

FANS WILL PLAY BALL

Fidelity v Diamond W's Open Season at Recreation Park Next Sunday.

BOTH TEAMS WILL LINEUP STRONG

This Will Be the Home Team's First Game. Fidelity Was From Monograms March 30, 9-5

The opening game of base ball will be played next Sunday at Recreation park between the Fidelity and Diamond W teams. The Fidelity team beat the crack Monograms the 30th of last month by a score of 9 to 5, and this game promises to be one of the best played this season. The rain of last Sunday stopted the Ramblers from playing so this will be the initial game. Last year the Diamond W's beat the Fidelity by a good large score. Reed, who pitched and won two games for the Diamond W's last year will probably be in the box for Fidelity. Harkins will start the game for the home team. As the weather promises to be good a large crowd is expected.

Harkins, the shortstop of last year's team, has not promised to play second. He is one of the best players on the team and it is hoped he will continue to play the remainder of the season. Another new player is "Bud" Mills, of Newberg, who has played on some of the best amateur teams of the state, and is said to be a good man with the stick. He will play left field.

The home team will have a much stronger batting team than last year, and it is hoped they will win the championship of the Oregon State League.

The lineup of the teams follows:

Fidelity	Diamond W
Hoyt or Reed	p
Brown	c
Chas Geil	1b
Cal Geil	2b
Patterson	3b

Smith	cf
Jagger	lf

The association of Congressional churches for the West Willamette Association was held with the Hillsboro church last Tuesday and Wednesday. The attendance was good there being about forty delegates present. The papers and addresses emphasized the same thought from different points of view. "Present problems for the local church." Much thought had been given to the subject with the result that there was a very profitable as well as entertaining conference. The idea was voiced that each local church is in some measure responsible for the success of its neighbor and especially for religious sentiment in those centers where there is no church.

SUIT OVER PROPERTY

Vaughn Sues Mrs. Gishwiler for a Piece of Land He Claims

BOTH PARTIES CLAIM THE LAND

The Case Promises to be a Spirited One and will be in the Courts Several Months

Vaughn v Gishwiler is the title to an action at law that will probably encumber the docket of the circuit court in Washington county for many months. A while ago Mr. Benj. Anderson sold his residence property at the northeast corner of First and Lincoln streets, just north of the court house block, to Sylvester Vaughn for $900. Later Vaughn transferred it, by deed, to Mrs. L. J. Gishwiler without, as he alleges, consideration. His reason for that step was that he feared his wife with whom he had not lived for fifteen years was trying to get an interest in his property. He supposed his wife had obtained a divorce years ago. Just how he expected to extinguish his wife's title by transfer is not plain. On the other hand Mrs. Gishwiler asserts that the money paid to Mr. Anderson was her own and that she had the deed written in her friend Vaughn's name because she owed some claims that were pressing and that she did not want the title till the demands were paid. Having paid her debts she took the title of the property from Vaughn's name to her own. The property is her own, was from the day Mr. Anderson sold it, and she proposes to hold it. And there you are.

Last Tuesday John Brown, grocer, got returns for 1 dozen broiler chickens which were sold for $4.75. These peepers weighed as they came from the yard 9 pounds, and sold for a fraction under 40 cents each or almost 53 cents per pound. On the consumer's table they will cost almost or quite $1.00 per pound. But the big price is not all profit, for to begin with the eggs from which they were hatched were worth 3 cents each. There was loss of added eggs so that 4 cents is not too great an estimate. Cost of heat for incubator must be reckoned, then there is care and feed while growing. But there is a margin of profit and a living for the poultry man who raises chickens by the thousand. It should be added that the expense of marketing this little shipment was fifty cents.

Coupled with the opinion of the city attorney that the county court has exclusive jurisdiction of county roads passing through the city until such jurisdiction is given to the corporation by the legislature in the charter, is another matter—can the city require property owners to construct sidewalks on the side of that part of any county road within the city limits?

Work on the Portland-Nehalem railroad has not been commenced now; standing 40 days have passed since it was announced that men would be in the field by this date. It seems as far away as ever, and as the passes are studied there is less reason to believe that the company, if company there be, is in earnest. The favorable pass that Secretary Reed commended so highly, was surveyed in 1868, by engineers employed by the Oregon Central. They reported adversely and the route now used, up Fourth street Portland, was taken instead. The abandoned route was over a 2 per cent grade. Nothing better is now claimed for it. The Fourth street grade is 4 per cent for a few blocks but 2 per cent for several miles on both sides of the hill. And it is that 2 per cent that makes freight so expensive from Beaverton to Portland. In the beginning, when Holiday was proposing to build the road, he wanted to go up Fourth street, but there was objection. Holiday threatened to go down the Tualatin, bridge the Willamette at Oswego and establish union depot on that side of the river. The city quickly granted the right of way through Fourth street and raised a cash subsidy of $100,000 in addition. We now see that it would have been better for the commerce of the West Side if the road had gone down the Tualatin. It is where it will yet have to go. The Portland-Nehalem better take the water level where as many cars can be pulled as can be hitched to, than go over the Portland mountain on a 2 per cent grade where it takes two locomotives to pull fifteen loaded cars.

What has been said with reference to the Hillsboro-Glencoe railroad is attracting attention to the timber north of Glencoe which the road when built will tap. Two men representing different interests were in Hillsboro Tuesday last looking up the matter. That stub of eight miles promises to be the first piece of new road built in the county.

Mr. E. L. McCormick has employed an expert bicycle repair man in the name of Mr. N. D. Westfall, of Portland, Or. Mr. Westfall comes highly recommended as a first class mechanic. All repairing fully guaranteed. Prices reasonable. 3 door south of postoffice.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Christian church will give a novelty social on Friday evening of next week, April 18. Do not neglect it.

Mr. T. S. Cornelius formerly of this county is on the republican ticket for assessor of Clatsop county. He now lives in Astoria.

Miss Vera, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davy at one time a resident of Forest Grove, died at her Salem home on the 3rd instant aged about 17 years. An attack of pleuro-pneumonia was the cause of death.

H. G. Guild who for several years has published the Oregon Independent at Salem announces in the issue of April 3, that he suspends publication to remove his plant to Washington. He does not mention the town where he again takes up his quill.

An annoying error appeared last week in publishing the list of republican candidates, which stated that Joseph Galbreath is republican candidate for sheriff. It should have been Samuel Galbreath. The name properly appears in this issue where it will stay till elected in June, when it will be transferred to the list of county officers because Sam is going to get there.

Last week in writing of the sequoia in the court house yard it was stated that so far as known they are the only ones in the Willamette valley. A correspondent calls attention to another planted in the yard of the late Dr. Bowly at Forest Grove. The property is now owned by Mr. Geiger. This tree has been a very rapid grower, and now presents a most attractive appearance. The correspondent did not mention its history but it probably came from the Porter nursery, and there may be more in this and adjoining counties transplanted from the same source.

Some time ago the Independent called attention to the profit to be gathered in poultry raising. Again profit hunters are directed to the chicken yard. As careful an estimate of the income originating in the poultry yards of Linn county as the data at hand permits is here given:

Eggs, 200,000 dozen, worth	$50,000
Live poultry 4000 dozen "	$16,000
Dressed poultry 80,000 lbs "	$ 8,500
	Total $54,500

This is from shipments made to Portland from stations of the S. P. railroad, and include only freight and express packages passing to or through Portland. It is claimed that Linn county is in the business on a larger scale than any county in the state, but what Linn does can be matched in Washington.

THE GUMPTION AND PRESUMPTION OF MEN AND BEASTS.

With the unrestricted freedom owners of stock enjoy in allowing their cattle to roam over the public highways, Washington county has gained an unenviable reputation as a "free range community." One cannot travel any road whether prominent or remote, without encountering straggling groups of whole herds of cattle, without apparent owners, grazing upon the thoroughfares. This malpractice has become so promiscuous and pernicious that many individuals, they cannot be termed farmers, ignore to lay in a supply of fodder for the winter season, but depend entirely upon our "free road grazing" system, the marauding instincts of their bovines, which asserts itself in many fence breaking foraging expeditions upon the growing crops and the gleaming of passing hay wagons etc., to keep their flocks during the blistering days of the rainy season. These roving bands have become so numerous, that they now constitute a positive nuisance; not to speak of a constant menace to life and property and the quarrels and law-suits they may provoke.

The owners of these festive "cows" seem to have transmitted to them their own sense of road ownership, by which they, the cows, have acquired absolute title to the highways with "appurtenances thereto," the latter phrase signifying the bicycle paths, their favorite promenades which they abuse in various ways to the detriment of its appearance and usefulness.

Farmers are loud in their protests and weary of these wandering kine and their depredations, and are almost unanimous in their denunciation of these quadruped vultures of our roadways. We look for relief and appeal to the authorities to commission a Poundmaster at every cross road if necessary, to permanently dispose of and bring to a termination this "home rule" of cattle as found on our highways.

OREGON HOPS IN ENGLAND.

Francis Feller, the Butteville hop grower who went to London several months ago with the pool of hops sent by the Oregon Hop Growers' Association has returned, and seems to be well pleased with the result of his trip to the British metropolis. In an interview with a reporter of the Evening Telegram, that paper says of his trip:

"Frank Feller, a prominent hop grower of Butteville, returned yesterday from London, England, after disposing of 22,000 bales of hops for the Oregon pool. He thinks the trip paid him well, as the hops were sold direct to the consumers, who were willing to pay good prices for them. The sales netted the growers here 10 to 12 cents a pound.

"Mr. Feller thinks Oregon hop growers, as a rule, are in too much of a hurry to pick, and this gives the hops a green, unripe tinge when in the bale. Hops should not be picked until fully ripe, he said, even should we have to wait a few days longer. The British consumer is willing to pay the top price for the 'Pacific hops' as the product of the Willamette valley is called, but he wants them fully ripe; in fact, a little overripe would be better than premature picking.

"He spent six weeks in the British metropolis, and thinks it is the biggest city in the world. The atmosphere is grimy with smoke, and if one washes his hands every fifteen minutes the water would turn black from the soot. 'New buildings put up within the past twelve months look old and grimy, and the sooty atmosphere settles on everything. London is a busy city, however, and the people are evidently prosperous, I saw no signs of extreme poverty anywhere. The Britons, although gloomy over the protracted war in South Africa, are by no means in the humor to compromise with the Boers. In the daily papers and in conversation on the streets, evidence of John Bull's determination are plainly manifest. 'The Englishman when he sets his head, is just as stubborn as the Dutchman, and that is pretty stubborn.' Mr. Feller is glad to get home to Oregon, and expects a prosperous season for the hop grower in 1902."

The industry of breeding trotting horses is assuming large proportions just now the market being England, Germany and France. A fast trotter brings big money in those countries, sums reaching into thousands for the span. These horses can be bought only in the United States, where the class originated. The first trotter was Hambletonian and all the standard bred horses trace back to that remarkable animal. But not all of his colts were fast, or transmitted speed to their descendants, but there were speedy animals that seem to have been the sire of remarkable trotters. The head of one of these groups was Electioneer 125, that stands at the head of a speedy lot of horses, among them Sunol 2:08 1/2 and Egotist somewhat slower but the sire of Egozet 2:04 1/2 and of Lovelace owned here in Hillsboro by Mr. E. B. Tongue. Lovelace himself has a fast record of 2:20 and a trial record of 2:12 as a 3-year old. The breeding of fast horses is one of nature's secrets jealously guarded, and a fast colt is quite as likely to appear on the farm as in the gilded stables of the wealthy breeder. There is every incentive for farmers who have good brood mares to patronize this fine animal whose 3-year old record is better than that of Egotist's sire.
