons is December 4th, 1913, and the last day of the publication of this summons is the 15th day of January, 1914.

J. N. HOFFMAN,
Attorney for the Plaintiff.

"In Him was life; and the life was the light of men."—John 1:4.
Light and life, says St. John, were brought into the world and by the Word made flesh. And life and light seem the fittest terms to describe the spirit and blessings of this feast of Christmas. For what is it that we see today? The whole Christian world has come together about the crib where the Lord lies in poverty. More souls are congregated there than there were angels in the multitude of that heavenly host that sang "Gloria in excelsis," above the hills of Bethlehem. From every land the broad earth over they come to kneel before the Holy Child this morning, bearing gifts of many forms, and uttering worship in a thousand tongues. Bethlehem is the heart of the world today and all highways lead to it; and many millions of the sons of men are moving toward it as in a mighty pilgrimage or vast crusade of followers and seekers after Jesus. And their hearts burn within them on the way, and break forth into majestic melodies of adoration and thanksgiving for the king of Glory who has come to rule them, and the Lord Most High, who is made flesh and dwells among them.

Only a handful—the few shepherds and perhaps the three Magi—kneel before the Child on the first Christmas; now it is a very world—a world of countless villages, populous cities, powerful nations, great continents—that bows the head and bends the knee and lifts the voice of praise to the Son of God just born, who begins his sovereignty over human hearts in the manger and will consummate it upon the cross. Never does wickedness seem so foul and all its gains and gratifications so hollow as on this day when the Lord appeals to mankind in the manifold sanctities of His birthday, so divinely beautiful, so benignantly gentle, so awfully near. And oh, thousands will surrender before that appeal and that wisdom, and will fall prostrate at the feet of Jesus ere this day will end, and will speak out to him in deep accounts of sorrow and brave words of love. And they will hear his holy voice give answer that their sins are forgiven and that their faith has made them whole.

Then, may that light fall today on no heart closed willfully against it; But may it enlighten every man, and fill the world with grace, and lead us all, through Jesus Christ our Savior, to everlasting life.

By Rev. J. B. Holmes, of the Christian Church

Only a very small number were permitted to see the Christ Child as He lay on that first Christmas night in the lap of Mary His Mother. As she tended that tiny little babe of Bethlehem wrapped in His swaddling clothes, Mary was the type of simple, yet gracious womanhood—not learned nor distinguished, seeking no notoriety, seeking no place among the famous or great, but simply a young, retiring, timid, and lowly village mother. Some one has said of her, "She represents attractive maidenhood and filial loyalty, wifely duty and fond motherhood, gentle ministries and stainless purity." Into her embrace the Christ Child came, and over Him she spread the mantle of earnest, watchful care. She was not divine, nor was she preserved from sin in a miraculous way. She was like other mothers, though a model of motherhood, in that she had treasured within those virtues that made her the highest expression of modest, pure, winsome womanhood. She gave to Jesus a noble mother. She fulfilled her mission and is justly honored as the "Mother of our Lord."

Jesus was well born; with Mary as His mother and God as His Father, He was "born a King." And yet Joseph played no little part in the care and training of this child that was "set for the rising and falling of Israel." He stands out in history,—an example of honesty and uprightness,—so honorable that he would not suffer his betrothed to be wronged, when once he heard the heavenly message concerning her honored position. The strength of those two lives is never fully appreciated until we remember the place in which they trained him for His mission.

Mary and Joseph were the first to look upon that tiny babe in His manger-cradle, the lowly shepherds first to worship before Him, the Wise men first to bring Him gifts, but the Angels of heaven sang His first lullaby. For ages sin had shut out the melody of heaven from earth; but at the birth of its Redeemer, the very skies rang with anthems of praise, as from sea to sea and from pole to pole the glorious strain was wafted on, "Glory to God in the Highest," and now all the earth pays tribute to this "King of Kings and Lord of Lords." We are now in the midst of this celebration kept in memory of that starlit night of centuries ago. From the icy coasts of Greenland to the verdant isles of the southern seas; from this glorious land of ours to where east clasps hands with west, all the earth joins in one triumphant song of praise; and thus shall it ever be, until once again the heavens are opened, and He returns once more to earth to reign forever and ever.

Man Market Report

There's an oversupply of the people who know what President Wilson should do, and the price on this line is exceedingly low. Sport-prophets have fallen off, too. Big over-productions have flattened the rate on discussers of Bulgars and Turks. But there's heavy demand, all authorities state, for the man who says little—and works!

The surplus of people-who-need-to-be-told is far in excess of demand, and the market is dull, unresponsive and cold for the m-n-with-his-watch-in-his-hand. No buyers appear for the low-brow supply—the price on them steadily shrinks. But there's visible shortage—which makes prices high—for the man who says little—and thinks!

Quotations on quitters continue to show that the market is glutted with these. And men-with-excesses sell strikingly low, and men-who-are-weak-in-the-knees. No offers on loafers reported at all. The market for triflers is sick. But prices are steep, with firm, steady call, for the men who say little—and stick.—Hugh Kahler, in Wells-Fargo Messenger.

Advertisers Help Town

The advertiser, while benefiting himself helps the town. A town in which the business men advertise in the newspapers is always a live one. The merchants who use printers' ink are always the progressive spirits of the place, and deserve the patronage of the community they help to support and push forward. Deal with the business man whose advertisements you see in the newspaper and you will make no mistake.—Salem Abstract.
