

NOTED SCIENTIST DEAD

Dr. Rogers, of Forest Grove Passed Away Last Tuesday

DIED OF HEART FAILURE

He Will be Buried at River View Cemetery, Portland Next Saturday.

Dr. George O. Rogers, well known in Hillsboro died suddenly at his home in Forest Grove last Tuesday evening of heart failure, caused by valvular insufficiency. He was conscious of his condition several days before the end and approached it with equanimity. He said "This ball of yarn is fully wound up." He said to friends early Tuesday that he could not hold on till another day. The funeral services over the remains will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of S. B. Huston, his friend and Rev. Dunning pastor of the Forest Grove Congregational church will speak at that time. On Saturday the remains will be taken to River View cemetery, Portland, for burial.

The deceased was well known in the scientific centers of the United States and in some directions he was recognized as an authority, especially in the true in estimating the antiquity and value of porcelains. His theories of storms though not fully acknowledged were studied with interest.

He was born in Bridgeton, Me., February 22, 1832. In 1850, at Guildhall, Vt., he married Miss Adeline Flisk. After practicing dentistry for 14 years in Lancaster, N. H., he went to Hong Kong, where for 10 years he followed his profession, and then returned to Boston. A winter was spent in Florida, and two years in Mexico, where he made important researches in archeology, and then came to the Pacific coast. The past six years he has been a resident of Hillsboro and Forest Grove. A lecture giving his original theory of the tides, delivered in Forest Grove, McMinnville and before the scientific association of Portland, attracted considerable attention. He also gave a course of six lectures at McMinnville on "The Evolution of Religion." His address before the Pacific coast dental congress, at Portland last year was the feature of that important gathering. At the time of his death he was preparing a lecture on "The Value of Art" for the Pacific university. While in China he made a study of porcelain, and gathered a collection valued at $30,000, which is now in the Boston art museum. He was prominent as a scientist and philanthropist. He left a wife and a son, A. F. Rogers, a Portland business man.

January 1906.

For an old gander it is getting cold and dreary. Have found a widow who is not contented to fly away to the sunny south with her to spend the winter. In the spring she is in hopes to return to our beautiful Oregon state, after the clouds have rolled by. Think have earned my keep and long as I remain on top of the early want to enjoy life the best I can and make my self comfortable as possible.

The Derry mills of Polk county have advertised in this county for bids to furnish wood for a year. The mill is a large concern and uses several hundred cords of wood. For some time they have been drawing from forests near the railroads and each year they go further away.

Little Harold Merryman lingered on the brink of the river of death this week. Last week he was slightly ailing but seemed to recover. Then he was chilled after which his ailment returned and he was a sick boy for a few days, but he seems better now and hopes are entertained for his recovery.

The Nashville Students played to a full house and gave an entertainment that is worthy of patronage. Mr. Wehrung has been successful in getting good companies in the opera house this season, but this has been done only by exercising a judicious discrimination. The people appreciate the work he is doing for them in this direction.

Mr. R. A. Ellis, who last year bought the Sigler property on the corner of Base line and Seventh St., has sold the same to parties in the same town. The transfer has not yet been made but will be as soon as the purchaser gets here. The photograph gallery goes with the property. It is understood that the fixtures in the gallery are for sale. Mr. Ellis is planning to go to Alaska.

Yesterday was County Judge Root's birthday. When he went into the court house a neatly packed parcel was given to him which he opened when in his office. It proved to be one of the new fashioned cigar stands and a box of choice cigars. Both were highly appreciated especially when he learned that they came from the clerk's office and carried the good wishes of the employees.

The onion crop in this section has for the most part been sold and shipped to market. There remains but a few sacks, 10 to 25 lots. Fair prices were realized and growers are encouraged to plant larger areas next year. They are further influenced to this since they find it easier to sell a car load than 10 sacks. Onions are not keeping well this year thought to be due to imperfect ripening last fall.

The mask ball given by the Native Sons last Monday was a success both socially and financially. The ball room was crowded, while the auditory reserved for spectators was jammed. The music too was most excellent. Those posted in such matters say there are but two orchestras in the state, Parsons in Portland and Toney's at McMinnville. There is some hint that the "Sons" will give another ball along about St. Valentine's day.

It is annoying as well as amusing to the other fellow sometimes to know how new laws effect individuals. A case in point is the new registration law. It provides that every elector must register before he can vote. In registering he has to make oath that he is a qualified elector etc. The County Clerk has to administer this oath. Now the laughing part, J. A. Imbrie is clerk, and can register everyone else but can he do that service for himself? Can he administer an oath to himself? It looks like he is disfranchised.

At the regular meeting of the City Council on Tuesday evening last, warrants were voted on the Light & Water Co., $105.55; Thos. Green, Marshal, $22.00; Interest on bonded indebtedness, $400. A levy of 10 mills was levied on the taxable property of the city. W. S. Walker's petition for a sidewalk on the East side of 7th street from E. to R. track was referred to street committee. The street committee was directed to inspect and report the condition of the plank roadway in the city, and the Marshal will do the same for the sidewalks. This will be done as the preparation for repairs. The Council adjourned till next Monday evening.

The State through Dist. Attorney Cleeton and special counsel, G. H. Durham has commenced ex parte proceedings in the estate of August Genta, decd. Genta died about Dec. 1897, leaving an estate that is now worth about $1200. The deceased left a wife and three children and a share alike to his three sons August, Henry and Edward. After diligent enquiry neither of these can be found, and it is not known whether they or any of their heirs are now living. S. A. Durham was named in the will to be executor of the estate. On his death E. A. Knotts was appointed. He now wants to close up the estate so as to be discharged and takes this method of doing it.

Mr. Koch, how much are those three hogs worth that hang on the back of your pig? That is the question that is being asked. That is averaging over $13.00 each. That is even better than sheep at $6.00 per head. And so it is. Only wheat is cheap this year and when fed to hogs, it is better than shipping even by the Astoria proposition. Mr. Koch after talking as above remarked further on the profit of hog raising. He stated that the hogs above mentioned were but one year old and had all the first of their lives lived in the pasture. Then they went into the stable field and then into the pen for the finishing touches. Mr. Koch likes to take hogs from the pasture and stable field when the paunch is greatly distended and feed roots, carrots, beets and the like cooked, with some mill feed, the latter to be increased as the season advances. Pork thus made is economical and of the best grade.

A MYSTERIOUS DEATH

Bob Cornelius was Found Dead Near his Home Friday Last

BEEN DEAD TEN DAYS

The Coroner's Jury Have Not Yet Brought in a Verdict—Was Buried Sunday.

The dead body of Bob Cornelius who had been missing for a week was found last Friday morning about a hundred rods from the residence of H. H. Hall who lives a few miles north of Glenora. The cause of death is shrouded somewhat in mystery through no one supposes that a crime has been committed. The verdict of the Coroner's jury has not yet been returned. Bob was about 25 years of age, and married. His wife is a daughter of Harry Hall. The young folks with their baby, aged a year, were visiting there. Bob had not been well for several months, being troubled with rheumatism. The disease had become chronic. Last summer he worked in the logging camps of Wash., Ore., and did well, but as the damp season came on his aches became unbearable and he had to leave the woods. His bodily condition laid heavily on his mind. He was last in Hillsboro on the 15th of December. That day he went out to Mr. Hall's where his wife and child were. These he dearly loved. On Wednesday forenoon, December 20, he kissed his child and left the house taking the road leading to Glenora. On the bridge spanning the creek he was met by Mr. Hall's son, Bob's brother-in-law. The boy asked him where he was going. Bob replied, "Just for a stroll." This was the last time he was seen alive. His continued absence caused great anxiety though it was thought at first that he might have gone to the logging camp as there had been some talk on that topic, but no letters being received the family of the missing man began to use the telephone and telegraph. Not hearing of him, fears for his safety were entertained. On Friday morning I. B. Darby and Edmund Cornelius, a brother, met on the bridge where Bob was last seen. Talking the matter over the two men decided to examine a pasture across the creek from the house, not expecting to find the body, but hoping to find his tracks which might be an indication that he had turned and gone over the mountain toward the Columbia river. They did find some tracks though they were made days before. They were encouraged to follow them. Sometimes they could see them and again all trace was lost. Finally as the two men side by side pushed through the young fir trees seeking but not expecting to find the body lay at full length on the ground, abdomen and chest next to the east, face turned so that one side of his cold pillow and arms and hands extended along the body. His hat was on the ground behind him where it had dropped when the body pitched forward. There was good evidence of a struggle on the ground after he had fallen. What caused his death? It might have been paralysis of the heart caused by rheumatism. It might have been a quick poison. If the latter, then it was taken in a fit of melancholy when the poor man could not exercise the strong will for self preservation that most of us have. No letters have been found since that time. A few scattered scraps were found in the path that he might have dropped, but these, torn from a cheap tablet had lain long until they are but little better that pulp. There are a few figures readable but no letters of any value. The remains were buried in the Tualatin Plains Presbyterian cemetery on Sunday last.

The premises had not been occupied for many years but as empty dwellings are few in Beaverton a tenant had taken the place to clean up for a temporary residence. Mrs. P. Boscow was taken ill with a stroke of paralysis Wednesday

ONLY ONE SIDE AFFECTED

Mr. Boscow was Taken Sick With Nervous Prostration Late in the Evening.

The home of Peter Boscow was saddened last Wednesday when Mrs. Boscow suffered a stroke of paralysis of the right side of her body. She had been an assembly of subdued joy and gladness was turned to sympathetic sorrow. Those of the ladies not required for nurses quietly retired and the before happy home was left under a dark shadow. When her husband, Peter Boscow, was notified he hastened to her to take up his vigil. The affliction coming so sudden and unexpected he was prostrated by a nervous shock. The intensity of this however lasted but a short time. The attack would not be considered serious only it is the second one that has occurred within six months. A recovery this time is expected to be slower than before. Both patients were much improved yesterday.
