Less than a month ago David Edgar Bowen full of life and health and hope left his father's home in Hillsboro to take his place in the busy and to him, cheerful world. Last Sunday morning a lump of cold clay was brought home to his bereaved mother. With his older brother Albert, Ed had gone to Baker's Bay, Washington, and bought into a fishing company. Bert moved his family and furniture down leaving here on Wednesday of last week. His goods were landed from the steamer on the dock at Ilwaco, from where the boys took them in their fishing sloop up the bay a short distance to their new home. At this landing place there was no wharf and the boat was run in as near as possible and unloaded by carrying through the shallow water. Bert kept dry by wearing long legged gumboots. Ed wore a bathing suit and took the water as he found it. The boat was unloaded in three-quarters of an hour when Ed got in the boat and poured into deep water preparatory to throwing over the anchor so that it would not strand when the tide went out. Bert started up the bank homeward bound. The anchor line was long enough so that after throwing, the boat could be rowed in near shore, but Ed evidently wanting to try his skill at swimming, jumped into the water to swim ashore. He had about ninety feet to go. After he had got some distance from the boat he hallooed. Bert looked back, saw him swimming and apparently in good condition supposed his brother was only working off his exuberant spirits and paid no further attention to him. Soon Ed gave another cry, this time of alarm. Bert turned again and saw him struggling. Realizing that Ed was in danger, he rushed forward to give aid. Ed had got sixty feet from his boat and was within thirty feet of shallow water, but there he sank just as help was within a few yards of him. Every effort was made to recover him but without success. The body was recovered after it had been in the water about an hour. This sad accident changed Bert's plans. He put his goods on board Hillsboro. The corpse of the deceased was brought here for burial, the funeral being held at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. It was largely attended for Ed had a wide circle of acquaintances and friends. D. Edgar Bowen lacked but a few months of being 21 years of age, his birthday being in December. He was jovial, possessed a sunny disposition and absolutely fearless and self-reliant. It was this self-reliance that led his mother to treat his first fall so lightly.

The Union service now in progress at the Congregational church will be extended. The program of exercises for next Sunday is especially full and interesting. In the morning the preaching services and Sunday school sessions will be conducted as usual, the pastors occupying their own pulpits. In the afternoon, at 2:30 Edw. Holdridge will hold a service for children at a place to be subsequently designated. In the afternoon at 4:00 a men's service will be conducted in the Grange hall. All men are cordially and heartily invited to attend. Mr. Holdridge will address them on a subject to be announced later. At 8 p. m. a grand rally of the churches will be conducted at the Methodist church for Evangelistic work, with song and praise and preaching.

A 12-year-old son of Mr. Vanlum residing in Centerville, was accidentally shot on Tuesday. Dr. Bailey attended to the wound and it is thought the boy's life may be saved, but that he will bear the disfigurement of the accident through life.

Congressman Tongue did not get home on Friday as was expected, but he did come on Saturday morning at that date as the train pulled up at the station the Hillsboro Cornet band struck up a number in welcome to our Congressman, and as he, weary and dusty, stepped from the platform he realized that he was at home, his voice and face familiar by an acquaintance of thirty years pressed forward for a handshake and a welcome greeting. No speaking was on the order of exercises, indeed the whole matter was an informal meeting which was without ceremony.

Mr. Tongue entered his private carriage where his son and daughters were waiting and drove home. But he stopped there only long enough to put off dusty garments for within a half hour he was in his office and at his desk hard at work. Mr. Tongue will not be able to take a summer vacation. He will stay in Oregon till December, giving attention to professional business and looking after those matters of legislation in which the state will be interested at the next session of congress.

WEEKLY CROP BULLETIN. Portland, Or., August 9, 1897. WESTERN OREGON. Weather—The past week has been the warmest so far this year, and seldom is a week so warm in western Oregon. The mean temperature for the week, 73° is 7° higher than the preceding week; the maximum temperature averaged 86°, and the minimum, 50°. Temperatures of from 80° to 90° occurred on Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The cooler weather began Sunday. The highest night temperature was 64°, and the lowest 56° these temperatures are all above the normal and mark the beginning of a hot season. No rain fell during the week, clouds being more dense on Sunday. The atmosphere is hazy and smoky, numerous forest fires are making the smoke more dense. The winds were northerly to Sunday, when they became southerly.

Crops—The warm dry weather has done no injury, but on the other hand, was of great benefit to the hops. Hop lice thrive in warm, moist weather and are killed by hot dry weather, hence the great benefit to the hops in the hot dry weather. The reports from the hopyards indicate a great improvement in conditions and prospects. The hop louse continues to be very numerous, but at present no wholesale destruction is imminent but on the other hand, hop growers are expected to be greatly in excess of the total product of 1896, and fully as large as the largest output heretofore made.

The harvesting of fall and winter sown grain continues. Threshing has commenced in some localities, but the harvesters are not yet generally in the field. The fruit crop is generally in the field. The fruit crop is generally in the field. The fruit crop is generally in the field.
