THE LAW OF THE WOLVES

By Edgar M. Mumford.
(Suggested by the murder of Miss Edith Cavell and other atrocities.)

Lupus, the Steenth, was a mad wolf king
Who lived when the world was young.

He murdered by day and he killed by night,
He showed his own pack how the wolf-devils fight—

(The other wolves knew he didn't fight right)
So his death was the most satisfactory thing

That occurred when the world was young.

They clawed and they gnawed and they tore him in twain—
They knew he deserved it all.

(He had set his own pack on a brave wolf nurse—

The law of the wolves said nothing was worse—

He riddled her body and fell 'neath a curse)

So they clawed him and gnawed him and tore him in twain—
They clawed him and gnawed him and tore him in twain

And the ones that obeyed his will,
(There wasn't a one that could ever come back,

There wasn't one left of the mad king's pack.)

They buried the bodies and covered the track

Where they clawed them and gnawed them and tore them in twain
In the manner that other wolves will.

Every dog in the land, from Newfoundland to cur,

Remember the law of his kind—
The Law of the Wolves—When stated it saith,

"A male dog may fight a male dog to the death,
But he'll not hurt a female, or out goes his breath")

Every pup in the world, from Newfoundland to cur,
Pays heed to the law of his kind.

The Wolves have a law, but the Huns have none
In the world of the present day.

When they do what a dog or a wolf wouldn't do,
When they lose sex sense, and their hearts burn blue,

As they murder the women—the children too—
Say, what shall be done with the lawless Hun

In the civilized world today?

War Declared on Moles and Gophers

That depredations of the moles and gophers have become entirely too great and are unnecessary, is the decision of the County Agricultural Council, and to prevent further damage, war has been declared against the rodents and a campaign will be waged during the early part of March. The council at the time of its organization decided to make mole and gopher control a part of its program, and has recently gotten promise of assistance from the U. S. Biological Division. Mr. Theo. H. Sheffer will be sent here to give demonstrations in trapping and in preparing the skins for market, and meetings will be held in at least twenty points in the county.

at which time demonstrations will be given.

Catching of moles and gophers will be doubly profitable, since the crops will be saved, and a bounty of ten cents per scalp is offered by the county on both moles and gophers. The skins of the mole are also valuable, selling for at least fifteen cents and exceptional specimens have sold for 40 cents apiece.

County School Superintendent Frost is also co-operating in the drive with all Washington county school children. The Mole and Gopher drive will be made a part of the thrift campaign and the money earned by the boys and girls in trapping can be used to purchase War Savings Stamps. On this account the meetings will be held largely at the schools giving an opportunity for the children and their parents to attend. Dates and places will be announced later.

You can get the Portland Oregonian six days a week, by mail, and the Forest Grove Express, for only $6.00 per year, if paid in advance. For Oregonian seven days a week, add $2.00.

A few of the young people gave a little party to their friends in Langley hall Friday night. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed with Mrs. I. J. Hoar and Mrs. McFeeters for chaperones. Many games were played and refreshments, consisting of whipped cream cake, sandwiches, pickles and punch, were served. Those present were: Beth Emerson, Margaret Martin, Fay Templeton, Barbara Buchanan, Alma Van-Koughnet, Mary Olmsted, Evelyn McFeeters, Beatrice Bockman, Beth Potwin, Mabel Rasmusen, Edith Darland, Audry Feure, Maude Craft, Margaret McFeeters, Windsor Moore, Ernest Wolf, Glenn Hoar, Henry Fiske, Galen David, Mural Lafollett, Clarence Lenneville Willis Hines, Dale Underwood, Everett Burnworth and Robert Enschede.

Gladys Goodrich and Anne Anderson, who are employed in Portland, visited home folks over Sunday.

Bring your prescriptions here to have them correctly compounded. Littler's Pharmacy.
