COUNTERVAILING DUTIES.

There may be some things that Sec. Gage has done that deserve criticism but the imposing of countervailing duties on Russian sugar is not one of them.

If Sec. Gage holds firmly to his purpose and with dignity stands where he has stepped he cannot be worsted in this tariff tangle with Russia, and will bring to his support even the exporting machinery merchants or they will show themselves to be despicable selfish.

OREGON HOMEWARD BOUND PENNANT.

The Crew of the Battleship Oregon while yet in Asiatic waters made a large pennant intended to be expressive of their great joy at coming home. It was used only on that trip to the State and to that end selected a committee of three; chiefs Yoman, Weir and Morris and Chief Quartermaster Brower, to carry the piece of bunting to Salem and there present it to the State thru the office of the Governor.

"I may be permitted to say, however," he continued, "that the colors which we are here to present are the longest colors ever flown, and they were flown from the best battleship that ever floated. (Cheers.) No other battleship has performed such wonderful deeds as has the Oregon.

"The Oregon has nothing in her history that is in the least detrimental to her reputation. While she met with an accident, that is nothing to her discredit. It was reported that when the Oregon struck upon a rock and her very existence was threatened, a number of the crew left the ship and went ashore. This is not true. A sailor never leaves his ship, except under orders, and I may tell you that if the Oregon had gone beneath the waters in a foreign sea, every member of her crew would have gone down with her. (Cheers.) We have to regret, however, that by that accident the Oregon was prevented from adding one more achievement to already magnificent record.

"We came to present these colors in pursuance of the unanimous vote of the crew of the Oregon. This presentation is an act of the crew alone, but we bring with us the compliments of our captain and crew to your Governor and your state. We leave these colors in your charge, knowing that you will care for them as faithfully as would the crew of the battleship Oregon; and we trust that whenever the people of the State of Oregon behold these colors they will remember with kindness the battleship over which they were flown and the crew who are proud to leave them in your charge.

The colors were then brought to the rostrum and amid the wildest cheering were laid upon the speaker's desk in front of Governor Geer. Governor Geer responded to the presentation as follows:

"In the name of the people of Oregon, I accept these colors of the magnificent battleship you represent, and guarantee that in the years to come they will be treasured among its most sacred mementoes, to be transmitted to the care and admiration of those who are to come after us in the active duties of life. The occasion, with the thoughts it inspires, recalls the beginning of the Spanish War, whose birthplace was in Havana harbor on February 15, 1898, when the battleship Maine was destroyed and 266 gallant American seamen lost their lives while at their posts of duty beneath the spreading folds of the Stars and Stripes. What followed need not be rehearsed here. There was but one voice among all classes of the citizens of the Republic. To the question as to what was the duty of the hour, there was but one answer and but one political party. 'Remember the Maine' became the National shibboleth, and remained such until the Spanish Navy was utterly destroyed and the government it represented stood penitent and humiliated at our, asking forgiveness and paying heavily for its brutal treachery.

"The pages of the world's history devoted to naval warfare nowhere contain a record for magnificent performance which equals that of the noble ship you represent here today. In fact, its record may never be equaled in the future. Floating peacefully in the harbor of Puget Sound, with its latest powers, like those of an untried giant, it was summoned to join the Atlantic squadron. It left its anchorage on March 6, and San Francisco, March 19, arriving off the coast of Florida May 26. No other war vessel ever made such a record as this as to distance in so short a time, nor under such romantic circumstances. For weeks at one time no word was heard from the Oregon and considering that the Spanish Government knew of the undertaking and the consequent danger that she might be intercepted by a detachment of the Spanish Navy, the suspense in this country was indescribable. As a whole, the people of the United States have seldom seen a happier hour than when, on the morning of May 26, the gallant Captain Clark telegraphed to President McKinley from one of the ports of Southern Florida: 'The Oregon is here; needs no repairs and is ready for action.' Her subsequent matchless record at Santiago, where she seemed to be in the thickest of the fight on all sides, and by her amazing speed succeeded in overhauling the Brooklyn and forced the Colon's surrender, is a part of history.

"Her trip around the Horn was the longest ever made by a battleship, having made 18,102 miles in 81 days and this time included all necessary stops. The record says that 'the Oregon made a single run of 4726 without making a stop of any kind for any purpose,' and that when she arrived at her destination 'not a screw was loose nor a bolt out of order.'

"The record of the Oregon stands today among the 'fighting machines' of the world, not only unsurpassed, unequalled. There may be greater vessels in the Navy of more recent construction, but if so the proof is yet to be made. The people of Oregon have special reason to be proud of that record, for her career has given added luster to the name of the world over.

"What the providence of God has in store for this Nation no man can tell, but the progressive industry of its people has already placed it in the lead of all other nations, and its relations in dealing with foreign people in every quarter of the globe require a formidable Navy of first class vessels at all times, with such men 'behind the guns' as only America can furnish. We greet you, gentlemen, as such men, or their representatives, and accept these 'homeward-bound' colors of the noble Oregon, which today stands with an unchallenged record as the greatest battleship in the world, with a promise that they will be jealously guarded against loss or destruction. They are an inspiration to patriotism, and while they will recall to the mind of the Grand Army man the stirring times of '61 and '65, when he offered all he had to his country, they will also bring to the recollection of every member of the gallant Second Oregon the burning plains and miasmatic swamps of far-away Luzon.

"The State of Oregon desires to express to you, and through you to the officers and men of the historic ship you represent, its high appreciation of the thoughtful consideration which suggested this remembrance, and you will please accept in return the best wishes of a patriotic people."

LAUNCHING OF THE OREGON.

SAMUEL L. SIMPSON.

Remembering what the battleship has done, Sam Simpson's poem which appears below is really more heroic than it appeared to be when read the day the Oregon ship first took to water. It will arouse more patriotic enthusiasm when read now than was possible then.

O ship, like crested Pallas armed, O bride, the holy God hath charmed, Leap to his strong and proud embrace— In Freedom's squadron take thy place! Northward is shewn of crystal mail, A scarf of cloud upon his breast, Our mountain monarch, Hood, will hail The mighty daughter of the West— And hail, with broad uplifted shield, The sec, thy home and battle-field, While the vast hosts of phalanxes fire Swell the deep song of worshippers.

That brow of prescience wreathed in dreams, The mist through which his grandeur gleams In storm and calm has brooded o'er The hazy fow that erstwhile came And wrought, in tears and blood and flame— So stripes might stream and stars might soar The glory of thy chosen name!

Launched on the golden-gated bay, Be thine a royal bridal day, And with the wave's exultant kiss Comes dreams of oiden Salamis, When Greece was life's white morning star; Come, welcome to a scene like this, The memories of Trafalgar, And Erie's crash of thunder, telling— How Perry's warrior heart was swelling— Come, throbbing through the dusk of years, Deatur's drum-beat in Algiers, And from a hero's frosting lip The whisper, 'Don't give up the ship!'

To greet the nuptials, here behold, While o'er enchanted streams and woods October's misted splendor broods, Our forests lit with lamps of gold, And many a leafy mountain shrine Dashed with the red Autumnal wine— For these a symbol and a sign Of faith serene and trust unshaken.

Oh, swift and strong and terrible! Go forth to guard thy cherished shore Till all thy faithful days are full, Ane War's hoar call is heard no more; Go forth, O wand'rer of the free, And peerless may thy vigil be, Till cape and bay and cliff and crag Flush with the glory of the flag, Triumphant yet of land and sea! And oh, guard well the gleaming strand Of this our fair Arcadian land, Won in the storms of years gone by With drain of heart and wound of hand When men could dare and do and die.

Be worthy of the mystic name These matchless vales and mountains bear, That in the tents of sunset Fame May twine for thee a chaplet fair; And when thy flag shall kiss the breeze On these, our blue Northwestern seas, Lo, white and steaming and soaring high In the vast temple of the sea, As if to solve its mysteries, The peaks our hisping children know A welcoming to thee will glow; Helens to Hood will pass the sign, And Jefferson, with brow benign, Will signal to the Sisters Three That the long watch was not in vain, For lo, upon the radiant main The mailed patrol of Liberty!

Here, at the mighty ocean gate, Columbia, chanting loud, will greet The bodacies of our fleet As from embattled heights the roar Of cannon thrill the kneeling shore, And festal sunshine dreads upon The green, glad vales of Oregon— Thine add our own deep-bosomed state.

Sore Lungs

mean weakened lungs—all caused by a cold and cough. Weak lungs sooner or later mean consumption.

Shiloh's Consumption Cure

will heal and strengthen the lungs, cure cold and stop the cough. "I coughed for years—had hemorrhages. Doctors said I was in last stage of consumption. Had given up all hope. I finally tried Shiloh's and it cured me completely. Am today in perfect health."
