Young Mr. Northrup near Glencoe is reported to be down with the small-pox at his father's. Some of the neighbors are nervous, but there is little danger of spreading the contagion if proper isolation is observed. But the people must keep away from the sick man's bedside. This is a case for special nurses and attendants and carelessness cannot be excused

The Southern Pacific Company are to be kindly remembered and heartily commended for its generous treatment of the public at the time of Congressman Tongue's funeral, coach after coach was run out of the car barns 'till all who desired to be present at that very serious occassion were accomodated. The regular trains were run on schedule time, but the two large special trains were absolutely at the disposal of the public.

Prof. S. T. Adams thought the efforts of the late Hon. Thos. H. Tongue has secured from the Smithsonion Institution one hundred and fifty (150) very valuable books, pamphlets and other publications for the Reedville school library. Prof. Adams purchased fify-five volumes of standard books in Portland last week. The library now numbers more than two hundred volums. The pupils are greatly pleased with this enterprise.

The Spaulding Logging Company that has had a force of twenty men cutting logs on the Zina Woods place would like to increase their force to forty-five men. Mr. J. C. Morris, who is forman of the crew here, states that this company has over 600 men cutting logs in different parts of the Willamette valley. The company furnishes logs to the Willamette Paper Mills at Oregon City. They also have a large saw mill of 125,000 capacity at Newberg. In the past four years they have expended over $6000 on the Tualatin river cleaning out drift-wood and now there is not a drift from Gaston to the mouth at Oregon City. Two millions feet of logs are now in the Tualatin and they expect to drive these logs to Oregon City about the last of Februrary. Mr. Morris would like to clean out Dairy creek so as to get what logs he can on that stream. He says that there is not sufficient timber on its banks to justify the company to clear it of drifts but if property owners will do half the company will do the other half. He estimates it will cost $1700 to clean out the stream.

STATE WAS IN MOURNING.

Hon. Thomas H. Tongue was buried, last Sunday afternoon, with all the honor his state could give him. Men from all parts of the state were present to attend his funeral in this city, and Dr. Rockwell most fittingly said: "It is Oregon that is mourning today, for it is Oregon that has lost a son." Congress sent a committee consisting of men from every part of the nation; but the funeral was Oregon's own tribute to its dead.

Two special trains, one from Portland and one from Dallas brought hundreds of people from all walks of life. Nearly all the state officials were present and a large number of the legislature. The Methodist church, where the funeral services were held, would not hold one-tenth of the people who were here to pay their last respects to the National statesman, and the alter was piled mountain high with the beautiful floral offerings.

The body was accompanied to Hillsboro by Thomas H. Tongue, jr., Bertha Tongue, Rep. Malcolm A. Moody, Rep. J. H. Davidson, and Rep. Jas. E. Colenso, of Wisconsin, Rep. J. E. Ransdell of Louisiana, Rep. R. P. Bishop of Michigan, Rep. J. D. Bellamy of North Caroline, Rep. J. D. Bellamy of North Carolina, Rep. J. C. Needham of California, and Rep. James E. Howard of Georgia. At Portland the train was met by Hon. W. N. Barrett, Hon. S. B. Huston, Dr. S. T. Linklater, Dr. J. P. Tameisie and John Bailey, of this city. The Knights, Masons and Odd Fellows, societies of which Mr. Tongue was a member, were at the depot to meet the party and they escorted the remains to residence of the deceased.

Sunday morning the body lay in state at the court-house and thousands of people with uncovered heads passed by it.

Major L. M. Hoyt, commander of 50 Knights met all trains and escorted the guests to the court-house; There they formed in open rank order through which the visitors passed from the street into the court-house and acted as ushers during the ceremonies. They were in charge of Mr. Tongue's body while it lay in state and added much to its impressiveness. The Odd Fellows took charge of the body at the court-house and carried it to the church.

The acting pallbearers, all friends and neighbors from boyhood of the deceased, were: D. M. C. Gault, Chas. F. Tigard, James H. Sewell, J. C. Lamkin, G. M. Hale and N. P. Ackerman. The honorary pallbearers included: State Senators Chas. W. Fulton, R. A. Booth, Judges C. E. Wolverton, R. S. Bean, Representative elect J. N. Williamson, General Summers, Chief Justice F. A. Moore of the supreme court, Judge W. D. Fenton ex-Governor Geer, Governor Chamberlain, F. I. Dunbar and State Treasurer Moore.

The distinguihed assemblage simply packed the little church until it was uncomfortable for any one to listen. The escort of Knights kept the aisles open untill the Odd Fellows crrried the coffin but after that it was a struggle for the best place. Most of the honorary pallbearers were called to fill the seats beside the Congressional committee back of the alter. Others who were present were ex-United State Senator George W. McBride, ex-Representative W. R. Ellis, John F. Caples, ex-United Minister to Chile, Judge M. C. George. Geo. W. Bibee, Hon. S. B. Huston, Dr. A. C. Panton, F. A. Bancroft. United States District Attorney John Hall, D. M. Dunne, collector of internal revenue, W. F. Butcher, Dean Ferrin of Pacific University, E. D. Ressler, President of the State Normal School, P. L. Campbell, President of the University of Oregon, Clande Gatch of Salem, William Galloway of Oregon City, Mayor G. R. Christman of Eugene; R. T. Grier, George Taylor, Ira Smith of Ontario; T. A. Wood, Otis Patterson, Receiver of the Land Office of the Dalles; J. C. Veazie; ex-Secretary of State Kincaid, Judge A. H. Tanner, Sam Connell, State Game and Forest Warden Quimby; W. J. Clark, Benton Killen, Dr. James Withycomb, Phil Metcham, J. H. Ackerman, Col. John McCracken, C. N. McArthur, Dr. Williamson of Salem. The State Legislature was here in a body besides hundreds of others unknown to the reporter.

The services at the church were impressive. The home pastor introduced Rev. Kline to make the opening prayer and many moist eyes were in the audience when he concluded. Dr. Cline was for a number of years pastor of the church here and his prayer took a wider range than is usual because of this. His eloquent appeal was, perhaps, the best verbal tribute paid to Mr. Tongue during the day. Then Dr. R. H. Kennedy of the Hillsboro Congregational church, read a passage of scripture after which Dr. L. E. Rockwell, of Portland preached the funeral sermon. He paid a feeling eulogy to the memory of the deceased. In part he said.

We are here in the shadow of all that is mortal of one justly respected, highly honored and greatly beloved. We meet as citizens, as patriots and as friends. It is a common sorrow. The Nation's representatives are here and those of our own commonwealth. The multitudes also, with bared heads, stand around the sacred inner circle of these mourning ones and so far as possible, make this great affliction theirs. If there can be compensation it must be found in helpful memories. His sterling manhood, his splendid achievements and his unsullied patriotism—these yet dwell here, and will live to reproduce themselves in other lines. The record a man makes may be his life's history. But it is not that alone. It is more, much more. It is the man himself. It is that which lives after him and does not die.

"Thos. H. Tongue was a manly man. He was not faultless, but he had high ideals. He was not spotless, but he had respect for an ethical code that has truth and honor as foundation stones. He might not be perfect, but he could not betray a friend. He might not pose as simply good, but he could not be unfair even to an enemy. So far as he had opportunity, he exhibited almost a genius for doing the right thing in the right way at the right time. That may be called statesmanship. His views were broad and sagacious, and he exhibited more than ordinary strength in dealing with questions pertaining to the public weal. Nor was he wanting in that impulse exhibiting itself in love of country, and that, too, wherever the flag waves. He was the true friend of the soldier in whatever way he faithfully fought the battles of the country. His acknowledged ability, his tireless industry, his abounding tact and skill enter into the record that he made. That record is more than the history of a life. It is the life, for it is the man.

"It was hard thinking and resourceful statesmanship in which he took part that helped so much at an opportune time to make possible the opening of the Columbia to the shipping of the world. His last great work was interrupted. He was working on the problem how to make the desert bloom as the rose, It was a hard subject, but he was making commendable progress. The time had come, however, to rest from his labors. The clock had struck the hour. Then 'God's finger touched him and he slept.' It was on God's day—the day of days—the time for rest, when 'the weary wheels of life stood still.' It is now the other rest day, the rest that follows when, amid familiar scenes of his boyhood and maturer years, with multitudes to do him honor, we lay his weary body down to rest, to await the resurrection of the just."

During the services the Portland Quartet, in which Mrs. Walter Reed, Mrs. Shelden, Dom Zan and Harry W. Hogue sound so well, sang a number of hymns, and were heard to special advantage in the beautiful "Lead, Kindly Light." When the church ceremonies were concluded the body was turned over to the Hillsboro Masonic body, which escorted it to the cemetery and interred it with their own picturesque ritual, Worshipful Grand Master W. F. Butcher conducting the services. Over the grave Mr. Butcher paid one last eloquent tribute to Mr. Tongue's memory, and the whole cemetery was filled with those who listened to him.

The Congression delegation will return to Washington at once, and Mr. Moody left last evening, to resume his work there. For the present he will be Oregon's sole member of the National House of Representatives.

The special train from Portland was under the direct supervision of W. E. Coman, general freight and passenger agent of the Southern Pacific. Mr. Coman used every means to make all the passengers comfortable, and was assisted in his work by John P. Jones, traveling passenger agent, and C. W. Stringer city ticket agent.

OREGON'S GREAT NEED.

A few of the leading citizens of Portland recently subscribed to a fund amounting to over $16,000 for the purpose of establishing a Bureau of Information for the state. At a meeting of the subscribers to the fund, five trustees, viz., Chas. E. Ladd, of Ladd and Tilton, bankers; W. M. Killingsworth, Capitalist and Real Estate; T. D. Honeyman, of Honeyman Hardware Co.; W. H. Beharrell, of Heywood Bros. Co., wholesale furniture, and R. C. Judson Industrial Agent of the O. R. & N. Co. were elected trustees of the fund. These trustees subsequently organized and elected Chas. E. Ladd, Chairman, W. M. Killingsworth, Secretary and Ladd & Tilton, bankers, Treasurer. At a subsequent meeting of the trustees Col. Frank V. Drake was chosen Superintendent.

The purpose of this organization is to ascertain and tabulate the resourses of the state, gather an exhibit of its products and be prepared to tell all about Oregon and the resourse of the several counties to all persons desiring information on the subject—to direct settlers and capital to opportunities awaiting them in the state.

A large, well lighted room, or hall, has been set aside by the North Pacific Terminal Co. in the magnificent, new Union Depot at Portland for use of the Bureau, and tables and cases are now being made and furniture secured for its use in displaying products and distributing literature from their various stations to Portland, free of charge, of all samples and exhibits that may be sent to the Bureau for display. Negotiotions are in active progress to obtain like concessions from all the transportation companies, with every probability of obtaining their co-operation. The encouragement being received on this line is very gratifying.

In the great exhibition room equal space will be allotted to each county desiring it for the display of its products and resources and the distribution on such descriptive printed matter as it may forward for the purpose, each county to have equally "fair show."

The Board of Trustees ask the citizens of each county, at the earliest day possible, to have prepared a map of each county, showing township lines and drawn to scale of miles, on which shall be designated all streams, county roads, rail-roads, if any, navigable waters, if any, harbors, if any, mountain ranges, with principal elevations, and by appropriate coloring and notes defining the location of lands suitable for grains, flax, hops, fruits, and the like; also grazing land, mineral lands, timber lands, arid sections, and such as are available to irrigation; also the locations of water powers, if any, cities and villages with number of inhabitants and schools in each, and such further information as may be of public interest. These maps are to be sent to the Bureau at Portland, where a set of uniform [illegible] [illegible] kinds, [illegible] products, number and [illegible] stock, manufactures, mines, mills and the like.

Competent persons will be in charge of the exhibition room to give information and distribute the literature without expense to localities or counties.

A NEW INDUSTRY FOR OREGON.

Washington county produces the first Evaporated Cream in the state of Oregon. This new Milk Condensing Plant—which has lately been established and which is now producing a superior article of sterilized evaporated cream—is a Washington county industry of which we feel justly proud. In an interview with the president, Dr. J. P. Tameisie, and the manager F. Schromburg, we ascertained that The Oregon Condensed Milk Company will do much for Hillsboro, and Washington County especially as such an industry will surely promote the raising of many dairy cows, and the dairy industry especially for which this Willamette valley is so admirably adopted.

Mr. C. T. Thornton, expert in the evaporated cream process, was sent here from Detroit, Michigan; he has been here two months and a half setting up the condensing machinery and teaching the process to the men who are now in charge of the manufacture of the Sterilized Evaporated Cream.

The new brand which the Oregon Condensed Milk Company are just placing on the market, is the "Oregon Grape Brand Sterilized Evaporated Cream."

The president and manager sign a guarantee attached to each can that their cream is absolutely pure. This they state they do for the reason that it the pending national pure food bill becomes a federal law will require every manufacturer to label or stamp his goods for just what they are. Further than this, Dr. Tamiesie who is a physian first—and a manufacturer simply from the view point of an investor, states that he objects to any coloring matter in food products and advises as Mr. Henry E. Alvord, Chief of Dairy Division Bureau of Animal Industry, to avoid all coloring in dairy products, as it is unhealthy, and besides opens the door to adulteration.

Discriminating users of evaporated cream will no doubt thoroughly examine the new Oregon Grape Brand of cream and the Oregon Condensed Milk Company is willing to abide by their [illegible].
