Frank S. Gordon Meets Tragic Death

This community was greatly shocked Thursday morning to learn that Frank Gordon, the hardware merchant, had early the previous evening been drowned in a deep pool at Rippling Waters. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon, Hazel Stockman and Eddie Morton had driven to Rippling Waters for a short outing. They had gone swimming, Mr. Gordon, having gone into the water, sank almost immediately and did not come to the surface even once. The explanation of this is that he died probably not from drowning but because of heart failure.

Archie Bryant, who happened to be up the stream a little way, heard the shouting and hurried to the spot. The body could have been in the water not more than half an hour. It was brought to the surface and to the bank through the effective and praiseworthy work of Will Harrison and Harold Sappington. The hurried and persistent use of the pulmotor, secured at the station, failed to resuscitate and Mrs. Gordon and those who stood by were presently convinced that the life of our well known fellow-townsmen had left the body of clay.

At this writing, Thursday, 2 p. m., the body is at the Buxton undertaking establishment. Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed, awaiting the arrival of the Rev. Mr. Gordon, brother of the deceased, who lives in Astoria. The funeral will probably be held at the Methodist church.

It goes without saying that the deep sympathy of the community goes out to Mrs. Gordon, to the father and mother, and to the other relatives.

Better vision Glasses. Dr. Semones.

Fourth Quarterly Conference Held

The fourth quarterly conference of the Methodist church, always the most important of the year, was held Tuesday night in the church. Reports of the year's work both as to membership and as to finance were read. They showed the church to be in good condition. The District Superintendent was sick and so the Rev. Mr. Gilbert of Oregon City came and presided at the conference.

A Pitless Prune

When W. L. Cady was in California four years ago he visited Luther Burbank, the plant wizard. Mr. Burbank showed him a pitless prune, which he had produced by cross breeding. Mr. Cady bought one of the trees and set it out on his lots here. The tree bore fruit for the first time this year. The prunes are quite without pits, except that on one side of the little kernel there is the vestige of hardness resembling the substance of a pit-wall. The prunes are delicious in flavor, but are a little smaller than the average of Italian prunes. This may be accounted for by the fact that the tree stands much in the shade.

One curious fact is that at least one limb cut from the tree and stuck into the ground is growing

We omitted in last week's issue a good part of the story of Arthur Shearer's hunting trip. It seems that in the tidewaters of the Siletz river are the favorite play grounds of the fish. With an angler's instinct Mr. Shearer learned of this and proceeded to cast his hook in that stream. A huge 27-inch fish responded and was duly landed. Then a big Jack salmon was gathered in, followed by several stocky salmon, that must have been a delight to catch.

Miss Constance Cartright of Salem, the new teacher of Biology in Pacific University, was in the city Tuesday, looking over the campus, plant and laboratories. She expressed much satisfaction at what she saw.
