The Creffield case is to go to the Grand Jury of Multnomah county. Creffield waived examination before Judge Hogue and asked to go before the grand jury saying "the Lord will plead my cause." People are already very tired of this unwholesome affair and it is hoped the grand jury will soak Creffield for all the Lord will allow them and get him quickly screened from public view.—Corvallis Gazette.

Half the men in Independence are grass widowers and the marshall is off on a vacation.—Independence Enterprise.

Half the men in Hillsboro are grass widowers while their wives are enjoying themselves at the seaside. The marshal is here too, and he acts as if he was paid to watch the whole male population. But, then, perhaps it is only imagination.

County Attorney T. H. Tongue conducted the case for the state and Geo. Bagley for the defendant. Both parties are from the neighborhood of Sholls.

Reports reach this office that several residences have been broken into lately and article of more or less value taken. The depredation is done between 10 and 12 o'clock at night and is undoubtedly the work of persons living in town and well acquainted with the surroundings. Whether these night prowlers are boys or men, residents or strangers, they are taking desperate chances, and if the thing is continued some one is going to get killed.

A. J. Ford, who started a restaurant and lunch counter here a few weeks ago, had his business closed by the sheriff last Tuesday. Ever since the "grand opening," which was a very elaborate affair, Ford has had more of less trouble with creditors, but managed to come up smiling after each interview, but the claim of Dr. F. A. Bailey for $78.10 was the last straw, and Mr. Ford had to throw up his hands.

You can buy canned goods cheap re at Greer's than any place in Hillsboro.

John Humphreys leaves today with W. O. Donelson for Cannon Beach, near Astoria for a couple of weeks. The Hillsboro folks up around Cannon Beach and Elk Creek are having a splendid time. The only complaint coming from that vicinity is that the days should be forty-eight hours long instead of twenty-four.

Miss Grace Bath, who accompanied her mother to Newport two weeks ago, met with an accident last Friday which kept her indoors for a week. She was coming down the steep sidewalk between Newport and Nye Creek when her ankle turned and she was thrown to the walk, striking her knee on the edge of a plank, making an ugly wound. A doctor was called and the injury dressed, several stitches being necessary to close the deep cut.

Netarts is catching the tourists these days, the estimate being fully 700 campers there now with the number growing daily. On Tuesday the following persons left in a party for that delightful spot on the coast and for a couple of weeks will enjoy the fishing, hunting, bathing and the health-giving breeze of that region: J. J. Kuratli and Henry A. Kuratli, of Phillips; Mrs. E. I. Kuratli of Hillsboro; Miss Annie Hyland, of Beaverton; Miss Zoa Hayden, of Hillsboro, formerly of Portland; Miss Ida Arns, of Bethany, formerly of Waverly, Ia.; Miss Olive Wilson, Tigardville; Miss Lizzie Grossen, Phillips, and Mr. Carl Sloan, of Portland.

A lad of 10 years, small for his age, was on Wednesday caught in the act of robbing a residence in this city. Sheriff Connell was called and the young culprit taken in charge. Accompanied by the sheriff and County Attorney Tongue the lad was taken to the court house where Mr. Tongue had a good, fatherly talk with him, telling of the inevitable end of a boy that starts on the downward path of crime. The little fellow was taken to the jail, shown the iron cages, and to make the lesson more impressive, was pushed in, the gate closed with a slam and the key turned. The boy gave a shriek of terror, turned as white as death and only for the assistance of the county attorney would have fallen to the floor. The boy seemed to hardly realize that he had committed a crime, and it is doubtful if the case against him will be pushed, as it is believed the experience at the county jail will be a good lesson and one he will remember through life.

Last Friday was a red-letter day and also a lucky day in the life of Stephen Hollenbeck of Mountaindale It was along in the evening when Stephen arrived at the conclusion that it was time for him to turn his back on the temptations of a great city and depart for his home clustered amid the great firs in the rural districts, and the fact is Stephen should have gone home several hours sooner. He got into his wagon and was about to gather up the lines, when his team, a very spirited one, became frighted at something and sprang forward with the speed of a bullet. Hollenbeck was thrown over the front end of the wagon and down across the whiffletrees, where he hung as helpless as a child. The horses dashed from opposite Hotel Tualatin to the court house corner, and then along the picket fence which surrounds the court house yard. After knocking off about sixty or seventy feet of pickets, and making the fence look as if struck by a cyclone, the horses came to a stop, and one of them let his heels drive at the helpless man, who was still clinging to the pole, with the speed of lightning, barely missing his head at every clip. A crowd soon gathered and Hollenbeck was removed from his perilous position, apparently little the worse for his experience. No particular damage was done except to the court house fence, which has been repaired and is now as good as new. And this leads us to remark that Mr. Hollenbeck was playing in mighty fine luck.

There was a lawn party at Mrs. J. N. Fisher's Tuesday evening with Chinese lanterns hanging through the trees. It made a very pretty scene and all seemed to enjoy themselves immensely.

Lawn Social.

A delightful lawn party was given by Earl Fisher, to his Sunday School class and friends, at his home in Beaverton, last Monday evening. The dainty lights of Chinese lanterns sparkled through the shades of evening, and the merry voices of children sang sweet lullabies to the sparrows and robins who were resting their tired wings in the trees near by, during night's brief spell, while the stars of Heaven, with their twinkliug light were saying "all's well." A pleasant time was the order of the evening, playing games, singing, intermingled with music was appreciated by all. Refreshments were served, and during the later hours the merry ones departed to the four winds of Heaven. Those present were:

Mesdames Thomas, Gillespie and Fisher.

The Miss Ostie Hedge, Hazel Squires, Sadie Allen, Emily, Hazel and Ida Gillespie, Effie, Dora and Esther Fisher, Beulah and Pearl Titus, Mabel Summers, Anna Allen, Ruth Cady, Nellie Allen, Clara Thomas, Merle and Mildred Davies.

Messrs. Arthur Allen, Loyd Fisher, Lester Squires, Herbert Taylor, Martin Alberts and Earl Fisher.

Life at Newport.

Saturday morning last the editor of The Independent boarded the 8:44 Southern Pacific train for Corvallis to take the Corvallis & Eastern for Yaquina Bay, Newport and Nye Creek. Changing cars at Corvallis, the run of eighty miles to the coast is made in about five hours, when the train pulled up to the docks and a tired, overheated and dusty crowd made a rush for the landing and more than 245 passengers boarded the boat E. M. Richardson, and a barge tied alongside of her. The weather had been exceedingly warm all day and the passengers were about wilted, but all this was changed in a twinkle when the boat was reached. The breeze from the ocean was as cold as ice and cut like a knife. Some of the passengers were prepared for the sudden change in climate, and quickly put on heavy wraps and overcoats, but the majority were not provided, and a shivering, blue-lipped crowd stamped their feet and intimated that the party running the weather did not know his business.

The trip across the Bay takes about an hour. When the boat pulled up at the wharf in Newport we were greeted by music by the band, and fully 2,000 people were lined up and down the street to hail the coming of the boat and welcome friends, who, like ourself, were there to spend the Sabbath. It took fully fifteen minutes to edge our way through the great crowd and get fairly started up the hill for Nye Creek, where the Hillsboro people are located in cottages and tents. A description of this locality is not necessary, as almost everybody in Washington county has visited it and spent at least part of a season on the coast at this point. Suffice to say, it is a lovely spot, and an ideal place to spend the heated season.

On Sunday we spent several hours on the shore, watching the coming in and going out of the tide, searching for shells and pretty stones, and viewing with delight and wonder the great breakers as they dashed upon the shore. This being our first view of the great Pacific everything was of much interest.

The Hillsboro people are enjoying themselves to the utmost. We found J. M. Greear, his wife, daughter Pearl and son Harold, and Mrs. Claud Greear cosily located in a tent and taking solid comfort. Mr. Greear left home feeling about sick. He is getting a good healthy color in his face and is very much improved and has an appetite like a harvest hand. Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Barrett and son W. N., Jr., are enjoying life in their summer cottage, and a cosy place it is too. Both Mr. and Mrs. Barrett are looking well and feeling fine. They have fish three times a day and for lunch they have a little more fish. Mr. Barrett is a great lover of that kind of food and is feasting on it now. Tom C. Bailey was stopping at the Barrett cottage, but he returned to Hillsboro Monday.

Mrs. John Dennis arrived Saturday and will probably remain several weeks. Among the other Hillsboro people whom we either met or heard about were Mrs. J. D. Merryman, son Harold and daughter Alice. Mr. Merryman joined them Monday; Dr. A. B. Bailey, wife and son, Miss Eagleton of Portland, a niece of Mrs. Merryman, and Clifford Brown of Forest Grove; Mrs. S. B. Huston, two sons, Oliver and Carl and daughter Blanche and Fred Siegrist; Henry Wehrung and wife, Miss Eva Catching, Mrs. G. W. Patterson, Jr., and Mrs. David Corwin and little son Willie; W. J. Benson; Mrs. White of Forest Grove, Mr. Vrooman of Hillsboro; Mrs. D. W. Bath and two children, Grace and Gerald. There is the largest crowd at Newport and Nye Creek ever known, and as the weather is now warm and pleasant, the tourists are enjoying every hour.

In company of Mr. and Mrs. Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Greear, Miss Pearl Greear, Mrs. Claud Greear and Mrs. D. W. Bath we called upon Mr. S. G. Irvin, who has for more than twenty years made Nye Creek his home, and for the past four years conducted a large and popular boarding house. At present he has eighty regular boarders and could have as many more if he could accommodate them. Mr. Irvin took our party over his beautiful grounds and showed them everything of interest about the place, and invited the ladies to pluck bouquets from four long rows of beautiful dahlias growing profusely in the yard. Of course the invitation was accepted and the ladies left the handsome grounds carrying huge bunches of as lovely flowers as one sees on the coast. Mr. Irvin's long residence at Newport gives him a large acquaintance with people from all parts of the country. He is a very pleasant gentleman to meet and as an entertainer is a Chesterfield of the old school, and the visit our party had with him was very pleasant indeed.

If it is impossible for our readers to go to Newport and Nye Creek for the season, they certainly ought to go for a few days at least. The ocean breeze is filled with health and life, the surroundings are delightful, and the people sociable and accommodating.
