BREAD SUPERSTITIONS.

Peculiar Ones Still Prevail in Parts of Rural France.

There are some curious superstitions about baking bread in the course of religious seasons which seem so easy to prove fallacious that one has difficulty in understanding why they are still believed. One would think that some day a mistake would occur and the discovery be made that there was no force in them. Probably, owing to the constitution of the believers, the failure of the expected result would be ascribed to some supernatural cause rather than the real one, and the belief would be continued. Most of these superstitions are found in France, the greatest bread eating country on the globe.

For instance, in Upper Brittany bread baked on Good Friday, it is declared becomes black. In Charante it is held that he who eats of bread baked on All Saints' day will become diseased. The flames will burst out of the oven in one's face if bread is baked on the Feast of St. Nicholas, say the good people of St. Aube, so it is not done. In Burgundy the people believe that if bread is baked in the course of Rogation Week all bread baked during the remainder of the year will turn mouldy. The inhabitants of the Black Mountains believe the same thing. The Sicilians refuse to bake on Good Friday, because they fear that in some manner they will burn the Savior.

The beliefs which other Europeans spread to have in early times demonstrated how illogical is all this superstition. The used to think that bread baked on Good Friday would not grow mouldy, and the hot cross bun was included in this belief. Some one has shrewdly suggested that the spice preserved them. A piece of bread baked on this holy day, was supposed to have miraculous powers if preserved. The house containing it would not catch fire. It was useful for preventing whooping cough, and if fed to cattle ill of certain diseases would cure them. The natural deduction from all this is that in one country bread baked on a certain day will work ill and that baked in another on the same day will work good, which means that bread baked on that day is about the same as bread baked on any other.

TRANSFORMING CLOTHES POST.

How It Was Made Part of a Beautiful Flower Garden.

Long ago, when we only dreamed of a garden, we had set our hearts upon certain ideals. Our garden was to have an arch, a column and a pergola, and we were able to construct something to call by each of these names, using mostly such material as was at hand. The clothes posts being with us to stay, we tried to utilize them to advantage, says a writer in the Garden Magazine.

We had done with rigid formality, and to introduce a break the two posts nearer the house were moved further apart and out of line while the other two were brought nearer to each other. Each was incased in extra-heavy chicken wire, and provided at the top with a hook and cleat fastened by bolts going through the post. At the base of the first post are three overhanging honeycombs (juncosera heckerotti). The first year the bulbs of this vine were a mass of little green bugs which neither liquid nor powder would kill. The following March the vine was sprayed with kerosene soap, which seemed to be a successful treatment, as there have been no insects since that first attack.

The second post was placed five feet from a lower bed and an additional support set in the bed; both were then connected by an arch made of iron such as would be used for wagon tires. The ends were fastened to the posts by bolts, and cross-pieces of light iron, riveted about eighteen inches apart, to support chicken wire one foot wide.

The remaining posts were made to form a small pergola, and connected by irons as before to posts in a parallel bed. In this case the iron strips are supplemented by a bar of angle iron along the top, to prevent sagging under the weight of the wooden crosspieces. Japanese clematis (clematis paniculata) grows around all these posts, and it lifts them out best to plant at least two roots at the base of each, in February trimming one vine back to the top of the post and cutting off the other at the ground level. In this way the taller plant starts, soon covers the top, and the lower plant clothes the post where the stalks of the other are comparatively bare.

Tonic Effect of Music.

Good music is a powerful tonic to many people, especially those suffering from melancholia. It lifts them out of their sullen moods, dispels gloom and despondency, kills discouraged feelings and gives new hope, new life and new vigor. It seems to put a great many people into proper tune. It gives them the keynote of truth and beauty, strikes the chords of harmony, dispels discord from the life, scatters clouds and brings sunshine. All good music is a character builder, because its constant suggestion of harmony, order and beauty puts the mind into a normal attitude. Music clears the cobwebs out of many minds so that they can think better, act better and live better.

The Real Question.

"I know, old chap," said Dobbs, "she has her faults, and a temper, and all that; but I—I love her and can't live without her."
"Just so," calmly replied his friend; "but the question isn't that. Can you live with her?"

His Advice.

"What do you think we had better do to stop the railroad?" asked the man who is patriotic but nervous.
"Don't try to stop 'em," answered the man who is always in a hurry. "Encourage 'em to run faster and oftener."—Washington Star.

Troubles seem greater after night, and perhaps it is for this reason that troubles are greater to the old than to the young: Age is the twilight of life when commonplace things assume fantastic shapes.

If you have time to boast about being worked to death, you have not much to do.

SSS THE GREATEST OF ALL TONICS

The ingredients that enter into S. S. S. and the method of combining and preparing them so that they build up and strengthen every part of the body, make it the greatest of all tonics. S. S. S. is nature's remedy—PURELY VEGETABLE—and while it is restoring the lost appetite, overcoming that tired, run-down feeling, and other ailments common to Spring, which warn us that it is necessary to take a tonic, it is purifying the blood of all poisons and waste matters so that it can supply to the system the strength and nourishment it needs to keep it in perfect condition during the depressing summer months that are to follow.

Spring is the season when most every one needs a tonic. It is nature's time for renewing and changing; and as everything puts on new life, the sap rises in vegetation, the earth thaws out from its winter freezes, and all respond to Spring's call to purge and purify themselves, there is a great change also takes place in our bodies. The blood endeavors to throw off the poisons and accumulations which have formed in the system, and been absorbed by it, from the inactive winter life, and calls upon every member to assist in the elimination. The system is often unequal to the struggle, the appetite grows fickle, the energies give way, the spirits are depressed, and a general run-down condition is the result.

Then the body must have assistance—it must be strengthened and aided by a tonic, and S. S. S. is the ideal one. Being made entirely from roots, herbs and barks, it does not disagreeably affect the system in any way as do most of the so-called tonics on the market, which contain Potash or some other harmful mineral ingredient to derange the stomach and digestion, unfavorably affect the bowels, or otherwise damage the health. S. S. S. tones up the stomach and digestion and assists in the assimilation of food; it rids the system of that always-tired, worn-out feeling, and imparts vigor and tone to every part of the body. It re-establishes the healthy circulation of the blood, stimulates the sluggish organs, and calms the unstrung nerves which make one feel that he is on the verge of prostration. S. S. S. gives an appetite and relish for food that nothing else does, and by its use we can find ourselves with as hearty, hungry an appetite in Spring as at any other season.

It acts more promptly and gives better and more lasting results than any other remedy, and is absolutely safe because of its vegetable purity. Dyspeptic, irritable, nervous, debilitated people will find S. S. S. is just the medicine that is needed for the purification of the blood, which, from its diseased or impure condition, is causing their trouble, as well as for toning up and helping the entire system. When you take your tonic this Spring do not experiment, but get the best—the tonic with forty years of success behind it, and the one endorsed by the best people all over the country—S. S. S., THE GREATEST OF ALL TONICS. It is necessary at this time, when the system is depleted and weakened at every point, that the right remedy be used—one that is especially adapted to the condition, and S. S. S. has proved itself to be this remedy for many years. If it is taken at the first sign of Spring the system will be so built up and strengthened that the disagreeable affections of the season will not be felt as warmer weather comes on.
