Cabin That Roosevelt Lived In.

The log cabin in which President Roosevelt lived for three years while he was a rancher has been placed in the Agricultural building at the Lewis and Clark exposition as a part of the state of North Dakota's exhibit. The cabin was taken apart and the pieces numbered, so that it could be put together again exactly as it was when the president lived in it as a cowboy. It stands near the south wall of the Agricultural building.

It was in 1883 that Mr. Roosevelt went to North Dakota and purchased the Maltese Cross ranch, a place on the Little Missouri river, eight miles south of the town of Medora. On taking possession Mr. Roosevelt changed the name to Chimney Butte on account of a chimney-shaped butte a short distance away. The rough cabin which he bought with the ranch was the future President's only home for nearly three years, and in it he lived the life of the cowboy.

In the cabin there will be exhibited a number of interesting mementoes of the president's life at that period. An old straw hat, which Mr. Roosevelt wore when he went to the ranch, but which was discarded shortly afterward as unsuitable to the kind of life he must lead, was found in an old sack in a corner of the cabin, and will be shown to visitors at the Western World's fair. Other relics include the president's old gun, his "chaps" boots, and the war bag in which he stored these articles when he gave up his cowboy life.

While the Roosevelt cabin probably will prove the most popular feature of its participation, North Dakota will have a most interesting display at the fair. The citizens of that state are proud of its resources, and while the legislature refused to appropriate money for representation at the Lewis and Clark exposition, they raised the required money by private subscription, under a plan proposed by Governor E. Y. Sarles.

North Dakota, being an agricultural state has placed its entire exhibit in the big Agricultural building at the exposition, where wall space 80 feet wide by 90 feet long is occupied. In this space an exhibit of grains and grasses and other farm products has been installed, with the view of showing to the world the greatness of the state as a farming country. Commissioner Warren N. Staal of Bismark is in Portland, superintending the installation of the exhibits, which is practically completed.

A Big Chunk of Copper.

A single piece of native copper, weighing 1,000 pounds, will be part of the mining display from Josephine county, at the Lewis and Clark exposition. The chunk of copper was taken from the Golden Standard ledge, the ores of which have been found to assay $18 a ton in gold and $22 in copper.

A Bad Scare.

Some day you will get a bad scare, when you feel a pain in your bowels, and fear appendicitis. Safety lies in Dr. King's New Life Pills, a sure cure for bowel and stomach diseases, such as headache, biliousness, constipation, etc. Guaranteed at all drug stores, only 25c. Try them.

A Kansas newspaper declares it has made a new discovery, "a hitherto unthought of method of preventing lobbyist from hanging about the legislature." The plan consists of putting the lobbyists in the penitentiary.
