Lawyer Would Go Farming
The following letter, from Lotus L. Langley, Portland lawyer, explains itself:

July 11th, 1918.
Mr. W. C. Benfer,
Forest Grove Express,
Forest Grove, Ore.
Dear Sir:

I am informed farm help is becoming very scarce. If necessity requires I will be glad to render assistance. Would prefer work so located that I might stay with my mother at Forest Grove. Will tackle and get away with anything that has to do with production and will stay on the job as long as needed. If the farmer can prevent my talking to him about what should be done to the War Lords of Germany I will be able to finish his harvest and fall work in a couple of days.

Yours truly,
LOTUS L. LANGLEY.

Mr. Langley stands better than six feet in height, is in good health, and ought to make some farmer a good assistant, if said farmer can keep him from talking war and politics. There ought to be a brisk demand for Mr. Langley's services, especially if he will board with his mother.

Food Administration Fixes Prune Prices

The prices recommended by the convention of prune growers, held in Portland, on July 2d and 3rd, have been accepted and adopted by the Food Administration as the maximum reasonable prices.

The prices are for cars at railway stations, or delivered at buyer's warehouse.

We quote the price list per pound for the benefit of growers:

Austins Whack Up With Uncle

In renewing their subscription to the Spokesman this week, Austin Brothers, who own Alfalfa Ridge Ranch on the Columbia near Vernita, asked us to sign them up for $500 worth of War Savings Stamps. The boys say fortune has been kind to them this year and they want to split it up a little with Uncle Sam. They think they hold the record in the valley for wool production, their ewes averaging thirteen pounds and the lambs eight. The best three ewes sheared 65 pounds, averaging 21½ pounds. Their alfalfa yield also promises to be the largest they have ever harvested—White Bluffs (Wash.) Spokesman.

The "Austin Brothers" referred to in the above are Levi, Jay and Paul, sons of Mrs. Nettie Austin of this city and Jay has finally passed the physical test to go "over there," after having been once rejected.
