"Why can't that American college be built?" With this question for a text a very pretty story is told of Admiral Farragut.

One Minute Cough Cure is rightly named. It affords instant relief from suffering when afflicted with a severe cough or cold.

There are about twenty-five men receiving steady employment in and about the mine at Riverdale.

Wm. Galloway has been elected president of the state board of agriculture for the ensuing year.

Mrs. Elizabeth Babcock, of Eagle valley, is the oldest person who ever lived up on a homestead claim.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

The annual message of the president, sent to congress yesterday, deals principally with our foreign relations and with the currency question.

THE JAPANESE COMMERCIAL INVASION.

I am in receipt of your favor of this date asking for my views on the threatened invasion of our markets by the Japanese manufacturers.

The state (Maryland) went republican because the republican vote has largely increased, a very obvious and somewhat significant reason.

The republican vote a year ago throughout the state was 3,000 larger than the democratic vote, and nobody pretended to assert then that the result was due to any personal causes or to opposition to any one man.

The Newberg Independent has enumerated the inhabitants of its town and finds 924 souls within the corporate limits and 199 just beyond the corporate limits.

HILL'S EXPLANATION.

Senator Hill has a habit of saying after a political defeat that he does all of his talking before the election, but in the present instance he permits himself to utter a few words by way of explanation.

There is such a thing unquestionably as a party having too much rope, and that is probably the best explanation in this case.

It is surely not to be supposed for a moment that the defeat of the democrats last month was accidental.

There was manifest logic in it, and a definite purpose that anybody can understand.

The people who elected a republican house in 1894 were still sick of democratic rule when the next election came, and they will continue to feel that way as long as the inflictions last.

They have ceased to have any faith either in the capacity or honesty of the organization that they consented to trust in 1892.

The lessons of practical experience, the losses in business and the general blunders in national finance, have fully convinced them that the republican party should be restored to power.

It is a waste of words to talk about any other. A large majority of the voters of the country are today in favor of the kind of a tariff policy that produces sufficient revenue to run the kind of a tariff policy that produces sufficient revenue to run the government, and to protect the public credit without borrowing money and increasing the bonded debt.

They are not to be deceived with regard to the causes of the treasury troubles and the injuries done to commercial and industrial interests; and they will not rest satisfied with anything short of a complete change in the control and management of federal affairs.

Speaker Reed's speech to the republican caucus, upon his nomination, was marked by some of his characteristic dry humor, but more especially by a declaration of policy.

He thought that if the immense popular majority by which the house had been elected would overflow into the other branches of the government, they would create, not a perfect world, but one rather more fit to live in than it has lately been.

But with regard to legislation he announced what might be called a policy of inaction. "We must," he said, "avoid all business legislation except in the direction of improving business. Rather than run risks, we can afford to wait until well-matured plans give us assurance of permanent benefit."

His statement that as the tax-originating branch of the government they would be ready to furnish the government with an adequate revenue pointed clearly to the position which the house will take, namely that the financial embarrassment of the government is due not so much to the "endless chain," as to an insufficient revenue, the result of the tariff legislation of the last congress.

Thirty thousand seal pups died of starvation on the Pribilof Islands last summer because their mothers had been killed at sea, and fully 5,000 more are on the islands in a starving condition from the same cause.

These figures are given by a treasury agent from actual count. If the democratic party had stuck up to its 1844 campaign cry of "fifty-four forty or fight," there would have been no British Columbia, with its harbors for seal poachers, and the seals would not be so near extermination.

Just now Great Britain is trying to claim some land that we bought as part of Alaska, because the gold fields extend into it, just as they are trying to beat Venezuela out of her gold fields.
