A new front on the building moved on the spot from which Landrock's old shoe-shop was taken last week helps the appearance of that part of the block and makes a much better shop for Mr. Landrock, who can at all times be found there, pegging away.

The whole cost of assessing Washington county for the year 1895, including field and office work, was more than $1,500. This is a marked contrast with Clackamas county, where it is understood that the cost was $5,000, and with Marion, where $7,000 was spent in seven months. It is true, Marion is a larger county, but it has not been known to be in the assessor's office as Washington.

Next Sunday morning, at the Congregational church, will be celebrated the Holy Communion of the Lord's Supper; the theme of the sermon preceding the Eucharist being "Father Damien; A Sacramental Meditation." Gus Kemper, on the day of his wife's funeral, was visited by a party of Mr. Kemper had $50 in pocket, which he gave to his mother-in-law, Mrs. Bohart, to keep for him. She placed it in a bureau drawer. When she went to get it she found it gone. Some other money and watches were not noticed. From these circumstances, it is thought some one saw Mrs. Bohart deposit the money, which he grabbed at the first opportunity.

The Corvallis reporter of the Oregonian has this month of Hon. T. H. Tongue's lecture at that place, last Friday evening: "Hon. Thos. H. Tongue lectured before the students of the Agricultural college last evening upon the subject, 'Genius and Flogging.' The address was attentively listened to and the speaker's eloquence and choice language won for him hourly applause. Among other things, he said: 'In making a difference as to whom one should appear, and also as to our positions. Poets, orators and statesmen would all have a place. But when came the power to place them at such dazzling heights? They flogged them there. Nothing allured them from their chosen purpose. The reason that such attained the goal while others failed was due to the fact that they had capacity for great work. Humanity can reduce genius to a level without great work. Mental toil begets mental strength. Wealth and luxury are generally found to be a boy's success. You can not measure the average of England would be a piece of intellect. The greatest man have come from the humbler walks of life, and been the greatest thinkers.' The Corvallis Times, (historical) speaking of the same lecture, says: 'The audience was large. Hon. T. H. Tongue, of Hillsboro, lecture at the O. A. C. chapel Friday evening, and all present were thoroughly entertained by the speaker. His subject was 'Genius and Flogging' and the central idea in the address was that the results accomplished by what we term genius, are in reality the product of patient and plodding work. The majority of great men come from the humbler walks of life, the necessities of youth forming habits of plodding that work out great attainment and make the world attribute to him who is in a successful possession of great genius. The possession of riches in early life he regarded as many times a misfortune. Mr. Tongue is a clear-headed thinker and a polished speaker, a fact that makes his candidacy for the nomination on the republican ticket for congress neither ill-timed nor inappropriate.'

Oily Gammon ought to be his name, for his lubricant was sufficient to catch our S. S. Lenox, of Gaston. Lenox was on the U. S. grand jury in Portland during the early winter months, where he formed the acquaintance of a well-dressed, prepossessing man of about 30 years of age. This party was introduced by Jacob Anderson, formerly of this county, and well known in Hillsboro as Mr. "Gammon" is sick. He belonged to the same church. They sang together. They—well, the prayers were probably soiled. The stranger wanted to go into business and wanted a partner. His mother, a widow, had abundant means, but for immediate use $200 was needed. He was favorably impressed with Mr. Lenox, and if he would contribute the $200 at once the partnership could be formed and a store of drugs bought. Mr. Lenox did not close the bargain that day, but came home, where, in a few days, he was joined by this confident man. Their agreements were concluded, and Lenox hypothesized a piece of paper by which he got the use of $200. He gave $200 to the new friend to buy stock and fixtures, while he stayed behind for a short space to sell his personal effects and prepare for his new home. When he went to Portland to miss his partner, and he kept missing him ever since. He is gone. And $200 is gone. But Sam has a job lot of experience.

The passenger rate war between the Southern Pacific Company and the O. R. & N. is still on, and promises to be more fierce than ever. The S. P. announces a rate of $10 and $5 for the Sunset limited, which leaves Portland next Tuesday, at 11, and every five days thereafter.

On Friday evening, February 21st, Mr. J. B. Stewart tendered a very enjoyable party to a number of his friends, at his residence in Farmington. The evening was quickly passed with music and dancing. At midnight dainty refreshments were served, which concluded this very delightful occasion.

From similarity of jobs, the party or parties who robbed the safe at the Hillsboro station last week, have called at Newberg, in Yamhill county. On Tuesday night last, a store in that city was opened, money tills robbed, and work commenced on the safe. A hole was drilled, and for some reason, probably fright, they fled, leaving all the tools on the floor. It begins to be believed that there is a gang of cracksmen on the West Side.

Some days ago, Mrs. Cody, a married woman, mysteriously disappeared from Tacoma, Wash. At the time, her husband was in the East, but as soon as he had word of her disappearance, he came to the Pacific and instituted a search. Insanity is thought to be the cause for her wandering. A reward of $1,000 is offered for information leading to a knowledge of her fate. A photograph and description of the missing woman is displayed in the window of the Hillsboro postoffice.

Deputy Fish and Game Protector Bagley, assisted by Deputy Sheriff Bud Tongue, have made several arrests of trout fishers the past week. On Monday, young Scheffelin was caught with trout in his possession and fined $20. This he paid, and will fish no more till after April 1st, which date the close season ends. Later, Wesley Garrison was arrested, charged with a like offense—taking trout out of season. He stood a trial before Justice Knight and a jury. Most of the day was consumed in listening to testimony and the argument of counsel. The case attracted much attention. One thing is true—if the law is a good one it ought to be enforced; if it is not, then it should be repealed; citizens ought to obey the law as long as it is in the code, and not experiment to see how near they can come to breaking it and still get clear. It may become necessary to adopt Dingley's plan—kill all the fish in the Tualatin and its branches. In this case, the jury promptly acquitted the defendant, because the state could not prove that he had trout in his possession. He had thrown them in the creek. Another $50 of the taxpayers money has been blown in on costs. Repeat the law and let the fish be killed.

Rev. James McDonald, pastor of the M. E. church, will be in his pulpit Sunday morning and evening as usual. There will be good music and singing at both services, but more especially in the evening. The subject for discussion in the morning is, "No Compromise but Sons of God." The evening subject is, "Is Conscience a Safe Moral Guide?"

Howard C. Tripp gave two temperance lectures here last week to large audiences. Mr. Tripp is a good speaker, though of the sensational order. He is, too, somewhat inclined to egotism, which is seen in liberal quotations from his own poems. The address was a happy equal to a good talker, yet hardly equal to Griggs, who was here about a year ago.

The latest use to which photography has been adopted is the making of a picture of the purchaser upon the back of the ticket he buys. The time required for this is less than a minute. A public gathering in the village was the district school house, which then stood south of the east of Peter at Box's residence, and to the south of Main street. There the opponents of the regular democracy assembled. It was a mass meeting, and politicians of greater or less prominence attended. Gosley, or Gossey, and Bennett, from Columbia county, came, Dr. McBride, who had some aspirations for state honors, was here from Yamhill county. More from the county were Hon. T. B. Cornelius, W. D. Hare, Isaac McJannet, L. L. Whitcomb and S. Whitcomb, his brother; W. H. Bennett, B. E. Wiley, the Caldwell and many others whose names are not now recalled. Lawrence Hall was chairman. Hare was county had only a few months before been set off from Washington, and Mr. Hare was here copying the records for the archives of the new county. The first thing that engaged the convention was to select a name. One proposed National Democracy, but the old Whigs could not endure the name, and put it from them. There were those present who loved the leaves and fishes. They proposed Citizens' or People's ticket; another faint voice said Republican ticket. "Not Not Not!!" People will call us Woolly Coats, Abolitionists, Nigger Stealers. We can't stand that," and much more to the same effect was said. Hare had not said anything until he was completely satisfied. "Woolly coats, or no woolly coats, the time has come and now is, when we must take a stand on these matters." From the first, he had the crowd with him. The house was a jam, for the democratic convention had completed its work and had gone over to see the fun. The longer he spoke the more enthusiasm was aroused. Joe Meek was there, and after one particularly telling sentence, he jumped up and called out, "If every honest man here said, 'I can't stand that,' we would have a majority." Hare's speech carried the motion to call a county convention to nominate a republican ticket. Gosley and Bennett bolted. McBride shook his head. Bill Bennett and Dr. Wiley, of this county, stayed, but feared a mistake had been made. The convention was held. Dr. Wilson Bowly was nominated for the legislature, and was elected by two or three majority. W. D. Hare was nominated for county clerk, and by a six or six-and-four or sixty-five majority. Dr. Bowly was, therefore, the first and for a time the only republican in the legislature. From that day to this the republican party has always been in the majority, though the opposition has occasionally got a man by hook or by crook.
