

SORES THAT DO NOT HEAL

Whenever a sore or ulcer does not heal, no matter on what part of the body it may be, it is because of a poisoned condition of the blood. This poison may be the remains of some constitutional trouble, the effect of a long spell of sickness, which has left this vital stream polluted and weak, or because the natural refuse matter of the body, which should pass off through the channels of nature, has been left in the system and absorbed into the blood. It does not matter how the poison became entrenched in the blood, the fact that the sore is there and does not heal is evidence of a deep, underlying cause. There is nothing that causes more discomfort, worry and anxiety than a festering, discharging sore that resists treatment. The very sight of it is abhorrent and suggests pollution and disease; besides the time and attention required to keep it clean and free from other infection. As it lingers, slowly eating deeper into the surrounding flesh, the sufferer grows morbidly anxious, fearing it may be cancerous. Some of those afflicted with an old sore or ulcer know how useless it is to expect a cure from salves, powders, lotions and other external treatment. Through the use of these they have seen the place begin to heal and scab over, and were congratulating themselves that they would soon be rid of the detestable thing, when a fresh supply of poison from the blood would cause the inflammation and old discharge to return and the sore would be as bad or worse than before. Sores that do not heal are not due to outside causes; if they were, external treatment would cure them. They are kept open because the blood is steeped in poison, which finds an outlet through these places. While young people, and even children, sometimes suffer with non-healing sores, those most usually afflicted are persons past middle life. Often, with them, a wart or mole on the face inflames and begins to ulcerate from a little rough handling; or a deep, offensive ulcer develops from a slight cut or bruise. Their vital energies and powers of resistance have grown less, and circulation weaker, and perhaps some taint in the blood, which was held in check by their stronger constitutions of early life, shows itself. It is well to be suspicious of any sore that does not heal readily, because the same germ that produces Cancer is back of every old sore and only needs to be left in the circulation to produce this fatal disease.

There is only one way to cure these old sores and ulcers, and that is to get every particle of the poison out of the blood. For this purpose nothing equals S. S. S. It goes down to the very bottom of the disease, cleanses the blood and makes a permanent cure. S. S. S. enriches and freshens the circulation so that it carries new, strong blood to the diseased parts and allows the place to heal naturally. When this is done the discharge ceases, the sore scabs over and fills with healthy flesh, and the skin regains its natural color. Book on Sores and ulcers and any medical advice desired will be furnished without charge.

Proposed Teddy's Greatness.
More entertaining, perhaps, and equally interesting, are the anecdotes which are told about our President by the Minkwitz family. Frau Fischer distinctly recollects that once she prophesied the future greatness of young Teddy. She says: "One day I had a conversation with Mrs. Roosevelt, who said to me, 'I wonder what is going to become of my Teddy?' I replied, 'You need not be anxious about him. He will surely be one day a great professor, or, who knows, he may become even President of the United States.' Mrs. Roosevelt rebuked me. She said such a thing was impossible, and asked how I could have struck upon such an absurdity. But, perhaps on account of my impulsive remark, I have since continually watched Theodore Roosevelt's career, and have always been glad when he has made a step forward in the world."—From "Roosevelt's German Days," in Success Magazine.

K C Baking Powder.
A popular and efficient baking powder requires two things—first, that the food made with it shall be absolutely wholesome; second, that it shall be sold at a reasonable price. K C Baking Powder, made by the Jacques Mfg. Company, of Chicago, is the best example of such a baking powder at present on the market. K C is sold everywhere under a $500,000 guarantee of its healthfulness and purity. Its price, one cent an ounce, is most reasonable for a high-grade baking powder, and millions of pounds of K C have been sold at this figure all over the country.

Humorous

Tommy—Have you met the new teacher yet? Teddy—Yes; after school this noon. He won—Ex.

"Say, father, what is a 'nobody'?"
"A nobody, my son, is a prominent woman's husband."—Washington Life.

—Do you think Marie's photographs do her justice? Bees—Yes; justice tempered with mercy.—Detroit Tribune.

Youngwed—I want accommodations for my wife. Hotel Clerk—Suite? Youngwed—You bet your life she is.—Washington Life.

Rejected Suitor—I may be poor now, but there was a time when I rode in my carriage. The Girl—Yes, when your mother pushed it.—Grit.

"Law, is it true that death loves a shining mark?" I suppose so. Why? "Nothing, only I should think you'd feel a good deal safer if you wore a wig."—Chicago Tribune.

First Old Maid—This census report says there are 3,000,000 bachelors in the United States. Second Old Maid—Yes, and the mean old thing doesn't give their address either.—Washington Life.

Pignus—To tell the truth, we have to treat our cook as a member of the family. Dismukes—Great Scott! That would never go in our house. We have to treat ours as a visitor.—Washington Life.

Al de Mustard—Your wife's costume to-night is charming. It simply begs for a description. Justin de Bunch—And that reminds me of a conundrum—why am I like a description.—Scissors.

McCush—Is this true that I bear—De. Mush—That I'm engaged? Yes. Congratulate me! McCush—I can't congratulate you on marrying any girl who is fool enough to want you.—Cleveland Leader.

"Mrs. Spudworth, it seems to me," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "is rather inclined to loquacity." "Still," replied her hostess, as she straightened the $1,900 rug, "for a person as tall as her it ain't so bad as though she was shorter."—Chicago Record-Herald.

"That's an auction piano your daughter's got, isn't it?" asked the sarcastic woman next door. "No, indeed," replied the proud mother indignantly. "What made you think that?" "Oh, probably because it's going, going, going," all the time.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Hi Tragedy—Hamm made his debut as a star last night, and I hear his audience was very cold. Love Comedy—Yes, they were at first. Hi Tragedy—Ah! only at first? Love Comedy—Yes; then they remembered that they had paid to get in, and they got hot.—Catholic Standard.

Mrs. Ikk—I wish you wouldn't be such a tight-wad! I haven't a thing to wear. Mr. Ikk—Blinkin' Borealis! Why, woman, you have the finest seal coat in two degrees of latitude! Mrs. Ikk—And what of it? There goes Mrs. Blubberton swaggering around in a real seal coat with plush trimmings.—Puck.

"No," said Miss Winthrop-Bradley Winthrop, "your ancestors did not come over in the 'Mayflower,' as mine did, and I cannot marry you." "Do you know why they did not?" replied Mr. Johnstone Smythe de Jones. "Well, I'll tell you. They were not the kind of people who travel on excursions." Saying which he strode haughtily from the room.—Washington Life.

A man who was "wanted" by the police had been photographed in six different positions, and the pictures were duly circulated among the police. The chief of police in a country town wrote to police headquarters of the city in search of the malefactor a few days after the set of portraits had been issued as follows: "I duly received the pictures of the six miscreants whose capture is desired. I have arrested five of them, and the sixth is under observation and will be secured shortly."

Kiss Deer with Fat.
"A few weeks ago, just before I left for Denver, we had venison for dinner which our cook killed with his fist. Game is so plentiful that all one has to do is to stand on his back porch and use a revolver to obtain almost anything in the way of meat that one could wish for."
H. W. Long, vice president of the Denver-Honduras Banana Company, was telling of the attractions of his Honduras home, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"The manner in which our cook obtained the venison was this," continued Mr. Long. "We had been having high water in the river which flows through our plantation, and one morning our cook noticed a herd of half a dozen deer swimming across it. He jumped into a canoe and killed one with a blow of his fist. However, deer are not the only game which we have a chance to try a shot at."
"Leopards, alligators, beautiful tropical birds of every description, snakes of wonderful hues, are all numerous. Wild ducks can be secured in plenty—a few hours' shooting brought me fifty the other day—and parrots, which make excellent eating, having much the flavor of squabs, are also plentiful."

Enlightening the Landlady.
"Coffee is a nerve-destroying," intimated the penurious landlady as she saw a movement on the part of a new boarder to request a second cup of coffee.
"How I wish you'd drink a lot of it," suggested the bachelor, who had been with the house since its inception.
"Why?" asked the landlady, and the other boarders delayed their mastications.
"Then you wouldn't have the nerve to serve this concoction which hardly stains the water in which it is diluted."—Columbus Dispatch.

A HOPELESS LAND.

Caste is a great social organization which governs and directs the Hindu of India in every action of his daily life. There are four fundamental divisions of caste—the priestly or Brahmin, the warrior, the trading, and the laboring; and these, again, are divided into sub-sections numbering thousands. Below the laboring caste there is a substratum which is termed Pariah or outcast. The Pariah, says the author of "Indian Life in Town and Country," is not much more than a sanitary machine which performs the functions of a scavenger.

All these castes are hereditary. A priest's son is a priest, a soldier's a soldier, a carpenter's a carpenter, a scavenger's a scavenger. There is no question of "What shall we do with our boys?" in Hindustan; that problem has been solved in advance for two thousand years. For a sire to start his son in any other calling than his own would be "against his caste," and there all argument ends. For caste is both social and religious, and includes the calling as well as the creed.

A Hindu cannot change his caste, although he may be expelled from it; his social status is fixed forever at the time of his birth, and he can only fall, never rise. This has tended to make the Hindu an ambitious race. Caste will admit no infusion of new blood, and when the same exclusive spirit is imported into the ordinary dealings of life, you arrive at that stagnant conservatism which is called "custom" in the East.

Caste is restricted to the Hindus, but custom is universal. There is the Indian peasant's plow. The overwhelming majority of the inhabitants of India are dependent on the land, and their crops would be much increased by better methods of cultivation.

The plow in use is an implement which merely scratches the surface of the earth—an heirloom from remotest antiquity. A new plow was introduced by an enterprising firm of manufacturers, and lent free for trial broadcast over a province. It did the work more thoroughly, and was offered at a price within the peasant's means. But it did not "catch on," simply because the plowman could not get at his bullocks' tails to twist them. The perior tillage, the increase of crop, could not compensate for the relinquishment of this time-honored custom.

There was a contractor engaged in a railway excavation, who recognized that the soil could be far more expeditiously removed in wheelbarrows than by a team of oxen. He introduced a new method of removing the earth, and the contractor was very agreeable. Why, he talked so pleasantly about the weather.

"You don't say, Maria?"
"Yes, and I bought a package. Then he complimented the baby and I bought another package."
"Hi!"
"Presently he said our vestibule was kept in better order than any in the neighborhood and then I bought another package."
"Great Scott!"
"Before he left he said he thought I was your daughter instead of being old enough to be your wife. Then I bought three additional packages. Oh, it don't do any harm to encourage a real gentleman when you meet one."

MOTHER'S DAY.
Her Big Boy Was Her Attentive Beau for the Afternoon.
"Awfully sorry I can't stop to see you, old man," said Harold Massey. He was locking the office door on a Saturday afternoon. Tom Griggs, for whom also it was "early closing," had come round to have a little chat and perhaps a leisurely lunch at the club.
"I'm going to take mother to the matinee," said Harold, as they walked along together. "So I've promised to put in an appearance at lunch."
"Oh, telephone her, and say you're not coming," said Tom. "She's got her ticket, hasn't she?"
"What? Mother? No. It's here in my pocket, if I haven't lost it."
"Well, you're a duffer. Why didn't you see she had the ticket and let her meet you? My sister's going with me this afternoon, but she meets me in the lobby, and glad enough of the chance. Work it better next time. See you there, maybe."

They parted, Tom for his comfortable luncheon at the club and a half hour's chat with a man he knew, and Harold to go home.
His mother met him in the hall. She was a little old lady with white hair and a happy face. She was opening a big box of violets.
"A gentleman's card," said she, pursing her lips like a girl. "Who can it be?" She read the name, "Mr. Harold Massey." Then she laughed, and Harold laughed. It was an old drama between them. "Like 'em, mother?" asked Harold.
"I guess I do," she responded, sparkling. "I shall wear 'em."
Harold ran upstairs to dress, and came down resplendent. When he and his mother left the house for their afternoon there were, he told her, "as fine a couple as ever walked down Beacon street." He carried her opera glasses and fan, and she wore the violets. He helped her gallantly over a puddle.
"Harold," said she, "you're a splendid beau!"
"You're a splendid girl, mother," said Harold.—Youth's Companion.

Hope for the Family.
"I suppose," said the friend of the family, "you will go into business and live up to your father's reputation."
"Not me," replied the son of the multimillionaire beef packer. "I shall go into society and try to live it down."

SHIPYARDS ARE BUSY.

Army of 10,000 Men Rushing Work on New Vessels for Navy.
While the attention of the public is attracted only at intervals to the three big shipyards on the Delaware River, there is an army of 10,000 men daily hammering, forging and welding, bending every energy toward the completion of the great vessels under construction here, says the Philadelphia Ledger. Never have the employes of Cramps, Neale & Levy's and the New York Shipbuilding Company been busier than at present. Particularly is this true of Cramps, where twelve different vessels are under construction. This yard alone is employing 5,300 workmen.

The greater part of this work is being done for Uncle Sam, seven ships being under way here. Two of these, the armored cruiser Tennessee at Cramps, and her sister ship, the Washington, which is being built at the South Camden yards of the New York Shipbuilding Company, have attracted attention by the efforts which the respective companies are making to finish the contract first. Both are now nearing completion, with the Tennessee slightly in the lead.
Besides the work on the warships six large passenger steamships are also being built by the Cramps company. Four of these are for the New York and Cuban Mail line, while the two remaining go to the Southern Pacific Company.

Gift of Time.
"One day," related the jolly hobo, "I met a man on the street and I told him if he would give me thirty quail I would show him how to eat dum in thirty days."
"And did he oblige you?" asked his companion of the ties.
"No; he said he couldn't give me thirty quail, but he'd give me thirty days. He was a judge."

WHEN PEARY PRACTICED.

A man who sets out to reach the north pole should know how to endure hardships, and Commander Peary long ago began to learn. A prominent citizen of Maine, himself a lover of outdoor life, tells the Lewiston Journal that when Peary was a young man it was a common thing for him to take "a camping outfit of a blanket and a lunch" and start for the mountains bordering upon Maine and New Hampshire.

There, alone, he would pass days exploring ravines, ledges and the deep, secluded spots, cooking his own meals and feasting upon the trout with which the streams abounded. He never built a camp; he simply rolled himself in a blanket to sleep, but he would come out brown and hardy.

On one of these occasions he had taken a canoe to the head waters of Cold river, and after passing a few days came down to Saco and stopped at about 5 o'clock for a word with those in my camp. We expected to have the pleasure of his company for the night, thinking that he would welcome hearty meals and a good bed. But, "No," he said. "I never sleep indoors when on these trips."

It was a cold, windy November night, but he bade us good-by and went down the river. The next morning beside a stone wall, we found his camping place. A few smoky embers told us where he had cooked his breakfast, and a spot on the grass six and a half feet long and free from white frost showed us where he had slept.

A Spelling Rule.
At a school inspection some of the boys found a difficulty in the correct placing of the letters "i" and "e" in such words as "believe," "receive," etc. When the inspector said blandly: "My boys, I will give you an infallible rule, one I invariably use myself. The pupils were all attention, and even the master pricked up his ears. The inspector continued: "It is simply this. Write the 'i' and 'e' exactly alike and put the dot in the middle over them."—London Telegraph.

Not an Index of Power.
Young Mr. Whimper, who had a worthy ambition for public office, had closed his canvass of his native State. He felt sure of his nomination, and was waiting, in good spirits, at his father's residence to receive it.

He had been asked to tell his experiences as a "spellbinder," and had willingly consented.
"But, on the whole," was his modest conclusion, "I was rather successful. And what gratified me particularly was that in the places where I was least known I met with the warmest reception."
It was several seconds before Mr. Whimper understood why his father and the girls laughed, and even his mother smiled.

THE LAXATIVE OF KNOWN QUALITY
There are two classes of remedies: those of known quality and which are permanently beneficial in effect, acting gently, in harmony with nature, when nature needs assistance; and another class, composed of preparations of unknown, uncertain and inferior character, acting temporarily, but injuriously, as a result of forcing the natural functions unnecessarily. One of the most exceptional of the remedies of known quality and excellence is the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., which represents the active principles of plants, known to act most beneficially, in a pleasant syrup, in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to contribute their rich, yet delicate, fruity flavor. It is the remedy of all remedies to sweeten and refresh and cleanse the system gently and naturally, and to assist one in overcoming constipation and the many ills resulting therefrom. Its active principles and quality are known to physicians generally, and the remedy has therefore met with their approval, as well as with the favor of many millions of well informed persons who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual experience that it is a most excellent laxative remedy. We do not claim that it will cure all manner of ills, but recommend it for what it really represents, a laxative remedy of known quality and excellence, containing nothing of an objectionable or injurious character.
There are two classes of purchasers: those who are informed as to the quality of what they buy and the reasons for the excellence of articles of exceptional merit, and who do not lack courage to go elsewhere when a dealer offers an imitation of any well known article; but, unfortunately, there are some people who do not know, and who allow themselves to be imposed upon. They cannot expect its beneficial effects if they do not get the genuine remedy.
To the credit of the druggists of the United States be it said that nearly all of them value their reputation for professional integrity and the good will of their customers too highly to offer imitations of the
