ROADS! GOOD ROADS!

To the Editor: A few days ago I was ploughing the ground being in excellent condition. I enjoyed it hugely and carried hopes that the road question would now settle itself. But as it has set into rain again, I have relaxed into my old morbid condition, "and the road question keeps a bobbing up again, like a certain ghost, it will not down." I have a little excuse to offer, though, before taking up the subject again; and that is the assertion that has been repeated of late, by those gentlemen of culture and leisure that constituted the good road convention to the effect that the farmers need to be educated to the importance of good roads. Well, I for one am willing to be a diligent pupil, but where are the lessons those pedagogues are expected to give us? I am afraid these worthy philanthropists don't know much about it themselves. About the whole extent of the knowledge many of them have about the subject is that they are men whose wealth and position enabled them to travel, and they have been in parts of the world where good roads were the rule and think a similar state of affairs would be desirable in Oregon; a desire in which I heartily concur.

work. Now, what is a system?

We are all familiar with the system of the human body. Well, what is it? It's a congregation of different organs with a head to it, and when that head wills the whole body moves like an army commanded by a general. There is a system more or less perfect in different individuals, but there has to be life in it. A dead system or a system without a head to it will soon decay. I call a system for this purpose the concentration of the motive and regulating power into a nut shell or a button, as they are going to have it in the future when everything will be worked by touching a button, but we are not there yet. I don't know but what our present road system would be good enough if we could get some of this motive power or life principle into it. The fault of our road law is as far as I can see, firstly and mainly that it is not carried out to the letter or spirit either. Another fault is that the work is not intelligently applied at the proper time. The principle needs of the roads have been stated by several of your correspondents, but one of the most essentials is constant attention, you know a stitch in time saves nine, not necessary constant work, but constant watchfulness. A half-hour's work will sometimes save a whole day's work in the future. How is this best to be attained?

I have an idea to offer for consideration, not that I would urge it for adoption, for I see a good many difficulties in the way that would have to be overcome, but it appears to me if we would concentrate our efforts in that direction we might get it into a live working system and by it secure economical road work and constant attention to it. I would make every land owner road master in his own district embracing his own land or as close to it as possible, so that he could bestow all the care and skill in an economical manner as he was able to conceive and get all the pride and satisfaction out of it that is possible, but compel him to keep the road in proper condition. By all means, for failing to do this, impose a fine. In constructing this plan I commence at the bottom—building upwards instead of commencing with the legislature and letting the responsibility slip from his shoulders on to the county court and so on down to the supervisors till it gets lost in the sand. I am going to nail the responsibility on some one where it will stay. Well, in saying I started at the bottom I have to make a correction for I left out the men that own no land, and some one, I suspect, will already have made the remark, "What are you going to do with them?" Well, I for my part, don't care whether they pay a tax or not. If it is proper and just, however, they can pay their share into a county road fund. Having the district located once, I would have a road inspector or 2 or as many as necessary appointed by the county court—good practical men with sense and good judgment who knew something road work themselves—men of the stripe of T. E. Cornelius, for instance, to act as road directors or instructors in road making and act as road marshals at the same time, and would clothe them with a good deal of authority, such as imposing of fines where he found one backward in doing his duty. I'll not follow this idea out any farther for I am not a law-maker, nor speak about the difficulties that are to be overcome, but would ask my fellow-farmers if they have ever considered and reflected how easy it would be for them, to keep the road running by their places in good repair provided all the other roads were kept by other people in the same condition.

It has quit raining and I must leave something unsaid for another rainy day when I can't plough.

Women Will Get Ideas Here.
Every woman has natural curiosity to see how other women furnish their homes. To satisfy this, The Ladies' Home Journal will publish during the year interior photographic views of a hundred of the most artistic, cheerful and comfortable homes in America. These will show in detail the construction, fitting and furnishing of parlors, drawing-rooms, halls, reception, music, sitting, dining, bed and bath rooms, kitchens, porches, piazzas, etc. This unique series will be full of excellent ideas for every housekeeper or homemaker. It will present views of the interiors of houses of moderate cost, which are fitted and furnished with conspicuous good taste and at comparatively small expense.

A Mississippi congressman has introduced a bill providing for the purchase of Cuba for the sum of $200,000,000. This would come with better grace from Mississippi if any of its representatives in congress could be persuaded to vote for a bill affording the United States money enough to pay its own running expenses.

THE UNSAVORY COMBINE.
Once more that windbag of the "Union reform" humbugs has broken out with the old chestnut concerning my refusal to give my name to my occasional contributions on the subject of what was once the populist party. This time it is get more violent, and without ever trying to deal with facts, applies such epithets as "genuine copperhead," "Snake in the grass," etc., and even quotes scripture. Well, any fool can call names, and a very excellent authority tells us that "the devil can cite scripture for his purpose," still such stuff does not do away with facts, and facts is what we want. My statements have become in due course of time verified facts; even the managers of the combine have after the game was up admitted that the populist party has been sold out like cattle to the democratic politicians of which Mr. Bryan was the standard bearer, and yet, in the face of all this, some backwoods windbag still continues to harp upon Bryan as if he were the greatest hero, saint and martyr! What in the name of common sense has this Mr. Bryan ever done for this dear people except that he labored to get elected to a fifty-thousand-dollar-a-year office, and after receiving the nomination of his own party he, by cunning and deception, received the nomination of another party with the tenets of which he never was in sympathy? The fight, however, has been fought and since then most of the supporters of this fraudulent alliance acknowledge the shame ful proceedings and yet some pious "reformers" is still harping on the Bryan tune, looking for fresh fish to fry and kicking because some will not be silenced. No, no, I shall keep up the fight and continue to expose the "reform" hypocrites who now control the peoples party organization in this state, and when there shall be a peoples party in Oregon free from the trickery of demagogues and all sorts of political wags, soreheads and clowns, I will then vote for it and support it to the best of my ability. But as to the present combine, no one who has a drop of respect for what was once the peoples party can consistently support it.

A STRAIGHT POPULIST.
The old way of delivering messages by post-boys compared with the modern telephone, illustrates the old tedious methods of "breaking" colds compared with their almost instantaneous cure by One Minute Cough Cure. W. E. Brock.

A cure for Lame Back.
"My daughter, when recovering from an attack of fever, was a great sufferer from pain in the back and hips," Loudon Grover, of Sardis, Ky. After using quite a number of remedies without any benefit she tried one bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and it has given entire relief. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is also a certain cure for rheumatism. Sold at Delta Drug Store.

Minutes seem like hours when a life is at stake. Croup gives no time to send for a doctor, delay may mean death. One Minute Cough Cure gives instant relief and insures recovery. The only harmless remedy that produces immediate results. W. E. Brock.

The man who spits on the floor is a man much observed in these times. The questions involved relates to microbes as well as to a higher standard of cleanliness and courtesy—Globe-Democrat. There are those, however, not able to otherwise attract attention, who squirt tobaccoed saliva over the church carpets.

If Riddle, of Douglas county, could have fully considered the results attending that action of a man skulking out of attending to his duty, when submitted to the consideration of the people, he would not have added his example to establish the totally untenable principle, that a man can shirk his duty, and become absent by getting outside a railing over which a school boy could vault. He could consistently object to the action proposed to be passed and record his vote against it, but by getting up and dramatically marching out, he enrolled himself among the worst enemies of the state and nation, in the effort to establish an action that may at any time be used to destroy both. Then, too, the people having placed a man in a position of trust and honor want him to carry out its duties to his best abilities in an honorable manner. No less a personage than the great senator from New York, Rescoe Conkling, thought to gain an added renown by resigning when he could not force his own opinions, and throwing up his position with the expectation that the people would return him and give him added power to force his view. But he found to his fatal sorrow that the people do not want a man who runs or who resigns, and Mr. Riddle will find the same thing.—Albany Herald.

AMERICAN LIQUOR LAWS.
The "Atlantic Monthly" for February will contain an interesting and instructive article by President Eliot, of Harvard University, on the subject of the practical operation of the liquor laws of the various states. This article is a summary of an investigation that has been carried on since 1894 by the committee of fifty not in the interest of any particular plan of temperance reform, but with a view to obtaining the actual facts concerning the results of different experiments in that respect. The information thus secured is not complete and conclusive, but it presents a trustworthy account of the general effects of the several kinds of legislation, with their relative degrees of success or failure. "As to prohibition, President Eliot says that it has abolished and prevented the manufacture on a large scale of distilled and malt liquors, and in districts where public sentiment has been strongly in its favor it has made it hard to obtain intoxicants, thereby removing temptation from the young and the habitually intemperate; but that it has not entirely excluded intoxicants even from districts where public sentiment has been favorable, while in districts where public sentiment has been adverse, it has never suppressed the liquor traffic or rendered it unprofitable. It has been attended furthermore, by concomitant evils in the form of demoralization and corruption which have nullified all of its advantages, and made it in this relation the worst of all kinds of temperance legislation of the eight states covered by the investigation. Five forms of local option exist. The main advantage of this theory, President Eliot points out, is that it implies the support of local sentiment, without which no summary law can be made effective, and that the same public opinion which determines the question of license is at the back of all the local officials who administer the system decided on. In the opinion of the committee, the law of Missouri is "the completest and justest of all," and has produced better results than that of any other state. While it cannot be positively affirmed, President Eliot declares, that any one kind of liquor legislation has been more successful than another in promoting real temperance, the Missouri law makes a better showing than any of the rest in the way of the general promotion of order, quiet and outward decency. "In St. Louis," he says, "where the saloons are numerous and unrestrained, public order is excellent, and arrests for drunkenness are comparatively few; but this good condition is perhaps due as much to the quality of the population as to the wisdom of the liquor legislation." A perfect system of dealing with the liquor traffic has not yet been devised; but gratifying progress has been made in that direction, and the cause of temperance is constantly gaining ground in all parts of the country.—Globe Democrat.

Persons who are troubled with indigestion will be interested in the experience of Wm. H. Penn, chief clerk in the railway mail service at Des Moines, Iowa, who writes: "It gives me pleasure to testify to the merits of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. For two years I have suffered from indigestion, and am subject to frequent severe attacks of pain in the stomach and bowels. One or two doses of this remedy never fails to give perfect relief. Price 25 and 50 cents; Sold at Delta Drug Store."

The Columbus, O., Journal notes the interesting fact that since the admission of that state into the union, seven of her United States senators have resigned, three of them—Corwin Chase and Sherman—to accept appointments as cabinet officers. In addition, it will be remembered Garfield was chosen senator, but, being nominated for the presidency, "renounced" the former position.

OVER THE STATE.

Athens, Umatilla Co., is shocked that two men attempted rape on a 15-year old girl, though on different dates. Both are under arrest.

A number of Eola ladies have been engaged as hoptrainers next spring. When the time comes, a lot of slow men will put in an appearance and find no opening. The Independent gives this as a hint to energetic and ambitious women, boys and girls, in other parts of Polk County to go now and make arrangements for spring work. Early birds always get the record and best work.

Campbell and Farley have already entered into contracts with eight different persons or firms for 80,000 pounds of this seasons output of hops at 10 cents a pound, and several other large contracts are under way. It will give such an impetus to the business that every acre of good hops is sure to be cultivated in the best manner possible, says the Polk County Itemizer.

Kinney's cannery on the bay which began canning steelheads a few weeks ago, has closed down, on account of not being able to secure enough fish to warrant continuing through the season, says the Nehalem Times. The fishermen's union set the price at 20 cents per fish while the cannery would pay but 17 1/2 cents and only a few were willing to fish for that price. Wist's cannery is still in operation on steelheads and clams.

The amount of taxes to be collected this year under a 20-mill levy in Douglas county will be $96,118.47. The current expenses for the year are estimated at $47,000; school fund, $24,029.00; state tax, $19,233.69; indigent soldiers fund, $961.20. Total $91,114.49. When interest on out standing warrants is added to this amount, it is plain to see that the indebtedness of the county will not be reduced during the current year; in fact, it may increase somewhat, says the Eylew.

J. W. Blake, of Condon, Gilliam county, has taken a contract to buy 2000 head of cattle for a Montana firm. Many buyers are on the lookout for cattle from one to three years old. Twenty-five or thirty thousand dollars will be paid for cattle in Gilliam county within the next few months, says the Arlington Record. Every steer or heifer that will be sold for the market price will be bought and shipped out of the county. The result will be a big demand for cattle, so the Record thinks.

A NEW TYPE OF SHELL.
Ordnance officers are much interested in a new shell that has been offered to the U. S. war department for inspection and experiment.

The object of the new shell is to safely fire an immense charge of high explosive from an ordinary gun. The explosive shell now in use in great guns by all the powers of the world is simply a ponderous mass of steel intended to pierce armor and fortifications, and is aided in its destructive work by a charge of 20 or 30 pounds of ordinary powder. Nobody so far has succeeded in utilizing any great quantity of high explosive like gun cotton or nitro-glycerine in an ordinary shell, because the shell charge was exploded by the shock accompanying the discharge of the gun.

But the new shell is a daring departure. It is a mere frame of steel 6 feet long and 12 inches in diameter, carrying 300 or 400 pounds of wet gun cotton. It is like a soap bubble inflated with hydrogen, and depending for the damage it will do on the shock of its explosion rather than the flying fragments of the shell itself. The most ingenious feature of the shell, however, as well as the most daring, is that it is open at the rear end. Such a thin shell of steel would be crushed by the immense gas pressure in the chamber of the gun. But the inventor has fitted a piston arrangement into the open rear end. This is shoved up by the expansion of the firing charge, and equalizes the pressure inside and the thin shell. Even with this safety device, the shell will be fired with a much lower velocity than that of an armor-piercing projectile. It will not be expected to pierce armor plates at all, only to reach its mark, after which the explosion will do the rest. This, of course, means economy in the fighting charge of powder, which is an immense item in using a great gun.

Three hundred pounds of gun cotton exploded on the deck or against the side of a modern battle ship would demolish her. It would also wreck an armored coast defense turret or blow a whole bastion of a masonry fort to atoms, to say nothing of killing every being within a wide radius by the shock of its explosion.

While the South shows a republican gain of 500,000 in the recent election, the republican vote in South Carolina declined from 13,345 in 1892 to 9281 in 1896. The new state constitution fixed by Tillman was intended to destroy the republican vote, and may be pronounced in this respect an eminent success.
