OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1898.

The Argus is quite angry because the INDEPENDENT was able to point out the fact that Mr. Dolph was not opposed because he was a gold standard advocete.

D. K. Bowman, who has edited the Tillamook Headlight for two years has retired and his place is taken by Fred C. Baker. Bowman made a good paper.

Two years ago the Oregonian did not talk of a caucus as it does now. Much depends upon who is in the saddle, as to whether the Oregonian thinks the caucus a good device or not.

The legislature, now in special session is composed of 90 members, whose political complexion is as follows: Republicans—senate 24, house 42; total 66. Unionists—senate 3, house 17; total 20. Democrats—senate 2, house 1; total 3. Populists—senate 1. There is a republican majority of 46.

Thirty members of the legislature did not go into the Corbett caucus. They do not want Mr. Corbett, a factionist, to be senator and they knew that they would have to vote for him if they went in. The caucus was organized for that purpose. But those men are none the less republicans. They will vote for no one who is not for sound money.

Thirty-six representatives and senators went into the Corbett caucus last Monday night. Thirty-one of these voted for Corbett, four for George and one for Simon. Those who voted for George ought to have known before they entered the caucus that they would not get their man. The caucus was organized for Corbett. It would not have been held otherwise.

The American members of the international commission now in session at Quebec must have a care how they agree to let the English have ground for planting a flag staff at Dyea or Skagway. England has a good harbor at Victoria and at Vancouver, and exceedingly good reasons must be shown for giving our neighbors this new harbor before we of the Pacific coast will willingly surrender territory that indisputably is ours.

The Oregonian says much of a regular republican program. What ought to be a regular republican program? It seems to the INDEPENDENT that a republican program ought to be to select for U. S. senator any republican who is admitted to be a consistent supporter of the principles of the party—a protectionist, a sound money man and a man of acknowledged abilities and in the possession of unimpaired faculties. But when the republican program is confined to the election of one man, notwithstanding that man may be Mr. Corbett, then it is no longer a republican program but the program of a faction.

The Oregonian has carefully gone over the expenses of maintaining the three state courts at Portland that devote their whole time to trying civil cases in Multnomah county and finds that the footing is $55,925 for the year. The clerk has collected fees from the litigants amounting to $13,409.60 leaving a net balance of $42,515.40 for the taxpayers to meet. The pertinent inquiry of an outsider is: How much have those same taxpayers gained by adopting the salary system in place of the fee system that revuired ligants to pay for the settlement of private disputes?

The Chinese government is in almost as bad shape as though civil war raged. The emperor on the throne last month was a very liberal and progressive prince who had surrounded himself with kindred spirits. Reforms had been inaugurated and the nation bid fair to become modernly progressive. But the conservative element is yet strong. The empress dowager though from the lower walks of Chinese society is a person of great capacity. She deposed the emperor and has seized the reins of government calling Li Hung Chang and his party back to power. It is quite authentically reported that the young emperor has been assassinated though some late London news paragraphs discredit the story. But behind all this violence is the shadow of Russian interests antagonizing English economy. The unsettled condition of the administration is turning loose the worst elements of that semi-barbaric nation to prey upon the foreign residents. English, American, French and Italian all suffer alike. Insults, stones, mud and more deadly weapons are used upon official and private resident alike. Sec. Long has directed Admiral Dewey to send war ships as near to the Chinese capital as he can get them. Admiral Dewey has sent the cruiser Baltimore, 20 knots, four 8-inch and six 6-inch rifles, and the gun boat Petrai 11.8 knots armed with four 6-inch rifles. English papers speak approvingly of the promptness displayed by our government in sending these ships to the threatened port.

RAIL ROAD COMMISSION.

A friend called a few days since and remarked "I see you oppose the repeal of the law creating tha railroad commission. May I ask on what grounds?" The reply was as stated in the last issue. The repeal of that law would leave the people unprotected since at the time the law creating the commission was passed all other laws regulating railroad traffic were repealed. There may be defects in the present law. The commission may cost too much, but those things should be remedied by amendment. The visitor suggested that the semi-annual inspections of the commission could not be of much account that the roads for self protection would of themselves keep up the equipment. True, but these semi-annual inspections are not the only work the commission does, nor that of chief importance. The present commission has done good work and have been faithful to the interests of the state.

"What changes would you recommend?" The INDEPENDENT has hardly got so far as that. All that was intended was to raise a warning voice and prevent legislators from following an ill advised popular clamor. But if three commissioners are retained they by all means should be of one political party. Let the party in control be responsible for the work of the commission. If the democrats are strong enough to have two members of the board let them have three and then hold the party responsible for the work of the commission. If republicans have power let there be no divided councils but let the burdens be on their shoulders. Upon further reflection the INDEPENDENT favors the election of one commissioner by the people who with the governor and secretary of state by virtue of their office will constitute the railway commission. The commissioner should have a fair salary but the other two to serve without extra pay, such a board could be maintained for $4000 per year.

But if the commission is to be abolished something must be devised to take its place, and that something ought not to be the populist maximum freight law.

VOTE FOR SENATOR.

The vote for U. S. senator was taken in separate houses on Tuesday last. In the senate those voting for H. W. Corbett were:

Smith.
Total, 3.

Mr. Corbett failed of a majority both in the senate and in the house, lacking three votes in the former and eight in the latter wherefore the contest is referred to the joint convention where forty-six votes will elect. Should all of Mr. Corbett's votes stay with him he has 10 more to get. Can he find them?

The first ballot in joint convention was taken Wednesday and resulted in Corbett, 36; George, 13; Williams, 5; Eakin, 8; Waldo, Pop., 22; Bennett, 2; Hewitt, 1; Curtis, 1. Mr. Corbett received the 36 votes that attended his caucus, of these 31 voted for him in caucus, 4 for George and one for Simon. In the legislature there are 66 republicans, wherefore it is seen that Mr. Corbett is posing as the regular republican nominee when he got but 31votes, less than half the republicans in the legislature. He is not justified in calling the majority factionists.

The second ballot in joint convention taken yesterday gave Corbett his 36, George 17. The union bimetalists yesterday voted for Smith of Astoria. It looks like a dead lock.

SOME CHANGES.

Not a paper has been seen that opposed Mr. Corbett in 1897 that supports him now. On the other hand quite a number that refused support to the caucus nominee then is opposing Mr. Corbett now. One of those is the Klamath Republican which reprints with approval this article from the Statesman:

"The venal portion of the Oregon press is engaged just now in the contract of trying to prove that either John H. Mitchell or H. W. Corbett is bound to be chosen to fill the vacant seat in the upper house of congress. The evidence to prove the condition of affairs justify this prediction is all forced, stilled and improvised. It is made up for the purpose.

"Mr. Corbett has very slim chance of being chosen, and Mr. Mitchell has no chance whatever. Mr. Mitchell is not a candidate at all, either openly or secretly, and it would not avail him anything if he were.

"And it is a fortunate thing events have so transpired and conditions have so formed themselves that neither of these two gentlemen has any justifiable hope of securing the vacant place. The republican party of Oregon has a fight before it for 1900, and it has a future destiny to work out in the shaping of a policy of development for the state. It ought not to be divided into factions. It should not carry any dead weight.

"The selection of either Mr.Corbett or Mr. Mitchell would foster and keep alive factional feelings calculated to dim the prospects of future successes. The selection of Mr. Corbett would in addition to this subject Oregon to the ridicule of the nation; would cause our state to be held up before all the people of the country as a pocket borough in which places of honor may be secured by the highest bidder.

"We hope to see the legislature organize tomorrow without unfair tactics or disgraceful proceedings of any kind. Then we hope and expect to see chosen to represent us in the vacant place of the upper branch of the federal law making body a republican free from factional entanglements or alliances; one who will harmonize the heretofore warring elements of the party; one who will represent the whole state and work for its highest good; one equipped for hard work and able to hold his own with the brainy members of the U. S. senate. There are scores of men in Oregon who will measure up to this description."

The Tillamook Headlight is another example. Commending Representative Maxwell's opinions as reported in a Portland paper the Herald says:

"Mr. Maxwell was nominated in an anti-Mitchell convention by anti-Mitchell republicans and as an anti-Mitchell man. He never expressed himself as favoring Mr. Mitchell's election because he does not favor the election of any silver man, no matter what his personal relations with that man may be or how much he may admire him. But the people of the county are not particularly wedded to Mr. Corbett, they want the ablest man available so long as he indorses their financial views. The people of Tillamook are for the gold standard first—the man is a secondary consideration."

The McMinnville Reporter that was intensely anti-Mitchell two years ago is no less so now, and the following strong article shows that it is for republican principles and not men. The Reporter does not regard Mr. Corbett as being the only sound money man. The article reads: "The situation in regard to senator is quite the reverse of that two years ago, inasmuch as the 'push' seems to have shifted from the defunct Mitchell camp to that of the Simon Scott-Corbett combination. In other respects it is similar. The rank and file of the party then did not want Mitchell; if they are at present anxious to send Mr. Corbett to the senate they have a quiet way of manifesting the desire. We think we voice the sentiment of most republicans in this locality when we say that while we would much prefer to see Mr. Corbett elected U. S. senator, to any man whose position on the money question is the least equivocal, we would heartily rejoice to see the mantel fall upon shoulders a little younger in years, with the prospect and hope of a future ahead, through service to the interests of the state. There are plenty of such men, but the 'push' is running a great game of bluff in putting Corbett forth as the one legitimate and only possible candidate of the party, worship at whose shrine is the only test of loyalty to principle, and using the ghost of Mitchell and free silver to frighten nervous members into his support. Sensible people are aware that the cause of sound money has nothing to fear at the hands of the Oregon legislature, and hence this waving of the Mitchell scare-crow is getting to be worse than an old story. While the financial question is of paramount importance there will be some other matters before congress in which the republicans of Oregon are interested. The democrats and populists in every state where elections are being held this fall, are basing their campaign upon arraignment and denunciation of the republican administration for its conduct of the war. No effort will be spared, inside or outside of congress, to pervert and distort the results of the great victory or to harrass the president in the final settlement of the issues of the war. Republicans of Oregon must have a representative in the senate who is in sympathy with the administration on this vital point. In view of the course pursued by his newspaper organ, it is pertinent to inquire if Mr. Corbett fills the bill in that particular."

HOW LONG!

In viewing the senatorial situation in Oregon, one is led to exclaim, how long are we to be dictated to by the individuals who plainly say, "we will rule or ruin and it is immaterial which." No plainer fact can be seen than this one, that glaringly stares the people of Oregon in the face. It is gloatingly flaunted in the evening tail to Oregon's morning newspaper, whose most prominent headline was "It must be Corbett or a silver man for senator."

In the interests of harmony in the republican ranks the republicans in the state convention in Astoria, recognized the claim for legitimacy in control, of the Multnomah faction fight represented by these individual and every republican in the state put his shoulder to the wheel and helped roll up the largest victory ever secured.

In the same interests the republicans all over the state demanded that the factional fight be eliminated from that senatorial contest, and in obedience to that command Ex-Senator Mitchell's candidacy was dropped, and the universal request was that some new man who had not been tainted by the previous factional contest be selected.

But here come these same individuals, whose claims had been conceded in the interests of harmony, whose utmost demands had been granted to insure to Oregon a result in the election in consonance with sound political and monetary policy, and boldly proclaim that they must have the principal figure of the factional fight, for senator, or they will destroy the entire work of the republican success and the most important interests of the state. They demand the entire pound of flesh, or they will take the life blood of the republican party, out Shylocking Shylock himself, of whom they seem to be lineal descendants.

The cry has been that the only trouble was Mitchellism. Well, that element is entirely eliminated. But the trouble seems to continue just as rabid as ever, and really seems to establish the fact that the only trouble all the time has been anti-Mitchellism and the "anti," still hangs on.

Gentlemen, if there is one iota of honesty in your loudly proclaimed anxiety to have sound finance, sound political economy upheld by a successful republican party in Oregon, then cease your factional rule or ruin actions, and help to speedily elect some new, clean, capable man to represent Oregon in the U. S. senate.—Albany Herald.

The nominations for U. S. Senator being in order last Tuesday, senator Michell of Wasco nominated Hon. H. W. Corbett in a graceful speech. The Statesman reports that senator B. F. Mulkey of Polk offered a prompt and courteous second to the nomination of the Portland banker, in terms that well expressed his warm interest in the matter. He was ably fortified by Senator E. W. Haines, of Washington, who cleverly championed the candidacy of Mr. Corbett.

Senator Kuykendall nominated Judge M. C. George in the senate and in his remarks he enumerated these qualifications which he thought a senator should possess: First, that he must be a sound-money man and not too new a convert to that cause; second, that he must be free from factional taint; third, he must be a man of mature mind, but young enough to be re-elected if he prove efficient; fourth, he must be a man of brains, one who could fill the seat occupied by Baker, Williams, Dolph and Mitchell.

In 1897 it required 46 republicans to constitute a quorum for a caucus. This year it takes but 36.
