Hillsboro has experienced quite a variety of weather, during this week. Wednesday dawned with an inch of snow on the ground, and before night we had rain, sunshine, snow and sleet. What state can beat Oregon for weather?

Prof. C. E. Bradley of Pacific University, will address the residents of Reedville, on Thursday eve, Feb. 5th, at 7:30 o'clock. His subject will be "Caucem-try as Applied to Practical Life." There will be no admission fee charged. All are cordially invited.

Mr. Wesley Garrison, who has been working at the barber trade with J. J. Jeffries, has purchased the barber shop of Mr. Bud Hoover, and gone into the business for himself. The sale was consummated Wednesday. Mr. Hoover has purchased a shop in Portland.

Reports from Corvallis, are to the effect that the recent rains have brought the Marys river up so high that the new bridge erected across that stream last summer was floated two feet off its foundation. Residents in South Corvallis were almost flooded out; the water being over two feet deep in some yards.

J. A. Kremis, one of Hillsboro's popular grocery merchants, has found that his grocery business is enlarging to such proportions that it is necessary to have more room for his stock. He is building an addition to the rear of his store which, when completed, will enlarge the capacity of the building to almost double its former size.

Fifty thousand tons of agricultural implements made in the United States will be shipped from New York during the next six weeks, eight steamships being used in transporting the machinery to foreign countries. One vessel alone will carry 8,500 tons of the machines manufactured in Chicago, which is the largest shipment ever forwarded from America.

At the morning service at the Congregational church next Sunday, the subject of the sermon will be "The Grounds of Hope." In the evening the pastor, Rev. R. H. Kennedy, will begin a series of sermons on lessons from great books; the subject of the first being George Eliot's "Romola"—"The Danger of Trifling with Conscience." The Missionary society of the Congregational church will meet at Mrs. G. W. Wilcox's home, Feb. 4th, subject, "Mountains White."

Below is a statement of the items of receipts of prominent farmer owners about 400 acres of land within two and a half miles of Hillsboro which he cultivates. The figures are remarkable, but they can be duplicated almost anywhere in the county by applying the sound business management that business men in any other industry use. This farmer received for the season of 1902 for 310 tons of hay, $3100.00, 2500 sacks onions $5,000.00 stock raised and sold $1000, 700 sacks potatoes $700, timothy seed sold $300, 22 head hogs sold $200, cabbage sold $100, wheat sold $150, clover seed sold $175, vegetables sold $100, beans sold $100 oats sold $2300, total $13125.00 expenses $5000 net proceeds $8125.00 A part of the expense was for permanent betterments such as clearing land, tile drainage &c. The profit account should be further increased by the amount of food products used in the family together with fuel and rent of residence of which no account was taken. Had he lived in the city those things would have cost him $1000.00 farming pays.

Church notice: The Salvation Army, consisting of five or six members, will begin Pentecostal meetings in the Evangelical church, Hillsboro, on Feb. 12th. The meetings will be in charge of Ensign Hill, from Ill. There will be stringed instruments and the famous "Bass Drum" used in the meetings. Mr. Hill is a very sweet singer, and there will be others with good voices. Salvation Army methods will be used. A great meeting is expected—come one, come all.

WILLIAM POINTER DEAD.

Wm. Pointer, an old-time resident of this county, died at Salem, Tuesday morning, Jan. 27th, of nervous prostration, after an illness of a few days. Although he had not been in good health for several years, the end was not expected. Mr. Pointer was born in Montgomery county, Indiana Jan. 17th, 1838.

He came to this state in 1879, and engaged in contracting and building, having erected some of the best buildings in the county, the court house being among them.

In 1888 he was appointed county treasurer of Washington county to fill a vacancy, and in 1890 was nominated by the republicans for the same position, and was endorsed by the democrats and received within 37 votes of the entire vote of the county.

Four years ago he went to Salem to fill the position of janitor at the State house which position he held at the time of his death. Two children survive him.—E. E. Pointer, Forest Grove, and Mrs. W. H. Gault, Salem, one sister and one brother also survive.—Mrs. John Heister of Gales Creek, and Perry Pointer of Portland. Mr. Pointer's wife died in 1892.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to extend our thanks to the people of Hillsboro for their many acts of kindness during our late bereavement.

MR. AND MRS. W. H. GAULT, MR. AND MRS. JOHN HEISTER, MR. AND MRS. E. E. POINTER.

LOVE, WHO KNOWS IT'S INTENSITY.

Sitting in an office, a few years ago, were some friends. Among the number was "Lish" Applegate, that quaint and original character so prominent in early Oregon history. A wag and a philosopher. The subject of love being mentioned, one of the company turned to Applegate and said, "General, give us a definition of love; you have experienced it in its different phases, you have had a mother, a wife, a baby and a grandchild; tell us its measure and its power. 'Lish' turned to the speaker and with a drollery of expression, peculiarly his own, he said; "Well you have asked of me an impossibility. No man can define it. Love is indefinable, because it is incomprehensible, the finite mind cannot grasp it. When we are young we think we know all about it. I thought so, and if you will listen I will tell you how I was led up to the meaning of the statement found in Holy Writ, 'That by searching we cannot find it out.'"

When I was a boy, I sat on a little stool and looked into my mother's face as she was about her work. I thought her the most beautiful of women. I can remember, I would try to measure my love for her; nothing that I could think of was big enough to compare with it and I felt that, small as I was, I had experienced the deepest emotion which that divine attribute could inspire. For twenty-five years I gloried in this hallucination, beautifully sweet and satisfying hallucination, because I thought it was true. One day I met Isabel. The world changed; everything was brighter, bigger, stronger. A fountain sprang from a depth in my heart which I had not known nor dreamed, a rushing, flowing stream of new love, so strong, so wide, so deep, that I said this is the superlative of love. Now I know the intensity, the fierce, the consuming intensity of love. This was another chimera.

For years I dwell in the delightful atmosphere of this fancy. I thought I comprehended love until one morning there was placed in my arms, a little red, wrinkled, soft, wriggling thing with tiny clenched hands, closed eyes—soft, short silken hair, pink toes—it was very small and entirely helpless, but small and weak as it looked, it had power, tremendous power, it took hold of my heart-strings and that thumping organ experienced a disturbance hitherto unknown—from away down deeper than had ever been touched—the emotion swelled and glowed. As I looked on this helpless thing, I beheld in it mother and Isabel combined—Oh! I said now I understand, now I comprehend the height, the depth, the fullness of love. In this belief I lived, convinced that on every side I had touched the outer borders of love as well as its top and its bottom. This pleasing fancy I indulged 'till age brought to me white whiskers, a wrinkled face and stooping form, when I met another child, the child of my child was laid on my trembling knee—blood of my mother, of Isabel, of my sweet daughter coursed through its veins.—A mighty flood of love, a new love, from away down, fathoms beneath the depths which hitherto had been stirred, arose swelling, glowing, burning, intensifying. It had no bounds, a depth unfathomable,—a wideness immeasurable, a height incalculable—a love illimitable, so holy, so profound that mortal could endure no more; and should some concatenation of unfortunate circumstances combine to prolong my existence until a great grand child should be born and this attribute increase in intensity in the same ratio, the unfortunate destiny which awaits me is BUST! by gonny.

MARCONI'S GREAT TRIUMPH.

The messages just sent across the Atlantic by Marconi, in one of which President Roosevelt greeted Edward 7th, seem to remove the last shadow of a doubt of the practicability of the wireless system of communication.

It has just been tried under more adverse conditions than were those under which it has been operated heretofore. Apparently, it has met all the tests to which it has been submitted. Experts who had been skeptical last year when the first message was sent across the ocean seem to be convinced now that the system is not only practical, but that it will soon be brought to ordinary commercial use. It is to be hoped that there will be no disappointment in the Marconi system like that which took place with Cyrus W. Field's cable. After the greetings, it will be remembered, passed between Queen Victoria and President Buchanan in the former case, the cable soon ceased to work, and telegraphic communication across the Atlantic was not permanently established until eight years later, or in 1866. Great disappointment was naturally felt throughout the world at the breakdown of the cable in 1858, but probably real communication would not have been established earlier had not the civil war in the United States occurred, which stopped the enterprise during those four years.

There is significance in the circumstance that the establishment of the Marconi system attracts immeasurably less attention than did Field's experiment. These were rejoicing throughout the United States and England when the field cable was first finished, and the leading cities of the continent of Europe, too, participated in the jubilation. On the other hand, the sending of the Marconi messages arouses comparatively little interest anywhere. Nevertheless, the beginning of a revolution in the methods of communication over sea and land has taken place. Possibly Marconi may not live to see it, although the probability is that he will, a mode of transmission of intelligence has been established which is undoubtedly destined to abolish all communication by wire, and to make the great cable systems and the present immense land telegraphs antiquated and useless. One of the greatest marvels of an age in which marvels have been so numerous that they have ceased to astonish anybody has just been added to the list of the world's utilities.
