IN PATHETIC WRECK

WRITER TELLS OF SEEING RUINS OF REIMS CATHEDRAL.

Beautiful Structure Damaged Beyond Hope of Repair, Though Parts of it Miraculously Escaped the General Destruction.

A correspondent of the London Standard, visiting the French front gives his impressions of the war-damaged cathedral of Reims. "The specter of the cathedral looms up out of the mist with Turneresque effect as we top the Reims chain of hills," he writes, "and in ten minutes we are in front of the statue of Jeanne d'Arc, which stands unscarred over against the wrecked porticos. The Maid of Orleans seems to have bequeathed to her stone image the charm she enjoyed against the shafts of war, as the street leading up to the square and the walls of the 'Lion d'Or' are pitted, when not badly torn or altogether shattered by shellsplinters. Thirty feet high around the basement, the masonry of the cathedral is shielded with sandbags, but not one of the statues that fill the interstices between the pilasters seems to have escaped."

The interior, he says, is filled with an indescribable cold and entering it is reminiscent of Egyptian buried temples. Swept into many heaps are what the verger calls "tears of lead." These are the settings of the stained-glass windows. Only one of a triple set of colored windows remains almost intact over the entrance to the sacristy. In the center aisle opposite the principal pulpit there is also a crucifix that none of the shells has touched. "All of the rest is more or less ruin," says the correspondent. "This is the more extraordinary because in the roof there is a hole scarcely larger than a man's hand; but the shock was sufficient to reduce the interior to chaos." One instance of escape from wreckage is described as a freak that is almost a miracle. "Facing a huge chasm 20 feet square in the north wall in an inner passage," says the writer, "is a lovely bas-relief of the visit of the Magi, framed in a pure Gothic archway, as fresh looking as if it had just left the hand of the sculptor of five centuries ago."

"Before we leave," he continues, "we are taken to the 'museum,' as it is styled—a forlorn collection of rescued debris. It is curious to find here a hundred or two of the heads and limbs missing from the outside statues and statuettes. They look as if they had been guillotined by the Germans; perhaps it is because the necks are the slenderest parts of the images, but it is almost tragic, although they are but stone. Here is the 'Sourire de Reims,' the famous woman's head that stood over the north door. It was noised abroad that it had been smuggled away and sold to an American millionaire, but there is no mistaking the 'Smile' as it lies, brown and chipped, on a bench—both eyes and the nose gone, and only the underlip curving upward. It is as if the features had been sliced off with a knife."

A New Start.

Dr. Max Starkloff says a friend who has a reputation for a very "touching way" met him recently and said:

"Look here, doctor, I'm terribly mortified about not having paid back that dollar I borrowed last June, but honestly, old man—"

"Oh, that's all right," said Starkloff. "Don't speak of it."

"Oh, but I must speak of it," said the fellow. "I can't treat a friend that way, you know, and I—I want to pay you, and I will, doctor—sure thing. If you will lend me two dollars, I'll pay that dollar right this minute and we can start fresh."

GIANT POWDERS
Lift them out

Ordinary powders and dynamites waste much of their energy by shattering and pulverizing. To get the best results in land-clearing operations the explosives should disrupt, crack, split and heave the stumps and at the same time lift and remove the roots for easy handling. The explosives that do this are —made by a Western Company especially to meet Pacific Coast conditions. More than 2,000,000 pounds used every year for stump blasting in Washington and Oregon alone.

GIANT FARM POWDERS
STUMPING—AGRICULTURAL

There are two Giant Farm Powders—Giant Stumping Powders for wet soil and Eureka Stumping Powder for blasting in dry soil. They do their work at the lowest possible cost.

Test one case. Compare it with any explosive that you have ever used. After you have blasted a dozen stumps you will understand why those who have once used them always continue to use Giant Farm Powders.

Our free book on Stump Blasting tells how to save money in land-clearing. It shows how to make land-clearing easier by using Giant Farm Powders. We have other books on Boulder Blasting, Tree Planting, Subsoil Blasting, and Ditch Blasting. Write today for the book in which you are interested. Your name on a post-card will bring it.

Easy Job.

This little example of Irish wit was related at a recent dinner of the Wheel Club:

A newly landed son of Erin was gaping along a New York street when he chanced to turn into the office of a lawyer, thinking it was a store. He was considerably impressed with the fine furnishings, and approaching the only occupant of the room, a man busy at a desk, asked:

"Could you be telling what you sell here in this fine place?"

"Certainly," was the retort, uttered in rather an impatient tone. "We sell blockheads."

The Irishman looked around and nodded in understanding.

"Sure and you must have a fine trade I'm thinking," he commented. "You have but one lift."

His Limit.

One of the freshmen at Yale immediately applied to the proper officer of the university upon the day of his entrance into that institution for information touching his father's stay there before him.

"I should like to see my father's record," said he. "He was in the class of '75."

"I shall be glad to show you the record," said the officer, "but have you any special reason for consulting it?"

"Well," said the youth, "when I left home dad told me not to disgrace him and I wish to see just how far I can go."
