PORTLAND-NEHALEM RAILROAD.

Hon. John McCracken, Geo. T. Myers and Wm. R. ed, Pres. Vice Pres., and Sec., of the recently incorporated Portland-Nehalem Railroad Company have made a lengthy report to their Board of Directors. This report was published last Monday. It deals with the whole subject of the proposed enterprise.

The routes are discussed first. One is the Tualatin Valley to Oswego. One commencing at Hillsboro, and extending into the Nehalem country the traffic being taken at Hillsboro by the Southern Pacific Company, and the other down the river by the North Pacific to Linton thence straddling the hill and going through the north part of the county. True the Cornelius gap route is hinted at, but not seriously considered. The Tualatin Valley route is not chosen because of the expense of bridging the Willamette at Oswego, and building down on the east side a distance of seven or eight miles, paralleling the S. P. in order to get into Union Depot. If a stop is made at Oswego, logs and lumber will have to be rafted to Portland by the river, and a steamboat will have to be operated to carry freight that distance of seven miles. Passengers might be given to the S. P. Co. at Oswego.

The Hillsboro terminus is abandoned with a word because the S. P. Co. will make no truckage concessions. This was Mr. Huntington's dictum, which seems remarkable since Pres. Huntington died months before the Nehalem Company was organized. Pres. Hay the present progressive and wide awake head of the S. P. Co. seems not to have been seen. Another reason why the aid of the Southern Pacific lines is rejected is the fear that when once on a S. P. track traffic will be taken south without ever visiting Portland.

The Northern route though is ideal. The N. P. Co. gives free truckage rights, as long as the Nehalem road remains independent, from Linton to Portland. Logs are to be dumped into the river at Linton six miles below the city and towed up as a raft. It may be remarked that towing up stream 6 miles seems preferred to towing down stream the same distance from Oswego. Then with the terminus at Linton freight can be delivered to the O. R. & Co. just across the river at St. Johns, whence it would journey into Eastern Oregon without ever being seen in Portland. The report recognizes the danger of giving the N. P. Co. the freight lest it be taken down the river and to Tacoma, but reasons that it is the wish of the expected-to-be bond holders that the Northern route be chosen.

What Portland ought to do is to dig up the $635,000 and let the expected-to-be bond holders go to, buying for that purpose a through ticket without stop over privileges. The company proposes to build 43 miles of road before November next. This is estimated to cost $15,000 per mile or a total of $645,000 or by reason of some savings from Linton to Portland over the N. P. line a little less. The earnings of the road are estimated at $500,000 per year for ten years by which time it is expected that the hills of the Nehalem will be denuded of timber. How these hills tops are to furnish traffic for the further life of the road is not told. The expected-to-be bond holders have not furnished the money yet for construction. Their agents are examining the proposition. If they furnish the money the road will be built this summer, 43 miles of it. If not, well.

But the INDEPENDENT is not shaken in what has before been stated, that Portland wants no railroad from the Nehalem that strikes the Willamette or Columbia below the city, but rather let it come in from the south through the Tualatin Plains and the Tualatin Valley. The fertile farm lands will furnish traffic long years after the hills have been stripped of timber. It will be a long day and middling cool before the farmers of Washington county will on wagons haul produce up hill to the backbone railroad that it may be dumped at Linton by the side of the horse slaughter house.

PROSPERITY ON THE FARM.
 When the farmer reads that the value of the share capital of thirty-four leading American railway companies has increased over 620,000,000 within the past six months, according to Stock Exchange quotations, he may ask why farm property shows no such enhancement. The same question is suggested when the aggregate exports from the United States for nine months of the present fiscal year are reported to be $1,140,170,728, or $85,000,000 increase over last year, with a favorable annual trade balance exceeding $500,000,000. Farming is so vast an interest that its current condition cannot be expressed in figures. It is not capitalized in stock and bonds, and its values are not quotable from day to day. But any intelligent farmer can make a comparison of the general state of his industry with what it was six or eight years ago, and will then realize the immense gain that has occurred. In fact, the activity among the railways and the rapid growth of foreign exports largely rest on farm production.

It is stated by the chief statistician of the agricultural section of the twelfth census that the net additions to farm resources in the ten years between 1890 and 1900 exceeded the value of all farm investments in 1890. As the writer referred to, puts the case: "The increased wealth of our farmers, as the result of their last ten years' labor, equals the farm wealth of the nation reported as the outcome of their toil and economies from the settlement at Jamestown to the middle of the nineteenth century." Advances on the Stock Exchange fade into a small affair beside a colossal increment like that. In the United States to-day there are at least 5,700,000 farms, or about one to every thirteen inhabitants. In 1850 the number has increased 1,150,000 and in the same time farm wealth has expanded by not less than $6,500,000,000. It the twelve adjacent states of Missouri, Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas the number of farms has increased since 1890 from 1,923,882 to 2,220,000. These states added $2,500,000,000 to their farm wealth between 1890 and 1890, and a still larger sum in the last ten years.

The government is not unmindful of the vast import of agriculture. Congress has endowed agricultural colleges in every state and territory. These institutions represent a value of $53,000,000 and their income is $6,000,000. Their students last year numbered 31,658. The annual national appropriation for experimental stations is $789,000. When American farmers note what is going on in intensive farming, irrigation, cattle raising, improvement and preservation of products, management of soils, betterment of facilities to reach markets and new uses for waste products they will see that their industry is truly the most expansive as well as the greatest. Though the population of the country should country should continue to double, inside of forty years there can be no doubt that the farmers of this country, the most scientific and effective in the world, will meet all demands and be the main reliance for foreign nations when their own production runs short.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY A NIGHT SEEMING.

Just now it does not occur that any president or any ruler in ancient or modern times has made a tour of his country that can compare with the one President McKinley is now making. His itinerary is from East to West, through Virginia and Tennessee, South through Mississippi, West through the Southern parts of Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, North through California and Oregon, East through Washington, Idaho, into Montana thence South through Eastern Idaho into Utah thence East again through Colorado and Kansas thence Northeastly through Missouri and Illinois and East through Indiana and Ohio into New York thence Southeast through Pennsylvania whence a short South journey through Maryland returns the pilgrim to the Capital on the Potomac. It is a six weeks tramp when from 40 to 60 miles per hour is made. Truly never was the like done before. Edward VII, nor William, of Germany, nor the President of France, because there is not room for the maneuvers within their boundaries. The Car has the space, but not the transportation. And the people, they are united and as one man give honor to His Excellency as he pauses for a brief home at the stations.

The president has not declined to address the waiting thousands that have greeted him, and what he said presents a true picture of the condition of the country. What he said at El Paso is a good example of the utterances at other places. A quotation is given:

"My fellow-citizens, if there was ever any doubt about our being a united people, if you could travel with me 2800 miles from the Capitol at Washington to the city of El Paso, that doubt would have been completely dispelled. (Applause.) There never was such unity in the United States as there is at this hour. (Applause.) There was never so much for a nation of 75,000,000 of people to be so proud of as at this hour. (Applause.)"

We have sent our army and our navy to distant seas and they have only added glory to our flag. (Great applause.) They have brought no shame on the American name. (Applause.) We sent them to China to rescue our beleaguered representatives, and they did the work, and did it magnificently, with the approval of the civilized world. (Continued applause.) But it is not in the art of war that we take our greatest pride. We are not a warlike people. We never go to war unless we have to make peace. (Great applause.) Our pride is in the arts of peace, in material and intellectual development, in the growth of our country, in the advancement of our people in civilization, in the advancement of our people in civilization, in arts, in the sciences and in manufactures. Here we are on the border line between the United States and another great republic, and on this side of the line we have 35 American soldiers, and on that side of the line there is less than 150 Mexican soldiers. So that we are dwelling in peace and amity and causing 'peace on earth and good will to men.' (Great applause.) We want to settle our differences, if we ever have any, with the powers of the world by arbitration. (Applause.) We want to exhaust every peaceable means for settlement before we go to war. (Applause.) And while we have authority to raise 100,000 troops, the necessity does not exist for that number, and we do not propose to raise but 75,000. (Great applause.) So don't be alarmed about militarism (laughter and applause) or imperialism (great applause.) We know no imperialism in the United States except the imperialism of a sovereign people. (Great applause.) Having said this much, I only want to again express the pleasure which all of us feel at having been received so cordially and hospitably by this people, and to thank you for having given us on Sunday as quiet and respectful a time as though we had spent it at home." (Continued applause.)

The real effect of the duties on iron imposed by the United States during ten years from 1880 to 1890 was to protect the metal workers of Europe in their control of all other markets, in the supply of machinery, tools, engines, and even in part meeting the demand of the United States.—Edward Atkinson in Engineering magazine. Very Well. What has been the result? We developed our resources while we waited till now we enter the markets of the world as a robust man and capture them from the protected Europeans, and our strength enables us to hold them.

As long as $400,000,000 worth of merchandise is imported that can either be grown or manufactured here, there is need of a protective tariff. Schulmerich Bros., have blasting powder for sale.
