OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY

FRIDAY, MARCH 1.

It is well to have the first and last letters of the alphabet. The anties had Alley and Yates. Alley led the others.

It was suggested by some of the band boys that the Ten Commandments would have been adopted by a rising vote, Monday evening, had they been proposed.

When Senator Sherman speaks of the sale of bonds at 104½ when they are worth 120 as an "improvident act," he states the case with the mildness of skimmed milk; but it is easy to imagine the stronger language he would use if he cared to be quite plain about it.

Sheriff Ford and E. C. Hughes are the two politicians whom the Times mentioned a few weeks ago, when they were in Forest Grove. That organ then thought they would have their labor for their pains. Well, they had the labor then and the senator now. See!

The fact that the number of persons now drawing pensions on account of the Mexican war exceeds the total number of American soldiers who participated in that struggle furnishes an illustration of what a democratic congress is willing to do for pension claimants who belong principally to the democratic party.

Postmaster-General Bissell has resigned his port-folio in President Cleveland's cabinet. His private law practice at Buffalo is what calls him home. This is no hasty step, as he says, having been considered since last autumn. William Wilson, of West Virginia, sometimes mentioned with recent tariff legislation, is spoken of as his successor.

It was formerly thought that no successful politician could be evolved unless he gets his start in Yamhill. Well, that may yet be true, but he must go by way of Columbia. Twelve years ago the speaker of the house was from Columbia, then the secretary of state was called from St. Helens; afterward Supreme Judge Moore was taken from that county, and now the U. S. senator returns to the same town, when he seeks home and rest.

Last week, in an article detailing legislative reminiscences, it was stated that Hon. Sol. Hirsch received the republican caucus nomination for U. S. senator. This is a mistake. There was no caucus held that year, he refusing to take advantage of that piece of party machinery. There were republicans enough to elect, that year, and Mr. Hirsch had a large majority of them. Notwithstanding this, the session adjourned without an election. This was in 1885.

The "hayseeds" of the State Agricultural College are not quite good enough to associate with the other college representatives of the state in future oratorical contests. If there is to be a college aristocracy built up in the state the sooner the farmers and laboring men who educate their sons and daughters know of it the better. The bare announcement of the fact comes that representatives of the O. A. C. will not be permitted to further participate in the oratorical contests. The reason for such ruling is not communicated. Is it for fear hands that have guided the plow may soil the immaculate fingers of these "I--am--better--than--you's". Since A. T. Buxton is a representative of the "persone non gratia," and appeared on the platform last Friday when he was sick, and is yet, his manuscript will be published in next issue, that the people of this county, where is his home, may read and judge for themselves, whether there is originality and merit in it. It would be published this week but the plan for this issue had been decided upon before the manuscript came to hand.

The INDEPENDENT always takes great care to state exact facts, but last week an error was made and an injustice done to Hon. C. P. Yates, when it was stated he did not vote for Gates' resolution to adjourn the eighteenth session of the legislature March 1st. The official record shows that Mr. Yates was present and voted for the resolution. The error arose from not understanding the reporter's notes. They were plain enough to him, but to the editor here, who had no other guide than what was written, they were confusing. Not only the verbal testimony of the legislators agree that the Washington county delegation was a unit on all important matters coming up for consideration, but also the official record. This is not only true in the house, but true touching those bills and resolutions considered in the house and senate. When the above mentioned report was first received and read, the temptation to suppress what was supposed to be Mr. Yates' action, suggested itself, but supposing it to be correct and knowing that the honorable gentleman always has an excellent reason for pursuing the policy he adopts, it was thought improper to change the report in any particular.

A DUTY FOR SOME OF US.

George Wyckliffe McBride has been duly chosen to be senator for the six years next after March 4th. He was proposed by one of Mr. Dolph's supporters and accepted by the "faction." He appears to be satisfactory to most, if not the entire party. Not only this, but the democrats and populists make no factious opposition. The only muttering heard causes attention to turn to the personal organs and supporters of Mr. Dolph. They are disappointed, of course. So are we, of Washington county, but we are not going to whine about it. The Oregonian and the Pendleton Tribune and the Times-Mountaineer and the Chronicle and the Reporter must do what they would have expected us, of the "faction," to have done, yea, even demanded. No principle has been sacrificed. No combination or bargain has ever been made with democrats or populists. It is a clean cut republican election, made boldly and above board. No party rule has been put aside save and except the caucus, and that is a tool of the professional politician and not held in high estimation by the voter, and never has been. It must never be forgotten that the people cast the votes. If any dissentions have been created the politicians and newspapers have sown the seeds, and it is now their duty to close the breach.

The republican party, by its platforms and history, embodies those political ideas that nearest coincide with our personal views, and we all of us must hold to them; we cannot find congenial companionship with the opposition. Possibly, by going to the democratic and populist camp such diversion might be created as to bring defeat to the cause we have spent our lives in promoting. Is revenge sweet? Rather is it not a corroding passion that destroys—one that brings contempt for him who hugs it to his bosom. Does the revengeful man inspire personal respect? It will not do to sulk in the camp. Uncle Billy Sherman saw the effect of such a line of action when he advised Grant to stay with the army, when Halleck assumed personal command after the Pittsburg landing affair. Events will go along and others will become leaders. Absolutely nothing but disappointment comes to the man who balks. Every republican must as faithfully and conscientiously work in the future as in the past. Let those who have apparently failed and are disappointed, do as they would have us do, whom they call the "faction". Let them look within and see whether or not there has been grounds for complaint on the part of the people. If it is not all right with self, let them change, honestly change. Let economy really begin at home—not that economy that has for its only object the injury of an opponent. The republican party is not ruined. It is yet efficient for the administration of public affairs if its once supporters will refrain from stabbing it in the back.

THE LAST HALF HOUR.

There was an exciting time in the capitol last Saturday night, when the joint convention came together for the last time. There have been joint conventions before, and in 1882 there was a last night, but there are more people in Salem now than there were then. Before 7:30, the time for the meeting of the convention, the galleries and large lobby were surging masses of humanity. No one sat down. There were many privileged persons in the crowd—ex-senators and representatives—who mixed in with the members. The ballotting commenced, and progressed quietly and, for the occasion, orderly. Soon after 11 o'clock, Dolph caused a couple boxes of oranges to be thrown to the animals. There is where he made a mistake, for the time consumed in skinning and eating those oranges was employed in fixing things.

Before that the "faction" had asserted that it was willing to vote for any one of twenty men, and elect him, but it would stay there a long time before it would vote for Dolph. They voted for Williams. They voted for Fulton. They voted for Tongue. This to show sincerity. The Dolph leaders were stubborn, and evidently had determined to have their candidate or no one. Alley was the first name on the roll-call and was of the "faction". As he voted so did the others. There never were thirty men better disciplined.

After the oranges were eaten there remained time for but one roll-call. The supreme moment was at hand. Cleeton, of Columbia, got the floor, and in eulogy of George W. McBride placed him in nomination, saying that his name was offered as one to test the sincerity of the "faction" members, and if they did not vote for him he would favor returning to the caucus nominee and remaining until the late hour of 12. Barkley seconded the nomination. Alley took the hint and voted for McBride. The thirty, as fast as their names were reached, voted for McBride. Of the Dolph forces, Calvert, Cleeton, Calbreath, Gowdy, Sehlebrede, Shutrum and Stanley voted for the new candidate. (Everybody kept tally, and it was known that McBride had 40 votes.) Yates was the last name on the list before the speaker and the president, and he belonged to the "faction". He was standing on top his desk. The clerk call, "C. P. Yates." "Mr. President," said he, "We now have 40 votes for McBride. If we go home without electing a senator, don't lay it to the opposition, because we now show you we meet you half way; I vote for McBride"—41. The speaker voted for the Scotchman—42. Clerk Moody had the vote footed up as soon as the president said "Dolph," and pushed the tally sheet into his hand. Simon called out "89 votes cast; necessary to an election, 45, no one ha—" "Mr. President," yelled Templeton, of Linn, from his perch on top of his desk, "I change from Dolph to McBride"—43. Smith, of Polk, "I change to McBride"—44. Bridges, of Douglas, was a short man, and on the floor. He was yelling like all possessed, but could not get recognition. His friends, seeing how it was, gathered him by the legs and shot him up head and shoulders above the crowd. "Mr. President, I change to McBride"—45, enough to elect, and pandemonium broke loose. Of all wild scenes this was the wildest. McBride was found and brought in, but Dolph had taken a walk.

END OF THE AGONY.

Below is exhibited the votes taken on Friday and Saturday for the election of U. S. senator. The interest is not as keen now as it was last week, but that the record may be complete the whole vote is given:

On the thirty-fifth and thirty-sixth roll-calls, one vote each was thrown for Chamberlain, Rinearson, Weatherford, Beach and Smith. These five were democrats.

On the second and succeeding ballots taken at Saturday noon, Wm. Galloway, the last democratic candidate for governor, received the unanimous support of his party.

A TIMELY HINT.

As the time is now at hand when the county assessor will enter upon the discharge of his duties, the taxpayers may facilitate the business of assessing their property by having a memorandum of all the same ready for the assessor or his deputy when the taxpayer may be called on for a list. Much precious time is often lost, and in the end this loss adds to the cost of the assessment, by persons liable to assessment neglecting this matter until the assessor calls on them. Under the present law the assessment is made on the basis of all property owned by the taxpayer on the first of March of the current year. This is another reason why the memorandum should be prepared for use when the proper officer makes his call.

The present year the assessor is required to take a census of the population and products of the county. This will add much additional time, and work, and expense, and much of this can be saved by attention to the suggestions hereinbefore made. Many questions must be answered, and these, unless citizens and others have given the matter considerable thought beforehand, will take much time and expense that with a little intelligent care can be saved to individuals as well as the county.

A religious mob in Savannah, Georgia, had possession of the city on Tuesday night last. One Slattery, an ex-Catholic priest, had advertised a lecture. The Catholics of the city demanded of the mayor that he prevent the speaker from lecturing. This, he said he had no authority to do. Then the mob howled. Two regiments of troops were called out. Vice-General Cafferty, who has charge of the diocese and was asked by the authorities to use his influence with the mob, voices the true policy that should guide each Catholic, or, for that matter, all other enthusiasts, in such emergencies, when he said: "This man Slattery can do your church no harm. You are bringing disgrace upon your religion by your conduct here tonight. It can meet with nothing but condemnation. I plead with you to disperse and go home. Do not render it necessary to shed blood here tonight."

The railroad commissioners don't exactly know where they will get off. The legislature adjourned without electing their successors. For a time they thought they would hold over, but Gov. Lord has some friends whom it would be agreeable to reward, and he is diligently thumbing the law books, looking for authority directing him to appoint their successors.

Besides being a member of the political ring and a boss, Senator McGinn is a heavy weight pugilist and a member of the prize ring. He knocked out Sheriff Sears, on the streets of Portland, last Tuesday, and that, too, when Sears had a "great big gun."

If Mr. McGinn and the Oregonian are wise they will say as little about those amendments to the Butler bill as possible. There are some things in connection therewith that are shady.

Exclusive of trust funds, therefore, the total appropriation for 1893 is $1,450,762.87; for 1895, $1,203,635.99—a less amount for this session by $247,126.88.

WASHINGTON DAY AT GASTON.

George Washington's birthday was commemorated, on the evening of the 22d, in Raymond's hall. The hall was crowded with patriotic citizens, who enjoyed the exercises, which were very appropriate indeed. The singing, by the choir, of patriotic songs was highly appreciated, as was also the recitation by Glen Raymond. Mrs. Kertson's essay is deserving special mention, and the reading by Mr. E. X. Harding provoked much merriment. Master Earl Morrow impersonated George Washington, and Miss Grace Harding, Lady Washington. The oration, "Memories of the Revolution," was delivered by H. S. Hudson. His reference to the spirit, which animated our fore-fathers, was exceptionally fine. He said: "When Washington crossed the Deleware, with only the stars to light the tortuous passage of ice and water; when winds and waves and darkness and death struck chill the marrow of their bones, there was still in their hearts the vital spark, which the elements, or adversity, or British coinage could not kill—the hope of human liberty, and that winter at Valley Forge, where the tortures of hell were exceeded, when brave, strong men looked into the faces of their comrades, and observed the gaunt, grim hand of starvation encircling their throats, and murmured not. Tortured by threats of British bayonets without, and by the ravages of hunger and starvation within, still, still these heroic men yielded not for one moment the spark of human liberty which glowed in their breasts." His tribute to the colonial women was also very fine, but space forbids giving it here. E. F. M.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The closing exercises of the public schools of Cornelius took place on last Tuesday afternoon, and from the interest that was manifested by the patrons and friends of education, we conclude that the schools in this little town rank among the first in the county.

The program consisted of music, recitations and original compositions, given by the pupils in the intermediate department of the school, under the direction of Mrs. Emma Cornelius, teacher of that department. All performed their part without an error, reflecting credit on the learner as well as teacher.

The pupils of the grammar grade presented the principal, A. T. Palm, with a very handsome copy of Burns' poems.

Mr. J. Miller, chairman of the board, then, in a neat little speech, complimented quite highly the work and the progress that had been made in the schools during the last year, and no effort on his part would be spared to make the schools still better.

Thus ended the work of the last school year, and all went home well pleased with the entertainment.

BEAVERTON.

The storm still rages.

The marshal has finished his slashing and is now digging roots out of the earth.

Mr. O. Young, formerly a merchant of this place, but now a law student of Portland, Sundayed in Beaverton.

H. G. Davies has been enlarging his barn the past week.

G. W. Stitt is building a large onion house. "More land, more onions and more money" is his motto.

The railroad company has men at work on a large turn-table here. The old one has been taken down.

William King has bought an interest in the meat market, and with Barney Morris will keep the best at Portland prices.

School meeting next Monday, town election Tuesday, and general meeting of "old rounders" and "I told you so's," Wednesday, at the post office.

In these days of telephone, telegraph, electricity and steam, people cannot afford to wait days or as many hours for relief. This is our reason for offering you One Minute Cough Cure. Neither days, nor hours, nor even minutes elapse before relief is afforded. W. E. Brock.

The Newberg Milling Company will rebuild its saw mill, with a capacity of 15,000 feet.
