WELCOME TO WORKERS.

A county Sunday school convention was held at Leisville school house some months ago, which, at the time was mentioned as a gathering, that did good and effective work. The address of welcome was delivered by Mr. Alex. Chalmers. It was so highly appreciated that it has been asked to furnish it for publication. The convention being assembled, Mr. Chalmers said:

MR. PRESIDENT, FRIENDS AND FELLOW WORKERS: I must thank the citizens of Leisville for the honor they have placed on me in calling me to this duty, although I must confess I would have felt much at home to have filled the position at a farmers' convention on agriculture and stock raising.

We farmers think we have the greatest calling on earth and best of our profession, and perhaps we have a right to boast, for we are more closely associated with nature than any other. The beauties of nature are unfolded before our eyes day after day, and nature's God teaches us lesson after lesson. But the God of nature is also a God of grace, for which we ought to feel more deeply thankful—as free and full as the gifts of nature, and universally so. The progress of men in this little world of ours, the struggle for supremacy and power, fame or fortune, ending in partial success or disaster, is our lot here below.

Our political burrah, that has just blown over, serves to remind us of the uncertainty of times, things—men run almost wild on something—they don't know what. I say men, because I believe our lady friends are not in it. They look forward to great things on election day, which may all blow off in smoke, and which often has no better tendency than to bedim the sky of political reform. A patriotic interest for the good of a few which may or may not deserve it. Men have rank differences of opinion for no particular cause. Some favor free interchange of commerce for national prosperity, while others, vice versa, think our dignity must be kept up by high protection and high prices of products.

In this campaign we have an officer to support us who is incomparable; a representative whose self-interest does not overshadow that of His constituency, a leader whose banner over us is love—a cause that might be said to be in endless progress.

The prophecies of the old testament say in referring to this leader:—"The government shall be upon His shoulders, his name shall be called Wonderful, the Prince of Peace." The history of our own era emphasizes this fact. Wherever the gospel has been spread, civilization, progress and peace have reigned, that peace which hath her victories.

We then are at the head of an army that leads the world; we grasp the possibilities of this life and of that which is to come, and we ought to feel thankful our leader is being crowned in our land. Every day by the wayside, from the pulpit and Sunday school, from words of council and songs of praise, "Crown Him, Crown Him; Jesus, our blessed Redeemer."

But we ought to be especially thankful for Sunday school work so closely associated with the training of the young, which might be compared to starting the tiny rivulet, that flows on to a mighty river, and after it leaves the parent stream mingling and mixing in the waters of the ocean of influence. Like influence in life and after death, "they rest from their labors and their works do follow them," as well as christian influence and counsel. It is a means of upbuilding our social and moral nature. From the Sunday school ranks come the grandest specimens of the human race, the purest thoughts and the rarest gifts of literature, which influence should be felt in our most remote districts, which in some cases are still destitute of Sunday school gospel, a query for our superintendents and officers, perhaps the greatest issue of the day.

As soon as we become aware of the importance and can properly control the training of the young, so soon will our land be paradise.

It is encouraging in this work to think that our best support and officers come from the kitchen, from the wife, the mother, the daughter or the nurse, where love, sympathy and influence is the strongest. Volumes can be written on this subject. I think I have said enough, and in the name of the citizens of Leisville, and in the name of the gospel of the Sunday school, I welcome you, the delegates to this con-

WELCOME TO WORKERS.

We welcome you all, from every sect or denomination, color or clime, and hope that your visit may be pleasantly and profitably spent. And let us hope that our common prejudices may soon be broken down, and that Sunday school influence may spread as predicted—"From the river to the ends of the earth."

Isaac Watts said, perhaps nearly 200 years ago:

Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
Does his successive journeys run;
His kingdom spread from shore to shore,
Till moons shall wax and wane no more;

People and realms of every tongue,
Dwell on his love with sweetest song;
And infant voices shall proclaim
Their early blessings on his name.

DYNAMITE DRIVES PILES.

Engraving by dynamite, by which such exquisite tracing of delicate leaves, grasses and ferns are made on metal surfaces through the explosive force of the material, was discovered accidentally. Some officers at the naval station at Newport were testing a new fuse. In some way a small dried leaf had slipped in between the dynamite cartridge and the iron block on which the charges were fired, and a perfect imprint of the leaf was left in the metal. The discovery was afterwards utilized in decorative work, and the process is found so accurate in operation that even the veins in the petals of flowers can be reproduced in metal.

A writer in an engineering paper calls to mind another service of unusual character into which dynamite has been drafted, namely, the driving of piles. Some years ago the foundations were being prepared for a public building in Hudson-Park, and the preliminary work of pile-driving had been finished. It was, however, discovered that a change in the construction of the building would be necessary, which would add considerably to its pressure on the foundations. The piles, therefore, had to be driven in further. The expense of bringing a pile-driver to bear on each pile for so small an amount of work would have been very great, and it was decided to try dynamite. The piles were cut square and capped with a wrought iron plate about 12 inches in diameter and 1/2 inches thick. In the center of this plate was placed a cake of dynamite, 4 inches in diameter and about three-quarters of an inch thick. It was wrapped in parchment paper, covered with clay and ignited. The effect of the explosion was equal to that of five blows from a 1,500-pound monkey falling from a height of about 10 feet. The iron plates resisted from twenty to twenty-four explosions.—Ohio Valley Manufacturer.

Killing off the Africans.

How many more Africans are to be sacrificed to the greed of chartered companies? Assuredly Moloch was a mild deity in comparison with these adventurers. In South Africa thousands of Matabele were slaughtered because a chartered company fancied there was gold in their land and wished to steal it. In East Africa another chartered company massacred the natives of Uganda and then had the impudence to hand over the country to us, because its occupation was not a paying speculation. Now we have a massacre of Africans in West Africa. The Brassians have lived in peace and unity with the whites for half a century. They complain that they were starved owing to the customs regulations of the Niger Company, and in despair attacked a station of the company. Their town has now been burned down and many have been saved from starving by being killed.—London Truth.

Death of A. K. Gaines.

The Little Rock (Arkansas) Democrat of recent date announces the death of Major A. K. Gaines, in his 72d year. Mr. S. A. Clark writes of him:

He was the eldest son of Governor John P. Gaines, (who came out as governor of Oregon.) He remained here until 1867, when he returned to Little Rock, where he resided thirty years. His brother, Abner P. Gaines, resides at Corvallis. Archibald Gaines, deceased, was among the most sincere and earnest-minded of all the pioneers of the early times. Those who knew him here in his younger days, will not doubt that he was considered ever after a true man and honored citizen.

HOW CHOOSE U. S. SENATOR.

MR. EDITOR: The necessity for a change in the manner of electing United States senators is not because of a lack of capacity in the members of legislatures upon whom this duty devolves. No one can question their ability to perform this duty. The failure to use that ability is where the trouble lies. By the wherewithal of late years appears to be almost inseparably connected with such elections, all other important business is pushed aside and the consideration of laws that are in fact so much or even more important than choosing a senator is delayed, until if passed they are so hopelessly defective that but little, if any benefit is received from their enactment.

The action and non-action of the last Oregon legislature is sufficient evidence of the truth of this assertion. Laws, the enactment of which would have relieved the people of the state in the present hard times were, if passed by one branch of this model legislature, pigeon-holed by the other, as a means to force men to sacrifice their own convictions and their constituent's wishes in the choice of a senator. It would be useless to be more specific in this charge. The facts are too notorious to be successfully controverted. Does any one seriously believe that such neglect of duty, would have been exhibited by the legislature if the election of senator had not been in the board? Forty days of precious time at an expense of thousands of dollars, were thus wasted in efforts to elect men, that after five votes were given, no intelligent member believed could be elected without using means that would make honest men blush.

A record of hundreds of laws introduced, that were smothered in committee, or that for want of time for consideration, had better have met the same fate, is sufficient to condemn a system that from the present and past experience, not only in Oregon but in other states, has been productive of so much wrong doing, that if
