DEATH OF

WM. TIGARD

BODY CANNOT BE FOUND.

Letter From Fred Gault Giving Full Particulars of the Sad Accident.

Following is a copy of a letter received by C. F. Tigard from Fred Gault giving particulars about the drowning of his son Willie:

Saskatoon, Canada, Aug. 16.—Dear Charles—Your telegram received this morning.

We have not found Willie yet. Have had the river dragged for miles in the vicinity of the place, where he went down. But the current is so strong that he may be ten miles away, and then again he might go into a hole, and be covered with sand and never be found, as there are lots of them in the river.

We are going to take a boat and go down the river but have no hopes of finding him until the ninth day, and maybe not then.

The way it happened—We went down to the river Sunday afternoon to fish. Ada and the children were along.

Willie and I thought we would take a bath before fishing so in we went.

The water was very shallow not up to our knees. And we began to wade out into the stream.

I was seventy-five or eighty feet up the river from him. And he said to me that when we got to a sand bank out in the river, that he would run me a foot race. I said alright, but told him to be careful and feel every step he took. He said alright, but thought it was alright and that we could lead the pony across and go to Druudum, a town across the river. Just as he said this down he went. I saw him go in so I started to him just as he came up.

I told him to put one hand on me and to keep cool and not get scared, but he made a grab and caught me around the right arm and waist and then we were both helpless and we went down together. God! I thought we never would get to the bottom, but when we did, I began to strangle, and began to try to get loose from his grip, which was like a vice. How I got loose I'll never know. I went to the top, and was so full of water that I went down right away, but did not go so far, and when I came up, I began to try to get ashore, but was so weak that I didn't stay up long, and started to go down, when just as the water was to my chin my feet touched bottom and I crawled out, so weak I could not walk.

When I got so I could move, I went and got some men and they searched till dark but it was no use, we could not find him.

I will write to you again next week.

Yours,
FRED GAULT.

C. F. Tigard arrived home from Saskatoon Canada August 29, where he had been for the past two weeks, helping in the search for the body of his son, but they could find no trace of him and had to come home without him. It is thought he was washed in a hole and covered with sand. Willie Tigard was a very highly respected young man, and loved by all who knew him, he had a bright sunny disposition and was never so happy as when doing good to others. He will be sadly missed as he was the light of Tigardville when at home.

There is a cloud over the hearts of the people of Tigardville and you can hear the expression on every hand, "Oh what will we do without Willie."

Mr. C. F. Tigard and family have the sympathy of their many friends and acquaintances.

Gans really deserved to be whipped. A negro who will so far disgrace himself as to meet, even in the prize ring, a white man low enough to consent to put himself on an equality with the negro, is beneath contempt. Gans is a disgrace to his race.—Salem Capital.

PROSPECTS FOR A CITY PARK

COUNCIL WILL VISIT THE SITE

Today at 2 O'Clock—Citizens Are Requested to Go Along and Look Over the Grounds.

There is now a chance for the city of Hillsboro to own its own park, and if the matter is taken up at once and pushed, the thing is done. No one questions but this city should have a park and the time to get it now, for never again can land be purchased for what it is now offered.

J. W. Shute, the banker, has made a proposition to the city council to let them have the land adjoining the Southern Pacific railway, just north of the track near Fifth street, for $1,600 to be used for a park. He proposes to allow the city the use of the land for this purpose with the understanding that it is improved and beautified, providing the city pays the taxes and the cost of improving. As soon as the city chooses to pay the amount asked for the land, with the addition of 6 per cent interest, a deed will be given to the city.

The council will visit the proposed park today at 2 o'clock for the purpose of looking over the site and decide on what is to be done. Mayor Cornelius wants everybody interested to go with the council today as it depends on the citizens whether Mr. Shute's offer will be accepted. A large number of our people should attend this meeting on the grounds. We need a park and now is the time to get it. Remember the hour—today at 2 o'clock.

A Church on Wheels.
They are holding religious services in a railroad coach at the Southern Pacific station. The extra long car that stands near the depot building is the one in use for the purpose. It is built and operated for this use, and is called a chapel car. Though circuses, theatrical companies and other traveling organizations have often appeared here in their own special cars, this is a novelty in religious work. It is neatly fitted up with a pulpit and seats and has a capacity of 100. It is equipped with an organ, phonograph and other appliances incidental to religious work. It is in charge of Rev. and Mrs. Herminston of San Francisco, and is sent out by the American Baptist Publication Society.

Religious services are held each evening at 7:30 except Saturday, and are of but an hours duration. The Sunday services are to be in the local Baptist church, and will occupy both the morning and evening hour. Those who have seen the chapel car describe it as very convenient and comfortable and is a literal church on wheels.—Corvallis Times.

Mr. Bryan is ready to enter into an alliance with England, for the purpose of preserving peace throughout the world. We may fear the great English-American alliance would at times be forced to fight for this peace. Besides, if there was one thing more than another that moved the great Jefferson to indignation and wrath, it was the suggestion, or even the thought, of an alliance with England, for any purpose. He always wrote and spoke of England in terms of detestation and abhorrence. It was a country "totally without morality," "lost in corruption" and "hostile to liberty wherever it endeavors to show its head." We fear that Mr. Bryan is departing from the faith that was delivered to the saints.—Oregonian.

Japan Farmers.

Straw which American farmers throw away Japan farmers would utilize.

Whatever grows or passes to decay is of value to him, he managing to get along and be happy and contented on very little.

One who is the possessor of a horse and cart is considered to be wealthy. It seems very odd to us, but most of the horses belonging to the farmers wear shoes made of rice straw, even the clumsiest horses.

A farmer taking goods to market will take extra shoes with him to reshoe the horse in the event of one pair wearing out. The shoes are tied around the ankle with straw rope made of rice straw, braided so that they form a sole for the foot about half an inch thick.

The average shoe usually lasts about eight miles of travel.

In Japan in former times it was usual to measure the distance by the number of shoes it took to cover the distance. The horse's hat and harness is also made of the rice straw.

They are too poor to buy harness like American farmers would have. The farmers wear shoes, hats, and raincoats made of rice straw.

The Japanese farmer usually dwells in a comfortable, inviting, faultlessly clean home, without a particle of dust or dirt.

The transparent paper walls of his house, made of bark from the mitsu-mata shrubs, floods his dwelling with light and keeps out the wind.

He enjoys good food served in dainty but inexpensive dishes made of native woods.

Even in the houses of the poorest there are no signs of poverty. There is no squalor in agricultural Japan. The humblest peasant farmer is clean, industrious and comfortable. The area of fence corners abandoned on many American farms to wild mustard, pig weed, etc., would furnish a comfortable living to a Japanese farmer.

In Japan, when a Japanese farmer permits a telegraph pole to be erected on his land, he has made a great concession to modern reform.

Only the exceedingly rich have fences around their farms. Not because of the cost of the fence, but the value of the ground the post and picket would consume.

If a border is required it is customary to plant mulberry trees.

A farm laborer only receives from 10 to 15 cents a day and rice, but, nevertheless, is happy and contented.

THOUSANDS WILL GO TO THE FAIR

SALEM, SEPT. 10th TO 15th.

The Coming Annual State Fair Sure to Be the Greatest in Its History—Immense Attendance.

Never before in the history of the Oregon State Board of Agriculture have so many people signified their intention to attend the annual display. Never before have so many concessions been granted so long in advance. From over all the state comes the word that the 45th annual exhibition which opens September 10 will find more people present on opening day than on any opening day in its history.

The friendly rivalry that is found at our fairs is a great incentive that urges and induces the various breeders and producers to make the attempt to excel in their particular lines of industry.

The Oregon State Fair, which will be held at Salem September 10 to 15, inclusive, has ceased to be a mere place of amusement only, and has assumed the air of an educational institution, while at the same time there will be found sufficient amusement of an innocent nature, together with an auditorium in which each night will be given lectures, vocal and instrumental music, impersonations, up-to-date moving pictures; in fact, a modern theater.

There is, however, a growing interest in the State fair. Exhibitors are taking hold in earnest, and from all directions words of encouragement are received and a large attendance is assured.

The entries in the livestock department this year will exceed those of former years. Notwithstanding the management has provided extra stalls and pens, there will be a shortage. The poultry section of the fair has increased very rapidly, and to meet the demands of this section some changes are necessary.

The dairy department this year will be of unusual interest, and is now crowded to its full capacity. In connection with this department there will be daily demonstrations of a modern application for milking mechanically, science having perfected a practical machine which does the work perfectly.

Racing promises to excel all previous years. All races (both harness and running) are well filled with horses that have records that will meet the demand of the most critical.

Thursday, September 13, has been set aside as Portland day at the fair, when excursion trains will be so operated from the city as to permit of a visit to the fair with sufficient time to view all the exhibits and not be rushed. A special rate of $1.50 for the round trip, including entrance to the grounds, has been made by the Southern Pacific Company.

The State fair management has at its disposal for premiums in the various departments $25,000, of which $10,000 is a state appropriation, and this amount is far too small to meet the growing demands. Several departments of the State fair are very much in need of encouragement. The educational section is sadly neglected, especially that of schools. The exhibit of work of the high schools would be of great value, as was shown by the display in connection with the Lewis and Clark Exposition, where this particular section was eagerly sought by the patrons of the various schools throughout the state and was of much interest to all.

According to published statements, the figures here given represent the average wages paid school teachers in some of the counties of Oregon. This item will no doubt be read with interest by teachers and school patrons generally: Benton, $33.98; Coos, $40.85; Douglas, $37.55; Josephine, $41; Lane, $38; Lincoln, $32; Linn, $40; Malheur, $47.13; Marion, $40.22; Polk, $40; Washington, $41.23; Yamhill, $39.06.

George W. Trefen, a well-known Ashland attorney, had a narrow call while lost in the brush at the head of Rogue river during last week. He was camped with his family in the Crater Lake reserve, and went to hunt a horse which had strayed away from camp. He lost the trail and wandered through the brush for five days, during which time he had but a handful of berries and one frog to eat. A searching party found him lying exhausted on the bank of Red Blanket creek, ten miles from where he started.
