

Preparedness

The experience of the past year has shown in a practical way the need of a reserve fund.

Crops are not always assured and markets are not always good. Any man may be found unprepared for adversity once, but no prudent man will be found unprepared for the same emergency the second time.

If you are one of the many who had no reserve to fall back upon the past few years, begin NOW to get one. Begin early in 1917 with an account in this bank.

O. A. C., Corvallis, Ore., March 27.—To give Oregon orchardists in brief form successful methods of combatting pests and diseases with the right materials at the right time and used in the right way, four spraying bulletins have just been issued by the Oregon Agricultural College Extension Service. Since it is already time to apply the first of the sprays recommended, growers are notified that they may secure any or all of these bulletins immediately. The series is as follows:

Spraying apples and pears, No. 193; Spraying prunes and plums, No. 194; Spraying peaches, No. 195; and Spraying cherries, No. 196.

"Spraying aims to kill the pest or parasite by hitting it with the proper solution when it is unprotected, or to coat the susceptible parts of the tree or fruit with a killing substance so that fungicide or pest can make its attack at no point not suitably protected with a poisonous material," says the apple and pear bulletin. That is what each number of the series tells how to do for the particular kind of tree for which it was written.

The spray tables are new and different from any heretofore published on spraying, so far as known. They yield more information in clearer form and less space than any other. They show what to spray for, what with, at what time, and how to apply the spray. They likewise show at a glance how to dilute for required strengths and how to combine for two or more troubles. Illustrations show stage of bud, leaf and fruit development at which applications are made.

Since spraying is often the difference between a profitable and unprofitable crop, these little columns may mean a great deal to growers.

Boy Scout Examination

On Saturday March 24th, the following Scouts successfully passed a very difficult examination at the Central School: Donald McFeeters, Donald Misz, Ralph Parker, Bruce Roe, George Seymour, Clayton Lasham, Oscar Humburg, Frank Broderson, Lawrence Pierce, Paul Connet, William Martin, Harold Sappington and Milton Simons. These Scouts passed 95 per cent or better, there being nine with 100 per cent. Eight boys failed. The first five named will be entitled to certificates and uniforms. There will be a formal presentation of badges one day next week, and parents and friends will be invited.

The Ray Terry Williams Troop is registered as Troop 2 and Mr. Shotwell's Troop, as Troop 1.

The boys cleared $9.50 above expenses on their "movie" last week.

The boys are working hard to earn their suits. Any one needing any job done, call Scoutmaster.
