OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY

FRIDAY, JUNE, 8, 1900.

The opposition has been beaten many times and survived. We ought to be able to stand defeat once.

The Oregonian of yesterday indulges in this one remark: We may not all agree as to how it happened; but we know what happened.

Some of the old wheel-horses of the "unions" study the election returns in this county and wonder why they did not have a seat in the band wagon.

Had the "unions" supposed it possible to score a success this time the nominations made in April would have been somewhat different from what they were.

The republicans, the G. O. P. went snipe hunting last Monday, but on Tuesday morning when it began to be light enough to see they found themselves holding the sack.

Mr. Tongue's plurality this year is almost 1000 more than it was two years ago. His record on financial legislation disturbed his republican supporters far less than it did his fusionist opponents.

Two years hence republicans will see the difference between having a majority on the election board and having a minority. There will be some other things quite different from what they have been. For the better? Well, that will be easier answered later on.

The democrats in 1897 had it in their power to enter the house of representatives at Salem, and organize it for business. It was their duty to do so, but they stayed out. Now, will the men elected in Washington county last Monday stay out and again prevent organization?

The next legislature will have a republican majority. The caucus will be used for its legitimate purpose. Republicans will attend it. The standard republican who develops most strength will be nominated. He will be elected on the first ballot, when the senatorial problem will be solved.

The Southern Pacific Company is doing a good deal of work on the road from Woodburn to Natron, and has 65 Japanese at work near Shelburn. They are practically rebuilding the line, and are taking out all old ties and putting in new ones, which have been put through the bernatizing plant and are supposed to be good for a number of years' service.

In 1896, Congressman Tongue beat Vanderburg by a plurality of 73 votes. In 1898 he beat Veatch by 2022 votes. This year he leads by 3000 or more. This speaks well for both Mr. Tongue and his supporters. The first because he has worth which he exercises, and the second, his people have wit enough to recognize a good representative when they see him.

The Chinese question is more critical. The Boxers continue their rioting. Another American warship has been ordered to the Chinese disturbed waters. Japan objects to the landing of Russian troops in China, and is reported to be concentrating her fighting squadrons. It is proposed to put all the fighting squadrons of the foreign nations under the command of one admiral, but the name of the commander is not suggested.

Monday's election was the most stubbornly contested of any held in this city for years. The fate of the clerk, recorder, commissioner and congressman hung on the returns of each belated precinct. At the time of going to press, with complete returns from all precincts except Dusty, Alsea, Blodgett and King's Valley, indications pointed to a majority for Tongue in this county of from 30 to 50. As usual tne republicans have elected the legislative ticket, and the lucrative offices have gone to the democrats.—Corvallis Times.

The Oregonian makes a mistake when it charges the defeat of the republican legislative ticket to the McBride influence. The defeat rather is due to the men, who, heretofore, have acted with the Corbett-Simon management, and are now utterly disgusted with their methods. Those are the men who did the work, for if they had voted as they did two years ago, republican candidates would have been elected as they were in 1898. To further prove that McBride did not do it, note the vote of Columbia county, McBride's home. Had Senator McBride or his friends refused support to the ticket, Cornelius, for joint senator, would have been beaten. Yet McBride's own county is the only place in the district where Cornelius got a majority. The Oregonian should revise its style of criticism.

ELECTION AND AFTERWARD.

The republican party was beaten in this county last Monday, but there is no loss of republican voters. There is no change of political principles. The slump is to be attributed to local conditions. A good many republicans got an idea that the party in this county was being organized from Multnomah council chambers and they determined to show positive displeasure. It is only a repetition of what occurred about 18 years ago, only then Mitchell was the boss. Washington county will not be dictated to by Portland bosses. It was not so this year, but the voters got that idea which amounted to the same thing. The party in Multnomah county has suffered the same kind of a defeat that causes us to smart here. The Oregonian commenting on it says:

"In the result in Multnomah county there is a lesson that is sufficiently clear. In a county where the dominant party possesses an ambitious, powerful and disgruntled faction that is ready at all times to combine with the opposition, it is the part of wisdom to pursue a conciliatory course toward such faction. The Oregonian suggested such policy, at the beginning of the contest for the nominations this year. It was not heeded. What has followed is matter of course."

The advice was good for Multnomah county, but in truth was not needed here. It was truly not heeded there, not even by the Oregonian itself, for it has viciously wielded the lash since the conventions. Men will not be driven. They will carry out their policies on some other line. The defeat of the Multnomah people probably means the withdrawal of Corbett from the senatorial race this fall. In this county his candidacy ought to have cut no figure because no one was pledged to his support. Neither did Mr. McBride's candidacy influence any one here. There is no one here who needs scolding. No one must be scolded. But as republicans we must plan together for victory next time. There is no one in the county, no republican, who does not desire the success of the party, but different individuals may desire to bring the thing about by different methods. We must be willing to give up our individual ways of doing things and concede to our associates the privilege of advising in party councils. Above all must trading combinations be abandoned. "You tickle me and I'll tickle you" is not good politics. Two years ago when there was a break in the lines, the INDEPENDENT said:

"The party can be certain of nothing in this county without the aid of these votes that have been given to the opposition in this one instance. It is idle to charge that they are populists. They are not. They are for sound money. Some hasty spirits under the smart of defeat have permitted words to escape which should remain unsaid We need every republican vote for future elections just as we have in past contests."

What was true then is true now, and we must proceed at once to gather up our strength for future effort.

THE AFRICAN WAR.

The British column under Roberts in South Africa has been uniformly successful. Johannesburg the mining metropolis has been occupied. Pretoria the capital has been captured, though the Boer army, the real objective, is yet at large. Buller seems to be having trouble at Laings neck. A three days armistice has been agreed to by him with General Botha. This may mean surrender or it may mean burying of the dead.

UP SALT RIVER.

Away back in 40's, when Henry Clay was at the height of his fame and popularity, there was an important election campaign on in Kentucky. The whigs were in the majority, though the democrats were crowding them closely. Clay was one of the principal campaign speakers, and his oratory was in demand everywhere. At one place upon the Ohio river, the whig cause was in great danger, and it was necessary for effective work to be done. To this danger point Clay himself was assigned. The speaking was to occur the day before election, but Clay was far down the river with no conveyance but a row boat. The democrats knew the effect of Clay's speech, and that unless they could break its force, they would be beaten. Clay had to go up the river in an open row boat, but being no oarsman he had to hire a man. Now, the party was an Irishman, and a democrat to boot. The dem's got to the ear of the boatman with logic quite as silvery as Clays stump speeches. "Bedad and Oi'l take kare of Mister Clay." On the way up the mouth of Salt creek was reached. Pondering on public affairs, Clay did not notice that they were no longer on the broad Ohio, but on a smaller stream. The Irishman was greatly agitated some hours later, when they did not arrive at their destination. It was too late, though to retrace their steps and go up the right branch, wherefore Clay had to swallow his wrath, and his friends had to endure their disappointment.

Next day, at the election, the whigs were defeated. It was a perfect landslide. The democrats were highly elated, of course, and guyed the whigs without mercy. They would call from street-side to street-side: "Where is Mr. Clay? Why, have you not heard? He has gone up Salt river." Ever since that day in the west, going up "Salt river" is the jeering which defeated candidates have dinned into their ears. We have heard it a time or two this week.

MR. HAINES, TO HIS FRIENDS.

To my many and loyal supporters in the campaign just closed, I take this means of publicly expressing to you my sincere appreciation of your earnest and untiring effort in my behalf. Although my opponent was successful, I, nevertheless, feel under deep and lasting obligations, and will ever appreciate the confidence you reposed in me.

E. W. HAINES.

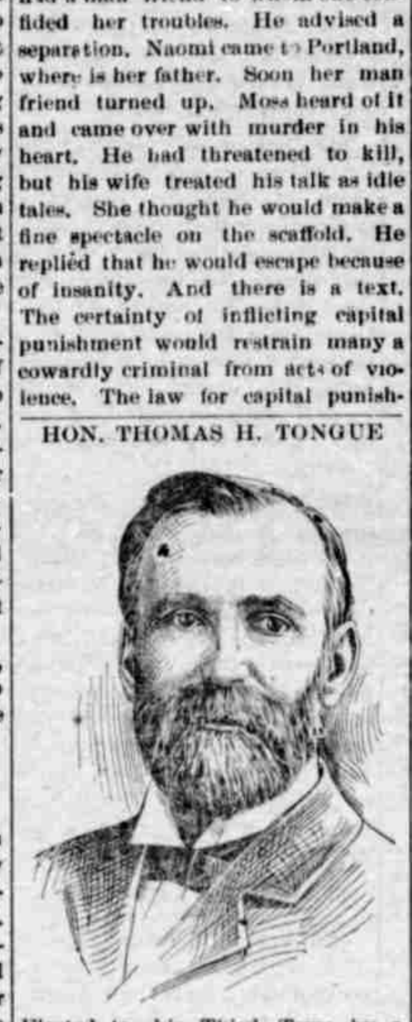
STATE PRESS.

This is written while the vote of Oregon is being taken but it does not require a prophet to predict that the returns will show that Oregon has rolled up a big majority for expansion, sound money and good times. The head center of Bryanism and anti-expansion in the east will look in vain to this state for endorsement of their national policy. There will not be a grain of comfort in the result for them.

Three or four men cannot own a political party, treat it as a property and do as they please with it.—Oregonian.

Riley L. Moss, a man of uncertain character enticed his wife, Naomi Clute Moss in Willamette Park, Portland, on Thursday evening of last week and shot her through the heart. The report of his pistol was heard, and searchers hunted for the victim, but her remains were not found till next morning. Moss was suspected, but he was not found until Saturday evening when his suicidal pistol shot was heard in a lodging where his lifeless body was found a few minutes later. Moss married Naomi Clute last fall and took her to Tacoma. She seems not to have been a first class woman, while he was anything but a good man. His occupation was gambling, hence his wife's support was precarious. She had a man friend to whom she confided her troubles. He advised a separation. Naomi came to Portland, where is her father. Soon her man friend turned up. Moss heard of it and came over with murder in his heart. He had threatened to kill, but his wife treated his talk as idle tales. She thought he would make a fine spectacle on the scaffold. He replied that he would escape because of insanity. And there is a text. The certainty of inflicting capital punishment would restrain many a cowardly criminal from acts of violence. The law for capital punishment is not so much for chastisement of the criminal as for protection of society by its deterrent effect on the lawless.

HON. THOMAS H. TONGUE



Elected to his Third Term by a Plurality of over 3000 votes.

"Do you want another proof that congress is controlled by the trusts. A joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution empowering congress to regulate the trusts was last week introduced in congress. The resolution required a two-thirds vote, which it failed to get. This shows the power of the trust." Why did not the Oregon Independent, Guild's paper, not Tongue's, which published the above, go a step further and say that not a populist, nor a democrat, save two, voted for the amendment. The republicans voted for it in a body, except four. Tongue voted for the amendment What is that about a half-told truth.

The election returns indicate that Congressman Tongue has carried every county in his district except Linn, and is elected by over 3000 plurality, at least by an increased majority of 500. Congressman Moody, Supreme Judge C. E. Wolverton and Dairy Commissioner J. W. Bailey are also elected by increased majorities. It is believed the full returns will show the heaviest republican vote ever cast in Oregon. It is a notable republican victory and demonstrates beyond question that this state will cast a solid vote against Bryanism and calamity at the presidential election in November.—Albany Herald.

The republican legislative ticket in Multnomah county has been defeated. The result, without doubt, means that Corbett will not be in politics this fall and winter. If that is the result matters will be much simplified for the republican party for the next campaign. Mitchell was retired four years ago, and now if Mr. Simon will retire some of the political managers in Multnomah county there will be advantage to him two years hence.
