

Twenty-Eight Are Graduated

Superintendent Inlow, in a very thoughtful and flattering little address, introduced Judge J. H. Stevenson of Portland, who delivered the address to the graduates.

Judge Stevenson opened by expressing his gratitude at being invited to deliver the address to the sons and daughters of his old neighbors, the residents of Forest Grove and vicinity; he was reared in Washington county and secured his education in its schools.

The speaker congratulated the people of the city on their excellent high school and its efficient faculty; he congratulated the faculty on having graduated so large and intelligent a class and then proceeded to give the members of the class some excellent advice. He said the state had invested considerable money in the young men and women being graduated and it remained to be seen whether or not the investment would prove profitable. It would soon fall upon the members of the class to take their places in the world; if they made good, the state had made no mistake in its investment. He advised the members of the class to be alert, energetic and trustworthy and so conduct themselves that they could look the world in the face without a blush. "Knowledge is power," he declared. "Who would not rather be on Edison or a Marconi than the greatest general now engaged in the European war?"

The speaker held up the martyred Lincoln as a model for the emulation of the members of the class. He advised generosity in intercourse with people and declared there was some good in everybody. "Always remember," he said, "that your deeds affect those about you. Let your deeds be of a kind that will make the world better for your having lived in it."

The address was an excellent one, but not nearly all in the audience heard all of it, on account of being too far from the speaker and of the noise made by children—and others.

Prof. G. R. Thomas sang a solo so well that he was compelled to sing another.

Prof. Inlow then presented the diplomas to the graduates, as well as a scholarship to Miss Ruth Patton, who has her choice of any of six independent colleges in this state. Miss Patton earned the scholarship by her high standing of better than 95 per cent during the four years in high school.

A violin solo by Miss Emma Craft called forth an encore, to which the gifted musician graciously responded.

With the benediction by Rev. Dunlap, the audience was dismissed.

W. C. T. U. COLUMN

Mrs. K. B. Penfield, Editor

Columbia University departed from another tradition in favor of its women students when President Nicholas Murray Butler recently issued a decree which gives to all the girls in the university, not students in Barnard, Teachers' College or the graduate schools, the right to vote for members of the Student Board of Representatives, the governing body for undergraduate activities. Permission was granted to women a short time ago to enter the medical and dental departments of the university.

The last regular business meeting of the season of the W. C. T. U. will be held at 2:30 Friday June 2d, with Mrs. Marcelliot. A full attendance of members is desired. Parliamentary drill will furnish part of the program. All women interested are invited. The parlor meeting at Mrs. Randall's last Friday was full of interest and well attended. Mrs. Walker in charge of the program brought into requisition the services of nearly every member in her study of the cigarette problem.

Refreshments were served and the president, Mrs. Frost, was presented a berry spoon engraved "W. C. T. U." as a token of appreciation of her faithful and energetic work since taking the office.
