Arthur Fonton, well known in Hillsboro was a passenger last week on the Princeton stage which was run off the grade by the fancy speeding of the driver. In the mix up that resulted Fonton was seriously injured and having the thigh bone of his leg broken, he was taken to the hospital where the bone was set. H. W. Coates, Sec. Phoenix Oil and Fuel Company, of California publishes a letter to the Hillsboro Headlight, in which he claims that in his judgment petroleum terms denieries the territory of Tillamook and Clatsop counties. He finds contradictions, studies and contradictions of the new laws. He also has met some of good repute who have seen oil seeps in those counties. The editor of the Headlight, however, does not lose his head at this prospect of new wealth.

A professional beggar was in town this week, a woman of mature years. She had her plaint printed on a card in both English and German. By it her victim was informed that the applicant for charity is an old woman, having several grand-children dependent on her for support. Orally she states that her home is Oswego, Clackamas county. She states that the county will not help her and when she was asked why she did not apply to the City Board of Charities in Portland, she flew into a great rage, from all of which it is fair to assume that she is a fake and unworthy.

The chief wolf returned from his summer wanderings last week to the winter haunts of the tribe. On Thursday morning of last week he stalked through the streets signifying the signs of the pack that there was work in the jungle that night, a whelp was to be inducted into the mysteries of wolf life. The pack met at the trying place. A high noon was present. Of late there had been few meetings hence some more than routine business must be done. After a few trial whelps had been inducted to the howl of the wolves made a dash for the jungle. Their tracks at House's wagon shop were plain, and when the Methodist church was further up second street a rabbit was overtaken and such sign was left at Gardner's blacksmith shop. At Lamkin's undertaking parlors there was a regular howl and if wolves ever laugh they must have done it then. Here they were at the crossing of a creek gave warning that the paths of the jungle were abandoned and their most secret dens occupied. With trailing tails they sought their lairs.

That is one way of writing up an episode that happened last Thursday night whose memory brings the blush of shame to every cheek that was engaged. Here is another way of telling the story. Thursday night five or six men, not boys, but full grown men who have worn carefully trimmed beards for ten years, men from the 400, started out for an all night carousal on Washington street by focusing up with cordwood and lumber, the sidewalk in front of House's wagon shop. At the Methodist church the entrance was blocked by a four horse drag harrow. The same tactics were employed at Gardner's blacksmith shop. But it was Lamkin's undertaking parlors where all law and decency was thrown to the wind. They broke down the door, went in and arranged burial caskets so as to bring to mind the most ghastly suggestions possible. That they might be married, considered. There was damage. After visiting this place the party evidently dispersed and went home. The door of the penitentiary swung open but no information seems to have been filed where it is supposed that damages have been paid.

Parties as yet unknown planted another dynamite mine under the Dilley Mill dam last Saturday night and exploded it. A bunch of about five or six feet was made and the water in the pond was lowered several inches. This dam was first built about 1840 and was built by Win O. Gibson, and the mill that was built by it was known for and near to Gibson's mill. The floor that was made there went to feed citizens in all parts of Washington county. After a time Messrs. Apin bought the property and improved it, but as time brought greater things for Washington county industries, they found the water power too uncertain especially during low water in the fall and extreme high water during winter wherefore they moved their plant to Corvallis where it is operated with convenience to transportation. S. P. Co. track running to the mill-door. The old site there was practically abandoned. Notwithstanding this move the property rights of Messrs. Apin were recognized by the landowners whose holdings are situated on the Tualatin above the dam. They have clubbed together and bought the dam property with a view of removing the obstruction and furnishing better drainage for farm lands. They will receive $1,000 for the property. The McLewis sawmill people objected to the removal. The sawmill did not use the power made by the dam, but the back water made a convenient pond for floating logs to mill. The circuit court was appealed to a temporary injunction allowed. The question was then considered by the court this week to determine whether or not the injunction be made perpetual. Restless parties refused to be restrained. On Wednesday night of last week a dynamite mine was planted in the dam but was not properly set so that the explosion was a failure. The sawmill people then set a watch. Nothing more was done till Saturday night when another mine was loaded and this time exploded as above detailed. In the almost 50 years that the dam has stood the bed of the Tualatin has been filled with drift, mud and silt so that in truth the bed of the river has been raised almost to the top of the dam. It can be sluiced out however and the water lower eight or more feet so that there will be thousands of acres of good farm land reclaimed.

The patient was operated upon and the day of death was to be making a satisfactory recovery. Bert was one of eleven grand-children, of Calvin Adams, Hillsboro and the first death that has occurred among the younger generation.
