L. F. Emmott has a hen that is doing herself proud and trying to break the world's record, with the chances all in her favor. This biddy lays a double-yolked egg every day, the last one deposited in the nest measuring 6 3/8 inches, and she isn't one of your proud, stumped hens, either.

They were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Ruey, her friend, Miss Blanche Woods of Tacoma, and two nieces, the Misses Cecil Hunter and Clara Welnes, of Shelton, Wash.

Wood was called to attend the injured man and reports that while Mr. Smith is pretty badly bruised, he is not in a serious condition.

It is said that a sucker is born every minute. The sucker factory must have been working over time last Tuesday night, for "The Great South African Salesman" yanked them in hand over fist at the opera house, and every time he landed, his prey parted with $5 or $10. And what is more wonderful the biters seemed to take pleasure in parting with their money. It was the same old game of getting something for nothing and the suckers got nothing but experience and a little fake jewelry. Just ask some of them what time it is.

The Newberg Graphic comes out this week with a beautiful souvenir issue, which is splendidly printed, handsomely illustrated and full to the brim with reading matter pertaining to that section. It is in pamphlet form, forty-eight pages and cover, is printed on fine glazed paper, and is a credit to the Graphic people and the business men of Newberg, who have patronized it liberally. That publication will do much to bring Newberg to the attention of enterprising people who are looking for a progressive town in which to locate.

On Tuesday morning a charge of insanity was filed against Louis Kraus, whose home is one-half mile south of Cornelius. In the complaint it is charged that Kraus contemplates suicide, is irritable, unstable, often wandering about the county aimlessly and using abusive language in presence of women and children, and talks irrationally at times. He drinks moderately and uses tobacco. In 1890 he was committed to the asylum in this state and was released six months later. He imagines some one is trying to poison him. He was given an examination before Dr. A. B. Bailey and Judge Rood ordered him sent to the asylum at Salem.

Daisy Byrne, by her attorney, Thos. H. Tongue, has filed in the county clerk's office papers in a suit for divorce against her husband, John Byrne. In her complaint she states that they were married at McMinnville, April 12, 1892; that for the past five years the defendant has treated her in a most cruel and inhuman manner, and has without cause heaped upon her indignities without number; that he is often cross, quarrelsome and abusive, at which time he cursed and called her vile and obscene names. She further alleges that on April 1, 1901, he struck her with a stove stick, and again, on May 30, 1905, he struck her in the face with his fist, and for the last three months has neglected her, and she has had to take in boarders as a means of support. The couple have three children, aged 7, 9 and 12 years respectively. She asks for the custody of these children, $20 a month for their support and education, and $250 alimony.

The thermometer here has registered all the way from 82 to 85 degrees in the shade this week. The days have been hot, but the nights have been delightfully cool. At Hood River the government thermometer registered 95 Tuesday afternoon. There were several slashings on fire north of the Columbia, and it will be something unusual if the flames do not get beyond control and start the first forest fires of the season.

The jury in the Williamson case is said to have stood 11 to 1, when the first report was received from Portland, 11 for conviction and 1 for acquittal. J. O. Cook, of Eugene, hanging the jury. The jury has probably come to a decision by this time (5 o'clock Thursday) or has been discharged.

She Flew the Coop.

On July 19, just a year ago, Mattie Fairbanks came out from San Francisco, from the land of sunshine and flowers, and on the same evening married Samuel Gowan, at his home in North Hillsboro, promising to love, honor and stick to him through thick and thin, weal or woe, life and death. But Mattie has gone back on her word, says Samuel in a crank and on Tuesday of this week hid herself hence, telling the deserted husband that her going was no joke, but a dead end and shut reality, and that he could act accordingly. So, through his attorney, M. B. Bump, Mr. Gowan has entered suit for a divorce. He says he may be a crank, but intimates there are others. If anybody wants to trust Mattie for worldly goods of any kind, they have a perfect right to do so, but from this date Mr. Gowan will not liquidate. It is said Mrs. Gowan has returned to San Francisco, where she will try to forget her one year of wedded bliss.

Forced to Starve.

STUNG TO DEATH.

David Campbell Dies from the Effects of a Bee-Sting.

David Campbell, a brother of Elder Campbell, and an old resident, was stung by a bee Tuesday afternoon while removing honey from a hive at the residence of J. M. Greer, Southeast Hillsboro, and died about 2 o'clock in the morning of paralysis. The bee-stinger entered at the temple and he was rendered unconscious, remaining in that condition until death. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon from the Christian church. He was 61 years of age, and came to Oregon in 1853. Pearley Campbell, a son of the deceased, was drowned last winter while out on the lake just south of town.

They Did and They Didn't.

The Portland Telegram of Tuesday evening says: A Washington county stockman makes the assertion that disease mutton is being brought in from Beaverton and sold in Portland, but he does not enter legal complaint against the man whom he alleges is thus guilty of infracting the law. Instead, he tells the newspapers. It is precisely the spirit here exemplified that makes violation of pure food laws and other laws so common. Men who obtain information of the kind referred to generally do not cause the arrest of the offenders because they do not want to accept the responsibility for such action. Instead, they go about telling other people what they know, in the faint hope that someone else, possessing the courage which they themselves lack, may take action. Enforcing of pure food laws or any laws in such cases as this is impossible.

The Journal of the 19th says, in this connection: Residents of Beaverton are exercised over the methods of Julius Hendrickson, a butcher of that town, who they say has been killing and selling sheep badly infected with the scab and in advanced stages of tuberculosis. W. A. Plate, William Hunter, Peter Carlsson, P. S. Morris, Denver Morris, J. G. Maynes and H. J. Poitras, all residents of Beaverton, have made affidavit to the fact that on Sunday last Hendrickson and his partner, A. H. Spranger, killed nine sheep that were wholly unfit to be put on the market. The affidavits state that the sheep were purchased from one Weisenback at Redville. "These sheep were in a terrible condition," said W. A. Plate. "Originally there were 120 in the flock, but there are now only 20 or 30, the remainder having been killed and sold for mutton. They were afflicted with the scab and so badly diseased with the tuberculosis that their lungs are nearly gone. "Sunday morning nine sheep were killed, and Monday morning the carcasses were brought to Portland and sold at one of the local markets. Several of those who signed the affidavits were present at the killing of the sheep, and will testify that the lungs of the animals were nearly eaten away with the disease."

State Food Commissioner Bailey made a thorough investigation of Beaverton butcher shops Tuesday and pronounces the story of W. A. Plate as wrong. "There are no diseased sheep in or around Beaverton," Mr. Bailey says. "The butcher shops and slaughterhouses of Beaverton are conducted on a sanitary basis, and the mutton shipped from that point to Portland is all right."

Crow vs. Crow.

On Monday of this week Nina Crow filed in the circuit court a suit for divorce against her husband, C. T. Crow, and names as her attorney Thos. H. Tongue of this city. Mrs. Crow states in her complaint that she and the defendant were married at Lewisville, Polk county, Oregon, October 24, 1889, and to them has been born a son, Melvin Crow, now 13 years of age. That for more than a year the defendant has treated her in a heartless, cruel and inhuman manner and heaped upon her gross and personal indignities; that he has in the presence of their child cursed and swore at her and applied to her vile and obscene names, too inbred to bear repetition. That on the 3rd day of July of the present month he did, in the presence of their son, assault the plaintiff and threatened to kill her; and again, on July 4th, he threatened to kill the plaintiff and boy and drove them from their home and they were compelled to seek refuge with a neighbor; that for more than a year he has been a gross, habitual drunkard and is almost always intoxicated, and when in that condition is quarrelsome, disagreeable and violent. Therefore, she prays that the marriage contract between them be dissolved and she be given alimony and the custody of the boy. She also asks for $20 a month for the maintenance and education of her son and an equitable division of the property, which is named at length in the complaint.

Only a couple of weeks ago trouble between the two was patched up by Mr. Crow signing a written contract with his wife that he would abstain from all intoxicating liquors, keep away from places where liquors are sold, and in the future treat his wife in a kind and husband-like manner. But alas, the promise was kept for a few days only, and Mr. Crow has been destroying all the whisky in reach for several days, until he seems past hope and beyond all redemption. It is also a sad case, for Mr. Crow is a man of education, was at one time a minister of the gospel, and could, if he would let liquor alone, have a happy home and be a good and useful citizen.

Crow visited Portland early in the week and not only loaded his tank to the brim with bug juice, but brought a valise full home with him. Trouble commenced as soon as he struck the city limits. Tuesday night he was arrested for making the street a sleeping place, and in the morning he was fined $5. He immediately loaded up again and that night went out to the farm where his wife is, and made himself not only disagreeable but dangerous, and Deputy Kane was sent out to gather him in. Since then he has been an inmate of the county jail, sent there for contempt of court, as Judge McBride forbade him to go near the farm or in any way molest his wife. About all his personal property has been attached to satisfy claims that never would have been pushed had Crow let whisky alone.

HOP HOUSE BURNED.

Hop House of County Commissioner Buchanan Destroyed by Fire.

The big hop house owned by County Commissioner Buchanan, located about half a mile southwest of Cornelius, was totally destroyed by fire Wednesday afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock. How the fire originated is not known, but the flames were first noticed coming out of the roof. The loss, at this writing, is not known, but will foot up to a considerable sum. Out of fifty-five bales of hops which Mr. Buchanan had stored in the building, but ten were saved. It is said he carried an insurance of $3,000.
