THE WOUND AND ITS TREATMENT.

The announcement of the attempt of assassination of President McKinley is on the first page of this issue. When it was found that the president was hurt, he was taken to the Emergency Hospital on the exposition grounds and surgeons were called. With them came Dr. Roswell Parke, the most eminent authority on surgery in the country. The surgeons soon found the first bullet but the other was in the abdomen. They realized that the damage done by it must be found out and guarded against, therefore the abdomen was opened by making an incision five inches long, just over the stomach. The bullet passed through the stomach, making a small hole when it entered but the characteristic large, jagged hole where it left that organ. The wounds in the stomach were antiseptically treated and closed. The bullet was not found but remains buried in the soft tissues of the back. The cavity was cleaned and the wound in the abdominal wall closed. The patient stood the operation well and there were no alarming symptoms except for several hours on the second day, when his pulse ran up to 140 beats per minute. On Tuesday evening, there appeared indication of inflammation in the outer edge of the wound. A few stitches were cut and this spot dressed after which the uniform improvement was again established. At this writing, the surgeons say that the danger point is passed and that their patient will recover.

A LITTLE TARIFF HISTORY.

A leading French paper writing of the assault on Pres. McKinley sees in him a representative of the spirit of trusts and protection and asks whether the explanation of the crime is not found in the fact that Mr. McKinley personified, in the eyes of the crowd, aristocracy and wealth. If the journal means by the "crowd" anarchists, perhaps its analysis is correct. The statement ought not to be made to extend to the great party opposing the republican organization. But at this time it seems profitable to review a little tariff history. The Morrill bill, a republican measure was passed in 1861. This remained the base of all tariff measures until 1890, though many of its sections were amended from time to time. The Mills bill submitted about 1863 proposed a radical change in the revenue laws of the nation but it failed to pass. Just before 1890 the country was prosperous and the revenue greatly exceeded the needs of the government. The surplus piled up so that the opposition declared that it was a menace to the nation.

To meet the criticisms of the democrats a complete revision of the tariff law was undertaken. Primarily it was to be framed so as to reduce the revenues. Then the protection ideas of the republican party were to be followed. Luxuries imported, were to be taxed. All those items that came in competition with American manufactures or products were to be taxed, but those things that could not be grown or made in the United States were to go on the free list. This carried protection to farmers as well as to manufacturers. McKinley, as chairman of the Ways and Means committee, had charge of the bill and naturally it became known as the McKinley bill. The bill became an act in 1890. The working of the new law was perfect. The revenue of the government fell away so there was no surplus. On one item alone, sugar, $60,000,000 per year was not collected. Forty-three other articles were put on the free list. Business was immensely profitable. Then came the handling of the trusts. The rich became richer. The money barons were almost criminals. Free trade was a panacea. The people listened and voted the democrats into power. The Wilson tariff bill was put on the law book. Democrats were in power, complete—President, Senate and House. The great sugar trust was already organized. So was the oil trust, the tobacco trust and the whiskey trust. But Democrats did nothing to control them, nothing, nothing. Under the new tariff, for revenue, disaster overtook the country. Banks failed, factory fires went out, and actually the income was not enough to pay the expenses.

The republicans returned to power and repealed the Wilson tariff law putting the McKinley act back again, only it takes a new name, Dingley act, from the name of the chairman of the Ways and Means committee that reported it. The Dingley act is on the same lines as the McKinley act only the tariff is lower, and extended to a few items to produce revenue, since we had lost revenue on some taxed imports, the case for example. The country since once becomes prosperous. But there is the same railing against the rich, the same ranting about trusts, yet not a finger is lifted to assist republicans when they attempt to control monopolistic combines.

Has it come to such a pass, that when prosperity returns to our country, our president is to be assassinated? And are foreigners to charge that the motive originates in the policy that brings that prosperity? Public opinion is pronounced in this country on what should be done with Anarchists. It is to the effect that they should be put away. Scores and scores of our best citizens favor making "good" anarchists of them, but the most conservative prefer that they be banished, and to that end they suggest that one of the Philippine Islands, remote from the others be chosen and its native population be given homes on other islands. On this depopulated island let all anarchists be herded by war ships. Let an arm of government be established, but let the anarchists put in practice their own ideas. There they would have to work or starve. If they killed their own rulers, civilization would not have to shed the tears. A penal colony is not a bad scheme.

"France joins in the anguish and indignation of the American people. We remember the affectionate telegram that Mr. McKinley sent to the President of France at the time of the peace negotiations between Spain and the United States, and the cordial and humane policy of Americans in China, while Mr. McKinley has been astonishing the world by his moderation and spirit of justice in the dispute between Colombia and Venezuela and will therefore express the wish that Americans be spared mourning." This opinion from Figaro the great French newspaper is an estimate of our chief executive that we read with very kindly feelings and rejoice that our president is a man that inspires such commendation.

If politicians concede the right of capital to organize and if they mean by that the right of several corporations to combine into one big concern, then the fight against trusts might as well be suspended. Our constitutions must be amended so as to permit a proper control of monopolies or else all anti-trust music is wasted vibrations. When men declare that labor, like capital has a right to organize, they yield to the trusts.

Friction is growing rapidly between the Germans and Russians on account of the new German tariff. In aiming a blow at the United States the Europeans may hit each other and a quarrel among close neighbors is apt to be an ugly one.

Dr. Taft Bros. Medicine Co. Avon Springs, N. Y., Feb. 1, 1901.

Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic Asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon windows on 150th Street in New York. I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the 1st of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her Asthma had disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can conscientiously recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease.

Dr. Taft Bros. Medicine Co. Feb. 5, 1901. Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies, but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle, and I am ever grateful. I have a family of four children, and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit. S.
