Put away that feather duster. What's the use of sweeping if you are going to throw the dust back on the floor? Get a yard of chem cloth or common quilt lining, hem it, and then you have a duster that is of some use. With it you can wipe up the dirt and shake it out of door. But don't depend on one duster, make two or three, so that they can be put in wash, and you can have a clean one occasionally.

The long expected story by Ralph Connor, author of "Black Elk" and "The Sky Pilot," begins in the July Magazine Number of The Outlook. The first two chapters of "The Man from Glenarry," contain an exciting account of the quarrels of lumbermen in the North American woods, and give promise of the vivid narrative to follow in the successive numbers of The Outlook. ($3 a year. The Outlook Company, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York.)

A prospect in the employ of the Pacific Coal and Oil Development Company sent in last Tuesday a very fine specimen of coal taken from a large vein discovered on Wolf creek a tributary of Dairy creek. The prospect had not had time when he mailed the lump to dig through the vein hence its thickness is unknown. The same is to be said of the quality below the surface. Mr. Wall the company's attorney hopes to have more particulars within the next ten days.

The Fleming Hay rake sold by the Mitchell Lewis & Staver Co., Portland has been used for the first time in this county this season. The machine is billed "hay rake" but our people apply the name "hay buck" and one imaginative hay maker calls it a "go devil." On Jo Hares meadow the implement was used for transporting hay to the baler in the meadow, thus dispensing with wagons. A load is six ordinary shocks of hay. The machine is operated with two horses and their driver. The shock of hay is picked up undisturbed and carried to the barn or stack. It is said that fully 50 tons of hay may be delivered to a baler, stack or barn per day with two horses and a driver. No hay is left in the meadow and a steer turned in to pick up loose straws would, after tramping over the place, return to the gate and mournfully low to get out into the lane where he could get something to eat.

A Baker City news report states that on a farm near that place last Friday, M. L. Gosney who is well known here, had a difficulty with one of his men and had been stabbed with a knife. Gosney found fault with the old man for the way he did his work. This angered the old man so that he viciously attacked Mr. Gosney. The wounds were serious but later advice state that they will probably not prove fatal. The old man claims that the attack was in self defense, but we who have known Gosney from early boyhood can't believe the statement and can hardly understand how it came about that the foreman on the farm scolded.

Taylor Tews had an adventure with his horse a few days ago that was not enjoyable. Mr. Tews drives a horse to a light wagon. At the time in mind he had got out to hitch the horse when a creaking noise frightened the brute which started to run. Mr. Tews grasped at the lines but missed a firm hold. He was thrown under the wagon so that a wheel passed over his body from the knees to his head. There are several bad bruises and a few cuts on his legs. Boring the pain though, the accident was not serious. The boy who remained in the wagon succeeded in guiding the horse into a fence where the stampede was stopped.

Engineer, L. C. Walker, of Forest Grove went to Portland last Monday morning to, from there, proceed to the line of Columbia river and Yakama railroad where he will join the surveyors. This company is surveying a line from Vancouver, Washington to Yakama. Mr. Walker will be in the map and plat office.

Mr. Max Burgholzer whose land takes in a short stretch of the Upper Nehalem River in this county reports a petroleum seepage of which he has known for several years. At ordinary stages of water the oil discharges below the surface and is not visible, but in the summer when the water in the river is at its low stage the oil seepage is plainly seen not only where it flows from the banks but for rods below as it floats on the mountain stream. Hillsboro parties interested in such property will go to the mountains in a few days and inspect the seepage.

The amended complaint in Hinman v. Forest Grove has been filed and differs from the original in that it states that the plaintiff is personally injured when the city contracts with Mr. Haines to furnish power for pumping city water and an electric current for lighting the city. At the last term of the court the injunction was denied for the reason the affidavits did not show how the city would be benefited by making the contract but rather benefited since it got the same service for less money than it was before costing. The amended complaint does not set out how the plaintiff is injured, but perhaps that point can be brought out in the evidence.

The Oregon City base ball team comes against the Hillsboro-Cornelius team next. The visiting players have victories to their credit as well as our home people and it is almost certain that the score will not be above five or six runs counting both sides. Our people are not claiming a victory but they think that the Falls City people will know when the ninth inning has been finished that they have been playing ball. The handicap which our players have to take into account is lack of practice. The players are all farm hands and have to work in the harvest field. But the game next Sunday will be well worth seeing. The line-up is as follows:

Oregon City
Suess	catcher	Chris
Downs	pitcher	Belt
Purdin	1 b	McFarland
Briggs	2 b	Hedges
Cook	3 b	Kelley
Hare	ss	Lavie

McFee	rf	Warren

HOME TEAM WON AGAIN.

Five hundred people saw Hillsboro-Cornelius defeat a crack Portland base-ball team at the Recreation Park last Sunday. It was an exciting game all through and especially in the sixth inning when Hillsboro got her first tallies. Suess started the fireworks, with two men out before he came up, knocking a two base hit, and before the third out was made four men had crossed home plate. One more run was made in the eighth.

The Portland's made their two runs in the fourth on three well bunched errors, but the way the home team played the uphill game was a wonder, not another error was made and every man did his best, and it won the game. Downs was a trifle wild, allowing four men to walk to first, but otherwise he played the game of his life, struck out eleven men, and only four scattered hits were made off him. Harkins, the Portland pitcher, was probably the best the home team has been against this year. He struck out eleven men, but seven hits were made off his delivery.

The score follows:

The season has got so far along that farmers are able to intelligently judge what the crop will be. The yield of hay has been up to the usual standard and it has been saved in fine condition. Fall wheat is rather better than usual save in some fields where the Hessian fly has worked. But the fly is not dreaded as it was four months ago before its habits were generally known. Farmers find that infected fields are not entirely destroyed. A few rods square in one place and like spots in others are badly damaged, but between them is good wheat. The spring sowing shows short straw but the heads are fairly satisfactory. Early sown oats are all that can be asked though the last planted are short both in straw and head. The potato crop begins to need rain, yet such a luxury need not be expected for six weeks.

Mr. Charles Adams, of Scholls, was in town yesterday in the market for a better water meter than the one now in his saw mill, which is a large wooden wheel, good enough when the volume of water is great, but out of date where the water is a little shy. Mr. Adams finds that he has to improve his power for orders are coming in faster than he can fill them. The local lumber business about Scholls has never before been what it is this summer.

Mr. Neal Dalley, who broke a bone in his leg last week is out on crutches. The accident happened in a simple way but efficient. Mr. Dalley had ridden to Farmington on his bicycle. At the bridge where men were repairing that structure he stepped off his wheel but his foot went into a crevice between two planks, when he fell. The breaking of the bone resulted.

The Knights and Ladies of security a fraternal society of Portland will run an excursion train to Independence on Sunday Aug. 11. The train will stop at Hillsboro, Forest Grove and McMillanville and the price for a round trip ticket is $1.00. Of course if any of our people want to take a ride at a low figure they will be welcome on the train by the Portland excursionists.

Com. Thos. H. Tongue is at home glad enough to be through with in speeding rivers and harbors. He will be at home the rest of the summer giving attention to his law practice and taking only short recreation trips, unless official calls take him away.

The people at Scholls, Laurel and Farmington long for a telephone line connecting those centers with the outside world. A subsidy large enough to build a part of the line would willingly be subscribed.

L. W. House filled another order this week for neekyokes for heavy team wagons. There were five dozen as handsome sticks as ever go to Portland.

The ladies of the M. E. church will entertain their friends at a sociable Wednesday evening, August 7, on the lawn at Mr. J. M. Greear's residence. A short literary program will be rendered after which ice cream and cake will be served at 10 cents per dish.

The case of E. M. Heide v. A. C. Shute an action to collect a commission claimed to have been earned as compensation for selling real estate was tried in Justice Everett's Court last Tuesday. From the evidence it appeared that no well defined contract had been made, wherefore the defendants motion for a non suit was allowed.

M. Peterson & Son are mixing and applying a roofing paint that seems to have all the qualities to be desired for a roofing paint. It is both water proof and fire proof. The body is quite heavy hence all nail holes are closed and for tin roofs there is nothing better. The paint is put on hot. It has been used for 20 years and stands the test of weather and fire. A shingle coated with the paint may be cast into a furnace and charred, but even in the great heat it will not burst into flame. For roofs there is nothing better either as to quality or expense as this costs only half as much as other kinds of roofing paint. The color is carbon black.

There is another short chapter in the McHargue case this week. Last spring Mr. McHargue made application in Clackamas county for a certificate and passed his examination there. The certificate was granted. The holder presented this to Supt. Ball for indorsement, under that section of the law which provides that a superintendent "may" indorse the certificate granted in another county, thus dispensing with the formality of examination and filing certificates of character. Mr. McHargue contended that "may" is to be construed "must" where it appears in the statute. Supt. Ball thought that "may" means "may" and gives him discretionary power. The dispute was submitted to Attorney Gen. Blackburn for interpretation. That officer holds with Supt. Ball, so Mr. McHargue's certificate will not be indorsed in this county. The Attorney General in concluding his opinion says:

"The principal object to be attained under the statute relating to public schools, and more especially the provisions of said statute which regulate the examinations of applicants for teachers' certificates and the issuance of such certificate is to secure as teachers for the children in such public schools only those who are qualified mentally and morally as well as by education and experience. . . . This object cannot be fully attained if one whose character is such and so well known in the county of his residence that he cannot obtain the necessary certificate to authorize him to teach school therein, can go to another county, where his character is unknown, secure a first-grade certificate, return home and compel the County Superintendent of his home county to indorse such certificate, although knowing the holder thereof to be morally unfit for the position.

Messrs. John Brown and Miles Everett went this week to Mr. Everett's land across the divide. They rode bicycles down the divide but walked up. It was mostly walking. Returning Wednesday they reached Geo. M. Holt's after dark only to find that his house and barn with contents had been burned that very day. Mr. Holt lost with his buildings, three tons of clover hay, a set of harness and part of the second set. All of his forage is not gone as he has a field of oats yet to cut. The fire caught from a defective stove pipe that passed through the roof. Mr. Holt is school clerk of Jt. Dist. No. 49 and succeeded in saving the district records and money. The post office for that neighborhood is Brawasport.

The Sunday school of the M. E. church went picnicing yesterday to the "Island" in Jackson bottom.

Hon. S. B. Huston returned from Yaquina this week and will be at home the greater part of next week.

THROUGH HIS EYES.

Editor G. W. Harper who spent a day in Hillsboro about the first of July last, writes his impressions to his paper, the Robinson, Illinois, Argus:

Thursday we went to Hillsboro, some twenty miles west from Portland, which is the county seat of an adjoining county, and is a town hardly as large as Robinson, and of about the same age as Portland. [It is older.—Ed.] It has some very fine country around it and as it was the first level country to be seen to the extent of sight since passing the prairies of the Dakotas, we were forcibly reminded of home. On the route we saw the contrast of winter and spring wheat on the two sides of the railroad track, and in adjoining fields. The one was just ready for the reaper, while the other was green and would not be ready for harvest before August. The wheat, oats, rye and barley are all fine quality, and larger than that of Crawford county.

The day we spent in Hillsboro, we were most handsomely entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Berton Bowman at their delightful home. There was no doubt "a mutual admiration society" in this meeting of former Robinson friends in their far away home, and visitors in a strange part of the country. Mr. Bowman's many friends back in Crawford will be pleased to know that in his new home he is doing well, is pleasantly situated, and that he and his nice little family are held in high esteem. His sister, Miss Alma, who came here a year or two later than he, a few weeks ago went to Sitka, Alaska, where she has a call as a teacher.

We have had some new demonstrations of the fact that you cannot hide yourself in this great and vast country from those whom you have known, and who have known you, or of whom you have known. In Hillsboro we knew lived Bruce Huston, who read law some twenty-five years ago with G. N. Parker, but we found also A. M. Carlisle, who is in the harness business, and also learned that a brother of the late Judge Schofield lived there.

We were favorable impressed not only with the country around Hillsboro, and town, but with the people. If we were seeking a new home we certainly should feel strongly inclined to make choice of that place.

We did not see Bruce Huston, as he was away from home, but visited his suite of office rooms, three in number, having the largest law library in the city, costing over $3,000 and were pleased to learn that he was not only the leading attorney in his county, but had a practice to some extent in Portland. And yet, like many other young men who has gone out from Crawford county and made a success, he came out here a poor boy, having been just admitted to bar, and first worked in a shingle factory to get a little money ahead for a start, and rapidly forged his way to the front.

The fish, the fruit and other good things of this country suits us, and we expect to pull down the scales a few notches more on our return than on our leaving. Within a week we expect to start on our homeward trip, and shall probably be there by the time this is in print.
