Hurt by Train

At 2 o'clock Saturday morning, while Pit Blarzin, living on Spring Hill, was enroute to Portland in a single buggy and while he was passing the Dan Pierce place on South A street, his rig was struck by a Southern Pacific freight car, being backed by an engine. Blarzin was thrown from his rig and dragged about twenty feet, sustaining cuts and bruises about the head and body and being rendered unconscious. The train crew summoned a physician, who removed the unfortunate man to the Forest Grove hospital, where he is slowly recovering from his injuries. The buggy was badly demolished and the horse so badly injured that he was later killed.

The accident is said to be due to the fact that the animal became unmanageable through fright and backed in the path of the oncoming car and engine. This happened so suddenly the engineer didn't have time to stop his engine.

Blarzin is a bachelor and has no relatives in this section.

He says fully 95 per cent of his regiment has been either killed or incapacitated and believes he would have died had it not been for the efficient work of the Red Cross society on the battlefield. He considers the Red Cross as necessary in war as ammunition and food supplies.

Harvey Baldwin returned Tuesday from Condon, where he has been assisting his brother, Oscar, in putting up several new build-
