OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY

FRIDAY, JULY 28, 1899.

It was not a "whim" of the war department that musters out the Oregon soldiers at San Francisco. It was the deliberate choice of the soldiers. The "whim" of the department was Vancouver barracks.

The Oregonian thinks Adjutant Gen. Corbin will be secretary of war rather than Root. Well, why not? Such an arrangement would be promotion by civil service rules, and the Oregonian believes in civil service.

Hoke Smith of Georgia hopes and believes our arms in the Philippines will fail. He may properly hope, but upon what does he found his belief? Certainly nothing that has happened up to this moment furnishes grounds.

Admiral Dewey, when he had destroyed the Spanish fleet and taken Cavita, said that he wanted 5,000 troops for Manila which he could take any day with his fleet. Gen. Miles said 12,000 should be sent. McKinley sent 30,000. To some of us that looks like prosecuting the war with vigor.

The mugwumps ought not to be impatient at the progress making in the Philippines toward civilization seeing that we in America have but just completed the task taken up about 300 years ago. There were quite a number of natives in America in 1607 when John Smith ruled in Virginia and in 1620 when the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock, but now they are mostly "good Indians" tho it has been less than a year since the last civilizing brush was in hand.

President Lincoln was quite as soundly abused in 1863 and the early summer of 1864 as is McKinley today. That fact is called to mind by an article in the July McClure. Time however has shown that Lincoln was right and the others were wrong. The truth of the matter is, a president has a wider range of vision than a private individual tho he be the editor of a modern daily paper. The critic might hold different views could he see the whole situation and have the same burden of responsibility.

Will the American people patiently endure the tyranny of these modern labor organizations? Within the past three months there have been three labor strikes that are now in mind. At Wardner, Idaho, these "law-abiding strikers" blew up a mill, destroying property that cost thousands of dollars. At Brooklyn, New York, "organized labor" struck and attempted to dynamite street cars, and last, on Sunday another lot of strikers, "organized" blew up a car and injured six or eight passengers. Verily, "organized labor" is organized violence.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier of Canada made an intemperate and ill advised speech in the Canadian parliament last week. Talking of the Alaska boundary dispute between the United States and Canada, he said there are but two ways to settle it, submit to arbitration or resort to war. Inasmuch as we have not yet seen fit to submit to arbitration under England's terms the alternatives are few. War with England at this time after the many expressions of brotherly regard, would be awkward. But if nothing will satisfy Sir Wilfrid except war he can have it conditioned only that his nation shall commence.

A few days ago a paragraph in a city daily charged that the congressional delegations were dictating the appointment of the officers of the new volunteer regiments. To verify or disprove this, the INDEPENDENT asked Congressman Tongue whom the Oregon delegation was recommending. "I am recommending no one. Senator McBride is in the east and hence is not acting as a part of the delegation from Oregon. In truth no one has asked the delegation for suggestions. Gen. Summers is doing all the recommending for Oregon." The appointments announced this week are those dictated by Summers. It therefore appears that not all read in the big dailies is true.

Elihu Root of New York has been appointed to succeed Alger, resigned, as secretary of war. Root has accepted. It is almost certain that the president decided to appoint Mr. Root because he is a lawyer of great learning and will be able to handle administrative questions that are continually arising in the war department, now that our insular colonies are under military rule. But the new secretary is to be no more fortunate than was Alger for already is the yellow press after him. He is charged with being Platt's appointee and a politician's tool. How it is that there is reason for such paragraphs is not clear. Platt's candidate was Gen Green. But the politican Platt could not influence office-holder McKinley to appoint him.

THE FRONT PORCH.

Secretary Wilson said at the Hillsboro station last Monday morning that the Pacific states are the front porch of this nation. He illustrated by saying that last week he saw a ship at Seattle receiving cargo for the orient. He had a curiosity to know what was going into her for lading. He saw cotton goods from the south, iron from Alabama, machinery from Philadelphia, beer from Milwaukie, lumber from Washington and flour from Oregon. Every section of the nation was represented. The secretary sees nothing but a brilliant future for the Pacific. The commerce which this one ship represented had been gathered from remote sections of the nation by our admirable system of inter-communication. The cargo for that one ship had been prepared by many busy hands.

In the absence of the Nicaragua canal our busy men are using present facilities for marketing products and it is not clear but that our present lines of commerce are quite as valuable to us of the Pacific as would be the big canal. At any rate we must not sit idly on the "front porch" till some one digs it and takes from us one possibility of trade.

EXPANSION AND THE ADVENTURERS

As a sufficient and complete reply to our neighbor, the Argus, and all the other Pacific states anti-expansionists, the following article from the Louisville, Ky., Courier-Journal is reproduced. The Courier-Journal is a democratic paper, but because of that it does not find it necessary to advocate what is to the detriment of the country. Watterson writes primarily for the South, but his logic is for the Pacific as well. The Kentuckian says:

Taking the map of the whole continent of America both North and South and starting from any point upon the Gulf of Mexico between Galveston and Key West look south and west and what do you see? In a straight line first southward over the Caribbean Sea to Bluefields in Nicaragua, then northward up the San Juan river and through Lake Nicaragua and due west across a narrow strip of land less than 20 miles in breadth you come to the Pacific Ocean. Behold the vision of power and glory of wealth and renown that rises before the mind's eye, the imperial States of California and Oregon and Washington to the northward; and still further north Alaska and right out at sea in front of you Hawaii; all territory of the United States of America; to be held against the universe; to be defended as long as there remains a Yankee to carry a gun. But look again and look further. There before you, still gazing westward is another new world; with its [illegible] to be clothed and fed; to be educated in wants; to be cultivated in arts; to be elevated into [illegible] and markets; China and Japan and Australia and New Zealand and the multitudinous isles of the boundless Pacific including, of course the Philippines. Already Europe is reaching out for this rich spoil, its doorway being by Asia and the Suez Canal. Already, it is a world-fight between England and Germany and Russia the three great European Powers, for advantage in the partition and development of the one-quarter of the Globe where markets may be found for the overproduction of the older countries. But with the Nicaraguan Canal all these regions are geographically ours; and as if the Ruler of this Universe had meant to impress the fact upon us and to save us from losing the chance. He carries our flag there and plants it right in the center of this new world; and there we are today and there we shall be this time a hundred years hence unless somebody comes along that is strong enough to drive us out.

The circumstance appeals to the whole country because as we have already a Pacific coast front to protect we must by reason of this alone become a great naval power and incidentally a great military power and it is but anticipating conditions not very far a head of us to take our place in the procession of making and to profit by the advantage which uninvited and unexpected has came to us. But to the Pacific States and in the Gulf states it is the one great light of the future. It is the one rescue of the Pacific States from the railway monopoly which has stunned their growth and is strangling their lives, the one hope of the Gulf States for an independent outlet for their resources and a market unsubjected to oppressive geographic limitations nor dominated by capital which if not hostile is indifferent.

Considering these things how is it possible that any thoughtful citizen of the Gulf States should listen with patience to the vaporings of a political adventurer who blind to their claims upon thinking people would set up against them a bubble of hair-splitting theories about the Monroe doctrine and the Constitution of the United States? What should we think of Jefferson if ignoring the practical advantages he had on grounds of Constitution or other scruples lost the chance to buy Louisiana of Napoleon? What will be thought of us a century hence if through fear of trouble or and other fear we yield the vantage ground which all unbidden has come to us vainly seeking the retention of the bucolic Republic of Washington and Franklin which has already gone from us beyond recall?

The globe is shutting up like a telescope and through the smaller end one can see farther than Jefferson saw through the larger. Manila is not as far from Washington under modern conditions as New Orleans in Jefferson days. California was harder to reach at the date of the Gadsden purchase. Every year the world grows smaller. Yet the Gulf States of the South negro-ridden and impoverished have stood apart helpless seeing the narrowing stream quite pass them by and just as a great ocean outlet is offered them come a troop of penny-trumpeters to toot the old cant about "the consent of the governed"—whose own author did not consider it when the enlargement of his country was involved—and to drone about constitutional forms, which have at no time stood against the expanding desires or the practical needs of a people essentially enterprising and progressive.

Already this people approaches in numbers a hundred millions. Presently there will be two hundred millions. Does any thoughtful man imagine that they can be held within a Chinese wall when the world at large is moving resolutely forward each overcrowded nation seeking to take possession of the waste-place of the earth? Has modern invention convulsing the rest of the universe, fixed us where the fathers of the republic left us? Does electricity with its centralizing agencies count for nothing? But, waving matters of commerce and war and of business competitions both rational and national, what of our boasted Religion and Civilization if we are to draw back aghast before the thought of carrying the Bible and the flag beyond existing boundaries and insist upon a policy of isolation the end of which even if it were possible could be only another China with exceeding doubtful Yankee variations?

The Boston Congregationalist which is usually sound on all governmental questions is a little mugwumpy on the civil service tho it hedges by remarking: "There is room for difference of opinion between doctrinair civil service reformers and practical administrators like Secretaries Gage and Long as to the limits of the law and its details. But the principle has come to stay, and the party that first challenges that fact will suffer at the polls from the independent vote in a way that will teach it a lesson." The only mistake in the opinion quoted is the intimation that the republican party challenges the principal of civil service reform. It does not but the republican party does put the good of the public service above and beyond the civil service of the colleges. The learning of the colleges is indespensable but it is notorious that some graduates are complete fizzles when it comes to business. Industrial concers have the privilege of dismissing these incompetents and employing others who are not graduates, and the government ought to have the same right.

This paper wants to wager that the Manila reports published in London papers to the effect that the volunteer troops were about to mutiny is a lie. And this is what justifies that belief: Our own Oregon soldiers who are near home say nothing about it, and it is now officially announced that 800 of the volunteers now in the Philippines have re-enlisted. Mutinous troops do not re-enlist.

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher — The Kind You Have Always Bought

She Was Pale as Death

Miss Cordelia Moore, of Malone, N. Y., until recently, has been a life-long invalid from palpitation of the heart and weakness of the blood.

Physicians were puzzled over her case, their most skillful efforts were baffled. Various remedies were tried without avail. The proverbial "change of climate" was advised, but the constant change wore upon her until, to quote her mother's words, "she became a living ghost." Miss Moore said: "Upon advice of a friend I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and before the first box was used I noticed a great change. I began to regain my appetite and felt better generally. After finishing the first box I took six more. The effect was wonderful. I grew strong and gained in flesh. I never felt better in my life than I do now. I weigh more than ever before and I consider myself cured."

From the Gazette, Malone, N. Y.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after-effects of the grip, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, and all forms of weakness either in male or female.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are never sold by the dozen or hundred, but always in packages. At all druggists, or direct from the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., 50 cents per box, 6 boxes $2.50.
