The Gunmaker Of Moscow

By SYLVANUS COBB, Jr.

"You've secured me there, my lord, for I can tell you no more about him than I can about the man in the moon. In short, no one seems to know him, save that he is a monk of some Italian order and named Vladimir. He has been here only a few months, as near as I can find out, and yet I think I know what his business is, or, at least, why he's here."

"Ah, you suspect?"
"Yes, and if my suspicions be correct we could have him taken care of at any moment."
"Explain."
"Why, I think he is a spy of the pope, sent here from Rome to learn something of our emperor's plans."

"But he has not visited the imperial palace."
"Oh, yes, my lord; he has been there several times, and once the emperor himself was obliged to send him out of the audience chamber."
"But have you any particular reasons for thinking him a spy from the pope?"
"Why, he is a Romish monk, and he hangs about the most important places in our city. Even the circumstance I have just related—his trying to remain in the audience chamber while private business was going on and having to be ordered out by the emperor—is some ground for suspicion. I mean to watch him at all events."

"That's right," returned the duke. And then, after a moment's thought, he added: "I do not see why he should be around after every petty duel that may be fought if he is a spy from Rome, and, besides, I have heard one or two persons say that they were sure they had seen him before."
"Oh, that may be only the result of some strong resemblance which he bears to some one else. I am sure he was never here before—not in Moscow."

Again the humpbacked priest was cautioned about the work he had in hand, and, having promised over and over again to be very careful, he took his leave.

And Olga, duke of Tula, was left alone with his own thoughts. Better for him had that wicked priest been his executioner. Better for him had he been upon the count's bed, racked with dying pains. Better for him had he been a poor gunmaker, so he had been honest. Oh, better for him had he been the meanest beggar that walked the earth than what he was! But he could not realize this. He had a goal ahead, and he tried to overlook the black, dreadful gulf that yawned between him and it.

CHAPTER X.
A STRANGE DISCOVERY.
The news went out that the Count Conrad Damonoff must die. A few days before the best surgeon in Moscow said he would recover, but now that same surgeon said he must fall. A strange change had come over him. It was not a fever, but, rather, a consuming of vitality. He was failing fast, and no art of medicine could revive him. Some thought he must be bleeding inwardly, but others knew better than this, because in that case there would be some outward symptom. The wound itself was healing, but the disease was not. The physician and the priest were now in daily, and the former almost in hourly, attendance. The surgeon was Kopni, and the priest was the humpbacked Savatano.

Thus lay the count upon his bed, weak and faint, but at present almost free from pain, and an old woman was his only attendant, the priest having just left. It was just after noon. The dying man had just taken a powerful stimulating draft, though it was against the injunctions of the priest, as he said that by such means the invalid might die bereft of sense and thus lose his hold upon salvation. He had just taken this draft when there was a low rap upon the door. The woman arose to answer the summons. She conversed a few moments with the girl who had knocked, and when she returned to the bed she announced that Ruric Nevel had just entered.

"Let him come in," whispered the count.
"But—"
"Never mind," he interrupted as the woman commenced thus to expostulate. "Let him come in. By heavens, if he is my enemy let me see him! It may serve to arouse me."

DEVELOPMENT OF THE COAST.

Advertising is the force which has developed Western America, and more especially the Pacific Coast, so rapidly that its growth has been little short of miraculous.

All of the advertising in the world cannot possibly make a permanent success of a proposition which is not what it purports to be. Misrepresentation may sometimes bring temporary benefit, but can never produce a permanent success. The advertising which has forced this western country forward so rapidly has been grounded on the sure foundation of merit. Nature provided the stock of goods. The man who first came to realize the qualities of the stock in hand set about promoting it. The result is a stupendous triumph for the modern idea of publicity.

Now, if you grasp the full import of my idea, you will understand that every one who has been in any way instrumental in building up the west has been to just that extent one of the promoters of this gigantic advertising scheme.

The outreaching of this idea is so wide that it calls up many thoughts which have not occurred to the ordinary advertiser—thoughts which it will pay him to ponder in order to apply the principles to his own individual business.

In the nature of things, you and I have not been so situated as to make our effort count for very much in the advertising propaganda of the west. Who have been the leaders in this work? First of all, I should place the newspapers.

It is the common fault with most people to lose sight of the true relations of the newspaper to the community in which it is published.

Because of its semi-public character, because it exerts itself to further the interests of the community at large, it comes to be looked on as a sort of public property. The good offices of a paper in behalf of a community come to be taken as a matter of course.

I do not propose to discuss the ethics of the case, because there is a great deal to be said, pro and con, but it will pay you to take the representative paper in your community and go over it page by page, with the idea constantly in mind that that paper is the private property—the bread-earner—for its owner.

If you live in a city of 50,000 people or less, my point will be more obvious than it will be in a larger city, although the same observation holds good: Any newspaper which is what it purports to be in the community in which it is published, is an insistent promoter of the interests of that community.

There are newspapers galore in every section of the country, but it is my contention that the newspapers of Western America have done more to develop the territory in which they are published than has been done by the papers in most other sections.

The outside benefit which a community is to derive from such a newspaper depends, however, on getting the paper into the hands of outside people who might perhaps be interested in the community if its advantages are properly brought to their attention.

This phase of the matter has been very much neglected in most communities. Sometimes a board of trade or other commercial body has seen to it that a certain number of copies of the local papers were mailed to eastern addresses. In a few cases advertising in eastern publications has been used to secure the names to send these local papers to, but I am sorry to say that this practice is altogether too rare. It presents the only rational method of placing this valuable local advertising matter in the right hands.

I say, then, to every man who feels that he would like to have some influence in the upbuilding of the Coast: Whether you live at a country cross-road, or in a metropolitan center, support your local paper in every way possible, and help to circulate it where it will do your community good.

A WORTHY SUCCESSOR.
Something New Under The Sun.

All Doctors have tried to cure catarrh by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of catarrh, has at last perfected a treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures catarrh by removing the cause, stopping the discharges and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the affected parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "Snuffles," the guaranteed catarrh cure, and is sold at the extremely low price of one dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use.

"Snuffles" is the only perfect catarrh cure ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and positive cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflammation quickly and permanently and is also wonderfully quick to relieve hay fever or cold in the head.

Catarrh when neglected often leads to consumption—"Snuffles" will save you if you use it at once. It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure catarrh in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send for it at once and write full particulars as to your condition and you will receive special advice from the discoverer of this wonderful remedy regarding your case without cost to you beyond the regular price of "Snuffles" the "guaranteed catarrh cure."

Sent prepaid to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of one dollar. Address Dept. E 750, Edwin B. Giles & Company, 2530 and 2532 Market Street, Philadelphia.

An Evangelist's Story.
"I suffered for years with a bronchial or lung trouble and tried various remedies but did not obtain permanent relief until I commenced using One Minute Cough Cure" writes Rev. ## NEWS OF THE STATE.

The delinquent list occupies 20 columns of solid type in the Salem Sentinel.

It evidently was colder at Astoria last week since the Astorian reports ice on the streets that was used by the small boys for coasting.

There were four hold-ups in Salem last Saturday night, one occurred within 150 yards of the Sheriff who was looking for the highway men.

Frank Phillips was arrested in Portland last Saturday night charged with beating his wife. Frank is a big burly fellow who handles grain, and his wife a slender woman.

The Dalles Mountaineer of last Friday reports that there is opposition on the Columbia River between that town and Portland. A cut rate fare of 50 cents by boat is quoted.

The Salem Sentinel thinks the frightful wreck on the S. P. Co's road at Salem last week might have been prevented if the train had been approaching the station at a less speed.

At the municipal election held last week in Astoria 1208 votes were cast. Astoria has been claiming a population of 10,000, but reckoning five people to each voter, it looks as though the claim is a very liberal one.

The Pokegama Sugar Pine Lumber Company has commenced work on a 65 mile section of railroad from the state line northward to Upper Kalamath Lake. In addition to the railroad the company will put boats on Kalamath Lake and tributary rivers.

The Dalles people are getting ready to jubilate when power from White river is delivered to the city. The Mountaineer does not so state, but it is supposed that electrical power is generated at a dynamo station on White river and carried to The Dalles on wires.

One of the men held in jail on the charge of having helped wreck the train near Celilo is putting up a bold front and threatens to cause the United States a world of trouble. He declares he is a British subject and proposes to make his arrest the subject of international controversy. He is, however, more likely to stretch his neck.

The project of building electric car lines from The Dalles south ward to Dufur and northward to Goldendale is bruited, reports the Mountaineer. Pros. Seelye of the White Car transportation company profiles financial assistance. As the crowd Dufur is 12 miles south of The Dalles and Goldendale 14 north in Washington.

E. E. Lytle, president of the Columbia Southern, was in The Dalles last Friday, returning from a trip to Shaniko. In speaking of the development of the country tributary to Shaniko, Mr Lytle told the Mountaineer that immense quantities of land are being located south of Shearer's bridge on Deschutes as far south as Anuslope, and the settlers are preparing to seed large tracts in that country to wheat. He thinks that locality will become one of the great wheat producing sections of the state.

Astoria and Hammond the Capitalist are not getting on well together. Hammond wants to build a big mill, but Astoria refuses to make the concessions demanded, whereupon Hammond threatens to go to Seattle or Tacoma with his mill. So far this threat has not frightened the city by the sea into compliance. The Astorians seem to think that Mr. Hammond will not be able to transport his logs from the Columbia to the Sound.
