

The Pacific Monthly for July. The Pacific Monthly for July is a splendid number. In its bright, timely, interesting and elaborately illustrated articles, it is, as usual, without a superior in the entire country. The color work in this number is unusually effective, and it breathes the very spirit of the West. The Pacific Monthly is going forward with tremendous leaps and bounds and is becoming one of the conspicuous facts in the publishing world. From the standpoint of interesting, up-to-date stories, splendid illustrations and attractive make-up and in general interest and value, The Pacific Monthly stands in a class by itself.

The July issue contains the usual number of short stories and departments, with, however, a very conspicuous innovation in the latter. A new department, "Interviews," is added and the editors promise that it will be different from anything in any other publication. "The Spirit of the West" is an unusually interesting article written by Professor F. G. Young of the University of Oregon, as is also the article by Mr. Henry P. Bowie on Japanese Writing, which is illustrated in the most unusual manner. The Fourth of July is remembered in an article by Mr. Sumner W. Matteson an "The Fourth of July Celebration at Fort Belknap." On the whole, the issue is varied in text and illustration and will do much to emphasize the high standing of The Pacific Monthly, which is unquestionably the leading Western Magazine. Mr. John Fleming Wilson becomes associate editor with the July number, and Lily E. White, art editor. Mr. Chas. H. Jones is advertising manager.

The sawmill owned by John Callahan, located three miles west of Gaston, in Patton Valley, was completely destroyed by fire July 5. The loss totals about $6,000, the mill being valued at $4,000, and lumber destroyed being worth $2,000. There was no insurance. The mill was built about two years ago, had a capacity of 12,000 feet of lumber a day and employed eight men. When the mill was erected a small depression near the fire-back was left, and it is thought the gradual accumulation of particles of wood filled this depression and heat from the fireback started the blaze.

Word was received by The News this morning, that after running a bear for about an hour and a half, the Garrigus Bros., of Banks, brought him to bay. In the struggle that followed A. B. Garrigus was severely bitten in the leg and had nearly all his clothes torn off. The bite is painful but is not considered dangerous. Quite a crowd was out to see the big bear.—Forest Grove News.
