OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY

FRIDAY, JUNE 21.

One thing to remember about the 6,324,702 illiterates reported in the United States census is that the most of them are foreigners whose children are attending American free schools. This is the best that can be done to remedy the effects of European neglect.

A prominent philologist is convinced that the Japanese were originally Siberian nomads and neighbors of the Turks and Mongols. The Japanese language has many words common to the Indo-Germanic. It is certain that the Japs differ from the Chinese much as an eagle does from a goose.

Germany, as well as England, seeing the growing power in America, is becoming covetous, and is trying to get a Venezuelan island for a naval station. The United States will have to get in and whip two or three of those European people before they will understandingly read the Monroe doctrine.

The National League of republican clubs was in session yesterday at Cleveland, O. Nothing but routine work was done in the first day. The resolutions adopted, if any, were not received in time for publication. The advocates of free silver coinage were active and hoped to get some substantial recognition, notwithstanding the fact that the League is not a body to formulate platforms.

Germany stops the American hog and his products on the frontier. What is the reason we can't, for a like reason, shut the gate against the importation of shoddy? Let our boards of health exercise their wits in that direction. One of the first things congress should do when it meets, is to stop the importation of that disease-carrying stuff. Let American clean wool take its place.

According to the official statistics, there were 926 strikes in England during 1894. Of this number, 17 per cent ended successfully for the strikers, 14 per cent were partly successful, 51 per cent were failures, and 16 per cent had no definite result. Generally speaking, therefore, the workmen got the worst of it, and the cause of labor lost more than it gained. And these labor disturbances occurred in Free Trade England, which, according to the talk of the free traders here, in 1892, should not have occurred. Those people solemnly declared that strikes were fostered by the American protective policy.

The Cleveland meeting of the republican clubs is in session. The Oregon policy of refusing to touch party legislation, seems to prevail. Frank Bricknell, of the Iowa State Register, who is well-posted in the politics of his state, declares that "we are going to be conservative on the silver question. We believe in keeping quiet on that question. It is not for this convention to formulate or even touch upon the policy of the party. We stand with Senator Allison in his speech at Pittsburg, on Grant's birthday, which is for bimetallism. You man safely say that the Iowa delegation will vote as a unit against a silver platform outside of the one adopted at Minneapolis."

Miss Elizabeth Howard Key, aged 54 years, and grand daughter of Francis Scott Key, the composer of "Star Spangled Banner," was dismissed from a clerkship in the pension bureau at Washington a few days ago. Miss Key is the only support of an aged mother and an invalid brother. A knowledge of the dismissal coming to a committee of the Daughters of the Revolution, it, headed by Mrs. J. Mills Brown, wife of the late surgeon-general of the army, called on Secretary Smith to request the re-instatement of Miss Key. Smith was ill at ease and annoyed, and "could do nothing." The commissioner "regretted that he had not known the facts," and then rested. The committee hesitate about going to President Cleveland, because the "Star Spangled Banner" is not a favorite with him.

Whatever may have been Secretary Carlisle's currency ideas before he became the head of the treasury department, his utterances now are unassailable by his opponents, except by ridicule and by calling attention to some of his old speeches, made before he felt the responsibility of office resting upon him. In his Louisville speech made last Friday night occurs this bit of l gic that would seem incontrovertible: "It is insisted that the fall in the price of silver is attributable to legislation in Germany, the United States, France and various other countries during and since the year 1873, and most illogically, it is also insisted that, notwithstanding the reduced price of that metal is the result of the unfriendly action of a great many governments acting in concert and with a settled purpose, the United States can alone restore the value of silver. Of course, if it required the action of twelve or thirteen different governments to bring the price of silver to its present state, it would seem quite clear that no one of them can restore it."

THE TIMES, OH, THE TIMES!

There is a feeling that business is picking up, but it is slow, oh so slow. Yet the prospect is brighter than it was a few months ago. True, there is not yet much money in circulation, yet there is an absolute certainty of an increase of coin to be realized a few months hence. In the northwest the crops of all kinds will be good and the market will be certain, though perhaps the price to be realized will not be as great as we could wish, yet our farmers and orchardists will be able to sell at some figure. We commenced in the early spring to send off car load after car load of potatoes, onions, cattle and sheep. Now strawberries, that last year rotted on the vines because the high water had deranged transportation, are going by the ton, and later, more fruit will go with ship loads of grain, not to overlook the great wool product of Eastern Oregon. All these products call money here. It is to come and the producer is to be first to handle it. Times will be better; idle men will be put at work and money will circulate.

If the same old credit system was now in vogue with our merchants as formerly, about the same volume of trade would be done as formerly, but now since cash payments for purchases are the rule people are using the little on hand for daily supplies, instead of paying it for labor, hence we do not feel the improvement that really exists. The volume of business to be done later in the year will call into activity all the labor that is now in forced idleness, when times will certainly be sensibly improved.

THE HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY'S WORK.

ED. INDEPENDENT: It is with regret that I learn, from a clipping in to-day's Sun, that the editor of the Astoria Herald has been neglected by the American Missionary Society. This editor, however, appears to be laboring under a mistake as to the duties incumbent to this Society, that has sent out a few earnest men and women to spread the blessing of christian civilization among the heathen of Asia, some of whom as we learn from late news from that quarter have "been killed off" by the Chinese. The Home Missionary Society is the one that should care for the soul of this endorser of the bloodthirsty acts of these riotous Chinese. I hope its attention will be called to the matter. Possibly, the best way to insure consideration of the wants of one, at least, of the "heathen at home" will be to re-publish the clipping referred to. If that will not move it to consider the want of missionary effort at the prospective railroad terminus, by the sounding sea, we must conclude that it has signally failed to carry out the object of its organization—to send the gospel to those who need it most. But here is the clipping referred to:

"News comes that the Chinese have been killing off some of the American Chinese missionaries. That is the only sensible thing the Chinese government ever did. The Herald has no use for men or women who will leave heathen at home to go to China and try and make alleged Christians out of them. They ought to be killed."

This Astoria editor is right for once—we have "heathen at home." As some encouragement to these brutal Highbinders, this jealous grumbler might send them a few copies of his paper. Such expressed principles are more in accord with Chinese than American civilization.

A FRIEND OF HOME MISSIONS.

THE OPINION OF TRACY.

Hon. W. W. Tracy, president of the National Republican League, just prior to the meeting of the Cleveland convention, gave out this statement:

"In my opinion, this convention will, with regard to the money question, follow the lines laid out by the convention in Denver last year. The declaration at that time was clear, sharp and specific. It followed the line of the national platform of 1892, and favored the establishment of a bimetallic standard of money through an international agreement, looking to the enlarged use of silver. The resolutions, as adopted at Denver, proved highly satisfactory to the advocates of silver at that time, and I am satisfied that they will be as pleased with the action of this convention. I believe the great majority of the delegates in this convention will be positively opposed to any resolution declaring in favor of free silver. The delegates from Illinois will oppose any such action, to a man. The convention will in no way anticipate the action of the regular convention to be held next year. We have been most careful in the past not to overstep our prerogatives, and I am satisfied that the present convention will confine itself to outlining plans for carrying on the work for which this organization was formed. We have all we can do if we perfect our organization and put it in working condition for the campaign of 1896. Of course, national questions will be discussed, as is proper, but no action will be taken which is not in accord with the conservative policy of past conventions of this organization."

The democratic primaries in Kentucky are holding this week. The contest between Carlisle's supporters and the free silver wing is fierce, and no one now predicts what will be the outcome.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK.

Pacific University Closes a Prosperous Year.

FRIENDS OF THE SCHOOL PLEASED

Two New Names Added to the Roll of Alumni.

The thirty commencements that Pacific University has had, nor the scores that are yet to be observed, never have matched and probably will not equal in interest or be longer remembered than this thirty-first, which has just been celebrated. The first occasion had its single graduate, and is memorable because he has raised to be one of the chieves among the journalists of the nation. Others are marked because of the number of young men and women who have been sent out disciplined into the world of thought to do battle for science and for humanity. This closing is noted in two ways. The standard of learning has been raised so that but two candidates have been able to take the course. A sheep skin bearing the seal of P. U. now means what has been granted to the diplomas of Amherst. The boys who are passed by Tualatin Academy can enter the freshman year in the New England colleges. But there is no need of the pilgrimage, for the same amount of thorough work is done at Forest Grove as is required farther east. The other thing that will burn into the memory of men is the occupancy for the first time of Marsh Hall, the first permanent college building to be built in this oldest college-town in the state.

For a hundred years oaks have grown on that beautiful campus to prepare a landscape for this pile which has been lifted up among their tops. Its dormer windows look out over and through the gray branches of these trees that are fit emblems of the minds and characters that are to be trained in the halls below. Two years ago, when the summer breeze tossed the gray locks of trustee, Alanson Hinman, who threw the first shovel full of earth from the excavation, and the combined strength of Mrs. Dr. Marsh and Mrs. Dr. McClelland was required to lift another out of the shallow hole, there were not a few present who feared they would not see the same friends of the school in the completed structure. But the event has come to pass, for Mrs. Marsh was there last Saturday evening to present the last item in the building's equipment—a flag, to be mentioned later—and Hon. A. Hinman is yet here to audit the bills for the corporation dinner. The auditory of the new building is all that has yet been thrown open to the public, but, judging from this, none of us in Washington county will hesitate to show visitors through the building. It is justly a house for town pride, county pride, state pride. Indeed, a little vanity mixed in would be pardonable. The full auditory will comfortably seat one thousand people, but by a system of screens and doors it can be contracted to the capacity of three hundred. The sides are hard-finished with lime and cement, but the lofty ceilings are of wood panels. The time was on commencement occasions to find room for the people; now it is to find people for the room.

The first of the exercises of the week was the anniversary of the conservatory of music, on Saturday evening, when fifteen young ladies took part. These were selected from the classes, and do not represent the musical culture of the conservatory except in the first years. The singers had not rehearsed in the great hall, wherefore some of them had not learned what volume of sound is required to fill it.

Miss Atwell, first piano, in Heller's "Tarrantelle," showed great skill at the instrument, acquired only by long and painstaking practicing.

Abt's swing song was charmingly rendered by Misses Woods and Jones and Mrs. Chandler.

Miss Sara James feelingly sang Bohm's "Calm as the Night," though its effect was somewhat marred by the size of the hall, which the singer had not taken into account.

Spindler's "Schmetterling" was interpreted by Miss Anna Rose. It was a beautiful thing, and, though abounding in difficult passages, was just suited to the touch of the young pianist.

Train's "Rose," Woodman's "Violet," and Hawley's "The Land of Nod"—three songs in one—was warbled by Miss Grace Streeterr

Rubenstein's Wedding March, from "Feramors," a duet, played by Misses Henderson and Powell, only required the orange blossoms and the grooms to make a reality.

Wekerlin's "Stars of Night" was selected by Misses Young and Travor and Mrs. Lloyd, and it was worth a three-hundred-mile trip from the Prineville country, taken by Mr. Young, yere, to hear the song.

Gregh's Italian love song, "Sogno D'Amor," was charmingly sung by our Miss Ethel Morgan. The music was easy to understand, but the words were those of a horrid Dago. But for the fact that the singer is from our own Hillsboro, one would be justified in scolding because the musical English was abandoned for the jargon of the bandit. But the musical tones were rendered that shows the cultivation that Miss Ethel is receiving.

The first encore of the evening was given to Miss Harriet Stevens, when she finished Beethoven's 1st movement of Sonata op. 31, No. 1, which she acknowledged with thanks.

Misses Streeter and Stevens, in Damroch's "Philomel," were charming.

It was left for Miss Gladys Jones, rendering Cantor's "Dawn," to fill that great concert hall with melody. The lady has a powerful voice, rich and melodious, and will charm wherever and whenever she sings. A vociferous encore could, however, get no more than a bow of the head.

Here Prof. Ferrin stepped to the platform and stated a number would then be given that was not on the official list. He called Pres. McClelland to the platform, and by the time the doctor was there, Mrs. Dr. Marsh was prepared to meet him. In a few words she, on behalf of the ladies society of the Forest Grove Congregational church, presented to the college, through him, a beautiful flag. As she finished, the young man who carried the banner dexterously unfurled it and spread its full length on the floor before the astonished gaze of the president, who was so taken by surprise that for once he had nothing to say. However, he accepted the gift and led in three cheers for "Old Glory." These were given with a will. The college yell was indulged. Its echoes had not died away when the college choir, in a strong, pure tone, hushed the tumultuous audience to silence by singing "America."

The evening closed with Mendelsshon's Italian Symphony (first movement.) Misses Cooley, Graham and Stevens, and Mrs. Atwell being at the instruments.

On Sunday, the several churches of the city suspended services, and the congregations united at Marsh's Hall to hear the baccalaureate sermon delivered by Pres. McClelland. A chorus choir from the Congregational church furnished music. The hymn selected was that beautiful poem, "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God, Almighty."

The subject of the discourse was "The Character and End of Christ's Mission." In the study of the subject, the speaker found that the christian character is not negative, but is and must be positive. It does not stand for a set of abstract principles, but it is a living activity. The true man is not such by reason of policy, but is all that is good or staple, because he is grounded on truth. The man who adopts the motto, "Honesty is the best policy," for his rule of action, is on a dangerous place and liable to meet a time when he will decide that some other policy will seem the best. Throughout the discourse was just such an one as every young man on the threshold of a business career should hear and its admonitions heed. As a closing thought, the speaker called attention to the responsibility resting on colleges. Only a very small per cent of the youth of the land are trained in these institutions, yet fifty per cent of the rulers of the land come from their alumni. Wherefore, it is obligatory upon the schools to lay great stress upon formation of character.

In the evening, Rev. E. A. Paddock addressed the Christian Associations.

On Monday, after chapel exercises in the Marsh Hall, all rested till evening, when the college societies came together for the address of Rev. T. L. Elliott, of Portland.

On Tuesday, the third year class of the Academy had its closing exercises. Each of the twenty-one members had prepared either an oration or an essay from five to seven minutes in length. The best speaker, though, perhaps, not the best writer, is G. L. Haskell. For force, vigor and boldness of thought, S. I. Hirota attracted attention. Of the ladies, Bertha Tongue, Mary Luce and Blanche Garrison were particularly happy in the matter of their papers and their appearance on the platform.

The names of the class with their themes is here given:

H. A. Andrews—"The Future of Electricity."

Leverue H. Baber—"The Mission of the Press."

Ora M. Beal—"The Columbus of the North Pacific."

Liberta Brown—"The Value of a Life."

L. I. Bursell—"The Progress of Invention."

Helena D. Cox—"Was it Troy?"

Blanche L. Garrison—"The Value of an Ideal."

Emma S. Gordon—"Not Who, but What."

Clarence Hartley—"The Winning of the West."

George L. Haskell—"James A. Garfield."

S. I. Hirota—"The Future of England."

J. E. Kirkwood—"Dr. Whitman."

May Lieser—"The Use of our Mother Tongue."

Mary Luce—"William E. Gladstone."

John Miller—"Crisis in American History."

Katherine S. Myers—"Gustavus Adolphus."

Lois W. Parker—"A Modern Critic."

Ernest Rands—"The Green Mountain Boys."

Anna M. Sorenson—"Mary Lyon."

Ethel G. Streeter—"Spectacles."

Bertha Tongue—"Mythology of Greece."

The last day dawned clear and cool, assuring pleasant weather for the culmination of the exercises. Long before 10 o'clock anxious ones, remembering the crush of former years, hastened to Marsh Hall that they might be in time for a seat, but such haste was not necessary. There was room for all. Soon after 10 o'clock all was ready, the organ sounded, and a hush fell on the mass of humanity. Rev. Myron Eells led in prayer, after which, Misses Parker, Traver, Jones and Mrs. Lloyd sang "Sparrows' Twitter," by Otto.

The oratorical program was in two parts—junior and senior. The first orator was John W. Macrum, whose subject was "Hawaii." The speaker is fluent, of good voice, and altogether captivating. The first and main part of his address was historical. In connection with this part, he noticed the remarkable triumph which christianity has won on these islands. When first discovered they were inhabited by savage cannibals. The missionary went there, and in a few years redeemed those island gems to civilization and christianity. Into the last of his address, Mr. Macrum injected a little politics pleasant to hear, as it breathed intense Americanism.

Mr. Ruel M. Bisbee had a less popular subject, "The Development of Astronomy." But, notwithstanding, he spoke well, and his address contained many brilliant passages.

Philip E. Bauer had "Types of Citizenship." The speaker pictured mobs, and tramps and slums in vivid colors. But, however prominent these types may be, they are not the ones to whom call is made for good order and staple government. That type is the great self-supporting home-builders, who, though they may not be forward or vociferous, compel the observance of all those laws made for the protection of society. The orator of the senior part was William Sidney Shiach, whose oration appears on the first page in full. Mr. Shiach is a natural orator, and will win friends from any platform.

Miss Florence McKercher, essayist, was the last to stand at the reading desk. Her paper, "Truth in Mythology," also appears in full on the first page. The lady was costumed in a pure white fabric, fashioned in the prevailing style. She wore white kid gloves and a black "mortar board" college cap. She was self-possed, and read in good voice. Miss Florence is too innocent, too pure, too lovable to bury herself away as a missionary among degraded, dirty savages, as it was intimated she is thinking of doing. We, of a claimed civilization, need some of the softer graces to keep us from lapsing back into a primitive estate.

Comparing the orators of Wednesday with those of Tuesday no distinction can be made to the disadvantage of the Academy boys. Rather should be noticed what three years of college culture does for the youth just ready to step to the side of mature men. Let the boys of the Academy continue four years longer in the library, laboratory, museum and lecture halls of Pacific University, and they will have as hearty applause as that bestowed upon Mr. Shiach and Miss McKercher.

The corporation dinner was eaten in the afternoon by the college officials and their guests—the alumni of the school, and other friends. The first of the feast was almost entirely one of business, though an occasional sally gave notice of what might be expected. Appetite being cloyed, speech-making was indulged, and it was time for the president's reception before the tables were deserted.

The concert in the evening was well attended, and the music was all that was promised.

The year's work is ended, and the students and professors have a breathing spell before trouble begins again September 18th, next. The outlook for the next year is promising beyond anything that has before been seen at the same time in the year. The board of trustees have just received $10,000, realized from an estate on an old promise, and while the Pearson endowment has not yet been matched, the time for doing so has been extended, so that the friends of the college reasonably expect to gather in that $150,000.

PLANTER

Sire of Pandora, 2:27. Pauline (3) 2:29½. Is a horse of rich color, good size, good trotting action, and is a brother in blood to Patronage, the sire of the trotting queen, Alix, 2:03½. His sire, Pancost, was the son of a trotter, a trotter himself and is the sire of trotters.

Lucia, the dam of Planter, is the dam of Day Dream, (4) 2:21¼, and Chancewood, (2) 2:26½, and is the grandam of Wyatt, 2:27, Monta Vista, 2:28½, Nida Wilkes, 2:12½.

Trusty, the second dam of Planter, is the dam of Ducalion, 2:22, Scotland Maid, 2:28½, and John Love, 2:28¼, and the grandam of Day Dream, 2:21¼, and Sanburn, 2:26½.

DUKE OF PORTLAND

Is a remarkably handsome horse. He stands full 16 hands high, weighs 1200 pounds, and is a half brother to the great Axtell, record of 2:12 at three years old, and to an old sulky. His sire, William L., is a full brother to Guy Wilkes, one of the greatest sires of race horses in America.

His first dam is by Mambrino Star, 2:28.

His second dam by Volenteer.

DUKE OF PORTLAND is a young horse and has had but little opportunity in the stud. What few colts he has, are large, handsome and good gaited.
