If we young men find no pleasure in reading and mental training and successful life except as a means for would better throw books and careers they will do either to us or to others. I like the principle that prevades the German colleges and universities. There the instructors advance step by step only on the condition that they make some contribution to the sum of human knowledge. To that one circumstance more than any other do we owe the constant outflow of wonderful discoveries and great ideas from German scholarship. The monetary aspect of life is entirely subordinated with them; for many of the most coveted educational positions in the empire carry with them no more of a stripend than $1,500. Surely such a view of life is the right one; since the moment we get the money-fever in our veins selfish considerations blind our eyes to the needs of those in our paths; we will even trample them down if we can but stretch our eager bands one paricle nearer to the clusive fortune dancing along just ahead of us, his boy, "My son, make money; if you cannot make it honestly, make it anyhow." The boy's worst enemy was the father who gave him life. We even hear it flippantly said that Golden Rule of nineteenth century is "Do others or they will do you." If we give laughing approval to that sentiment we are blind to the signs of the times. You young men whose blood is tingling, like mine, for the moment when you shall be oup and doing,"iyou who are preparing your minds and your bodies for the strain to which modern hightension life will subject them; you whose heads will scarce be touched with gray before the year 1925, have you felt the pulse of this present-day world?
