SHIPS AT SEA.

The ocean carrying trade of the United States was sadly crippled during the civil war in 1861-5, and by reason of the change from wool to iron the industry of ship building did not rapidly recover when peace was made. For years congress has been asked to do something for American shipping. Some asked for discriminating tariff on merchandise carried in American bottoms. An other plan has been to allow a subsidy to American built ships. That was the idea adopted in a bill known as the "ship subsidy bill" before the last congress. A while ago this aid was asked because it was claimed that ships can not be built as economically in the United States as in England or Germany, that is steel ships, the kind now favorites. But by the great strides made during the last few years by our great iron foundries and rolling mills, it has been quite satisfactorily shown that we can more than compete with the foreigners. Indeed American ship builders have got contracts in the open market from foreign nations. Because it has been shown quite conclusively that we can duplicate foreign built ships for the same or less money than they cost, the opponents of the subsidy bill assert that no subsidy is needed. The friends of the bill reply that the subsidy is not needed so much to foster ship building as it is to equalize their sailing and steaming when built. It is pointed out that J. Pierpont Morgan who recently bought the Layard steamship line does not sail his ships under the American flag, but let them continue to carry the British flag.

Discussing with a gentleman quite well posted in the comparative cost of operating the same sized transport he gave these figures. A British ship in the Alaska trade is sailed by the following enumerated officers and crew who receive the wages stated:

1 master, wages per mo.	100
1 mate " " "	60
1 purser " " "	60
1 engineer, thought to receive	100
1 assistant engineer	50
28 men, firemen, cabin crew etc $20 each	560
Total	$ 930

The American ship carries.

1 master	$ 200
2 pilots, each 150	300
1 first mate	100
1 second mate	75
1 third mate	75
1 chief engineer	165
2 assistant engineer 150 each	300
1 purser	100
1 freight clerk	75
1 cheif steward	100
1 assistant steward	60
57 men distributed as cooks coal passers, firemen, sailors, etc at $40 each	2280
Total	$3830

Our informant then asked if it is reasonable to suppose that the American ship can be expected to compete with a British transport whose pay roll for labor alone is almost $3000 per month less. He was met with the suggestion the American canoe is carrying too many high priced men. "Discharge them and cut down expenses." But that cannot be done since the American navigation laws require that many men to be carried, and congress refuses to amend the law holding that the number is not too great for the safety of ship and passengers. It is to our credit that we are more careful of human life entrusted to common carriers be they of sea or land than other nations. To compete with foreign ships the Americans must carry bigger cargoes, make better time or get more money for what they do. The subsidy is to even up on the latter condition.

Some months ago it was attempted to import Russian sugar into the United States. The appraisers at New York held that the sugar came from a bounty paying nation and hence was taxed an additional duty. Russia retaliated by imposing the maximum duty on several classes of our exports but this apparantly has failed to scare the Americans, wherefore the Russians are trying it again. An additional tax has been put on some of our chemicals and on our bicycles. Sec. Gage maintains an even temper, informing the Russian minister that he has no authority to levy duties or to remit. That must be done by congress beginning in the house of representatives.

There was shipped from New York to Europe yesterday $1,250,000 in gold.

B. F. Harvey, of Eugene, has sued the Daily Oregonian, of Portland, for libel and placed the amount of damage at $25,000. The action will be tried at the June term of the Lane county circuit court if the issue can be made up by that time. The complaint sets out for cause of action an editorial that was published in the Sunday Oregonian, of Dec. 2, 1900. It is one of that paper's hottest roasters, and was written of the two men, who some months before had enticed a girl into a box car at Cottage Grove, and carried her to Rossburg. Both men were arrested. One was tried at Albany and convicted of rape and sentenced to five years in the pen. The other, B. F. Harvey was tried at Rossburg and acquitted. The Oregonian had uncomplimentary remarks for both men and did not hold the term of the sentence in the highest estimation No names are mentioned in the article but Harvey thinks he was meant, and that what was said is libelous.

The discuesion of the possibility of forcing the United States to its industrial knees by inaugurating a retaliatory policy against American Tariffs and trade goes on in Europe, but with little prospects for the discovery of a feasable plan for putting the idea into operation. A review of the situation convinces the best of the Europeans that retaliation would be dangerous, since America easily could precipitate a financial panic on the Continent by forcing collection of the large sums standing to its credit there. In other words, the United States has a wining hand in readiness for any commercial game which Europe may try to play. Humiliating as the situation may be, the world must accept the industrial and commercial supremacy of the United States as an unavoidable fact.—Troy "Record."

The council complains of a paragraph published last week when the INDEPENDENT thought that Mr. Gates' proposition to abide by the findings of a single arbitrator ought to have been accepted. The council replies that the contract under which the city is now furnished with water and lights is about to expire and that there is not time to experiment with new plans. The ordinance passed ten years ago provides how the city shall buy, and the council must proceed that way. The INDEPENDENT was aware of those things but thought the council could afford to cut the red tape that bound up the proceedings, but if there is no money to be saved the long way around may as well be traveled.

The striking machinists demanded a nine-hour workday, with pay for ten hours at a rate 12½ per cent higher than the scale hitherto obtaining. Obviously this demanded grant lessens a factory's production one-tenth while increasing its expenditure one-eight. The extreme terms demanded nullify in effect the possibility of the machinists getting the wages increase they demand

The North Yamhill Record thinks it a most dangerous precedent to adjudge that Congress has the power to govern our territories. If it is wrong for Congress to goverm territories, where should the power to govern be lodged? It seems reasonable that some one or some authority be charged with the duty of maintaining order.
