How to Work Buttonholes.

When working a buttonhole in a heavy cloth, or one that pulls and frays, it saves much trouble to work the hole by basting thread, then stitching close to this on the machine, putting in two rows just the length of the buttonhole to be. Cut with a sharp penknife between these lines and work closely in the ordinary way over the machine stitching. This buttonhole will keep its shape and remain intact as long as the cloth holds together.

HAS THIRTY ACRES OF DAISIES.

Farmer Planted "Grass Seed," but Flowers Sprang Up Instead.

A field of daisies, millions upon millions of them—daisies that cannot be exterminated and which are growing thicker and thicker each year—this is the property of Jacob Basey, whose farm lies five miles southeast of Kansas City, says the Star. The daisies came to his farm by accident and they refuse to leave. He has spent money in an effort to kill them, but they cling tenaciously to the soil and now he has abandoned it to them.

Basey is a well-to-do farmer. He owns 100 acres of land in the vicinity of his home, and the Marlborough car line passes through his holdings. He has fields and timbered land and meadows with herds grazing upon them. Blue grass is ankle deep on his grazing land, and wild flowers grow in abundance. About eight years ago the grass on a "thirty" he owned, in a valley by a little stream, seemed thin and sparse. Bare spots showed on the ground.

"I must sow some seed down there," he said, "and bring up more grass."

He placed an order with a firm in the East for seed. It came and when the season was right he sowed it over the thirty-acre tract. And then he waited. The bare spots began showing sprouts. They crept from the ground and expanded into curious looking weeds. They grew into stems with leaves on one side. None resembled the sprout of the grass blade.

As the summer advanced the stems grew into blossoms—little white blossoms with yellow centers. The green of the field was hidden by the white of the blossoms. It was just one great waving mass of flowers—daisies. The firm which had received the order for grass seed, either sent the pure seed of the daisies or grass seed in which the flower seed predominated. Mr. Basey mowed the daisies down. They grew up again. He turned the meadow into a corn field. The daisies outgrew the corn. He set boys to work pulling them up by the roots. On the millions and millions of flowers which grew the work of the boys made no impression.

A year or two ago the public was invited to the farm to help itself to daisies. Hundreds and hundreds jumped at the chance.

"Pull them up by the roots, break them off, chop them down—do anything you like," the instructions were. And so the visitors went home with hands, arms and baskets full—buggy loads. Houses were decorated, churches decorated—daisies were planted on graves in the cemeteries and in the flower beds about the homes in Kansas City. But still the daisies multiplied. And now, not only have they covered the whole of the thirty acres, but they have crept across into neighboring fields and threaten to overrun them. Mr. Basey has given up the fight. The land is leased to Ralph Keck of 1416 Charlotte street. Mr. Keck has invited the public to the daisy farm, charging 10 cents for the privilege of going in and picking all the daisies that can be carried away, be it a handful or a wagon load.

"The daisies were ready to pull about Memorial day," Mr. Keck said a short time ago. "I placed a little advertisement in the Star and between fifty and a hundred persons have been coming here week days and from 150 to 200 every Sunday. They have carried away millions of daisies, but the number seems scarcely diminished. All over Kansas City I have seen them transplanted. But on the sides of these hills, in the hollows and over the higher ground, we have daisies that will be here for years. The only way to get rid of them is to pull them up bodily by the roots and it would take an army to accomplish the task. Mr. Basey plowed them up time and again, but it had no effect whatever. The land is simply swamped with a beautiful crop we cannot exterminate. The grass grows around them just the same, but it's not as luxurious as it would be without them."

Mr. Keck has made more than enough from his 10-cent entrance fees to pay the season's rent on his land. He is preparing soon to turn seventy-five or 100 head of cattle in on the land to graze.

She Went to Church.

The great Wellington was always precise about religious observances. One Saturday evening, a lady, one of his guests at Strathfieldsaye, Wellington's country-seat, apologized for not forming one of the party to church the following morning.

She was a Roman Catholic and there was not a Catholic church within a distance of twenty or thirty miles.

"That," said his grace, "need be no difficulty. My carriage and horses are at your disposal. Breakfast shall be ready a little before daybreak, and the thing can be easily done."

The Second Duke of Wellington, in telling the story to the author of "Society in the Country House," adds, "And she had to go."

"Imagine," he exclaimed, "the impossibility of living up to such a father!"

Had Not Been Introduced.

The late Bishop George F. Seymour of Springfield, Ill., who founded St. Stephen's college, at Annandale on the Hudson, had a reverent fondness for trees.

While the bishop was walking with a young woman one day, says the Minneapolis Journal, he pointed out to her some of the fine trees in the neighborhood. She professed great interest and delight, declaring that the noble aspect of beautiful trees stirred up the keenest emotions of the soul. Then, patting a great trunk, she said, glowingly:

"You superb oak, what would you say to me if you could talk?"

The bishop smiled.

"I believe I can be his interpreter," he said. "He would probably say, 'I beg your pardon, miss, but I am a beech.'"

Wanted Hot Ice Bag.

"Hospital nurses have many peculiar requests made of them by their patients," said a staff nurse of a West Side hospital, "and one of the funniest came to me the other day. In my ward was an Irish woman who had, among her other troubles, a badly swollen knee, for which the doctor prescribed an ice bag. I was preparing to put it on when my patient saw the bag and shivered in anticipation.

"'Must I have that cold thing on me?' she asked.

"I told her it was the very best treatment for her, but she protested still.

"'It is the cold of it I hate,' she said. 'If you must put it on, nurse dear, please warm it a bit.'"

A Social Catastrophe.

"Was no one injured in the railway collision, count?"

"No, but nevertheless it was a most painful situation. First, second, third and fourth class passengers all mingled together! Simply unheard of!"—Fliegende Blatter.

For the Children

To succeed these days you must have plenty of grit, courage, strength. How is it with the children? Are they thin, pale, delicate? Do not forget Ayer's Sarsaparilla. You know it makes the blood pure and rich, and builds up the general health in every way.

The children cannot possibly have good health unless the bowels are in proper condition. A sluggish liver gives a coated tongue, bad breath, constipated bowels. Correct all these by giving small laxative doses of Ayer's Pills. All vegetable, sugar coated.

SHARK PUTS ON STYLE.

Wears Barrel-Hoop Necklace and Is Choked to Death.

Nature fakirs, attention!

Here is the story of a vain shark that attempted to wear a barrel hoop as a necklace and choked herself to death, says the New York World. Of course, it must have been a female shark. She was found on the beach at Rockaway to-day, having arrived at night with the high tide.

The shark was about ten feet long. Fitting close about her neck was a barrel hoop and hanging from a point where her Adam's apple ought to be, if a shark had an Adam's apple, was a barrel stave attached to the hoop, like a pendant. Early arrivals on the beach assert that the stave was branded "Oyster Bay," but this could not be verified, for one of these confiscated it as a souvenir.

The carcass of the shark floated ashore at a point near the Park inn. It was discovered by a man on his way to take an early morning dip. He spread the tidings and soon a crowd gathered. In the crowd was a deep-sea Sherlock Holmes, who knows all about the habits of dwellers in the ocean.

"It is all very plain,' he explained. "We know that sharks frequent the ocean out where the garbage scows are dumped. This was probably a social leader of the school.

"Some time yesterday she encountered this stave and hoop floating on the waves. The idea of decorating herself occurred to her. She slipped the hoop over her head and held a reception, in the course of which refreshments were served.

"After partaking freely of the refreshments her shark ladyship attempted to remove the necklace, but discovered that it had become attached to her. These marks around the edge of the hoop show where her maid and husband made vain attempts to remove the ornament. Finally discovering that the resources of her habitat were insufficient to rid her of her decoration, she started for Rockaway, in the hope that Bill Devery might run across her and take it away from her."

At the conclusion of the lecture of the deep-sea Sherlock Holmes those in the audience fell upon the remains of the vain shark and despoiled them. Commuters, under the inspiration of the signs they read every morning on the painless dentistry emporium across from the Atlantic avenue station of the Long Island road, removed the teeth. Others hacked off the tail and fins. Various boarding-house keepers were noted hovering in the distance awaiting the departure of the souvenir hunters and various gastronomical novelties will undoubtedly appear on the tables of some Rockaway feeding places this evening.

An enterprising showman endeavored to corrall the carcass for purposes of exhibition, but was deterred by a recital of the experience to a couple of amateur P. T. Barnums, who ran a show consisting of a deceased shark at Coney Island some eight or ten years ago. Between the board of health and the exhibit they were driven into bankruptcy, one losing $4 and a tent, the other a straw hat and a megaphone.

TUGBOAT ENGINEER AT 98.

Native of Brooklyn, of Adventurous Life, Hopes to Go to Sea Again.

Dr. Osler's age limitation is strikingly falsified in the case of an American; Sydney Talbot, aged 98 years, who worked all his life without an ailment until a few weeks ago, when he was admitted to the Seamen's hospital here suffering from a slight stroke of paralysis, says a London cable to the New York Sun.

He was then earning $25 weekly as engineer on the ocean going tug Ulin, to which he hopes to return in a few days. He is already able to walk briskly with the aid of a stick, and is otherwise quite fit. He is a remarkable specimen of hale old age, being upright and active.

He was born in Brooklyn, May 1, 1809, and came to England when he was 21. After seven years in an engineering college he soon got employment as a marine engineer, which profession he has followed ever since with experiences enough to fill a library of sea romances. He served the White Star Steamship company and numerous other employers. He went around the world in Lord Brassey's famous yacht Sunbeam.

He has been wrecked four times, and was once cast away for five days in the Red sea, when he and his companions nearly went mad from thirst.

He confidently expects to live and work for six or seven years more, basing his expectation on his family history. His father died at the age of 106, his mother at 105 and his sister at 102. Talbot has always been temperate in drinking and smoking, but he is not a teetotaler. He says cheerfully:

"I hope to rejoin the Ulin in a few days. I am almost well, and when I get to sea again and get nicely soaked I will be all right."

How We Do Change.

RHEUMATISM
CAN NOT BE RUBBED AWAY

It is perfectly natural to rub the spot that hurts, and when the muscles, nerves, joints and bones are throbbing and twitching with the pains of Rheumatism the sufferer is apt to turn to the liniment bottle, or some other external application, in an effort to get relief from the disease, by producing counter-irritation on the flesh. Such treatment will quiet the pain temporarily, but can have no direct curative effect on the real disease because it does not reach the blood, where the cause is located. Rheumatism is more than skin deep—it is rooted and grounded in the blood and can only be reached by constitutional treatment—IT CANNOT BE RUBBED AWAY. Rheumatism is due to an excess of uric acid in the blood, brought about by the accumulation in the system of refuse matter which the natural avenues of bodily waste, the Bowels and Kidneys, have failed to carry off. This refuse matter, coming in contact with the different acids of the body, forms uric acid which is absorbed into the blood and distributed to all parts of the body, and Rheumatism gets possession of the system. The aches and pains are only symptoms, and though they may be scattered or relieved for a time by surface treatment, they will reappear at the first exposure to cold or lampness, or after an attack of indigestion or other irregularity. Rheumatism can never be permanently cured while the circulation remains saturated with irritating, pain-producing uric acid poison. The disease will shift from muscle to muscle or joint to joint, settling on the nerves, causing inflammation and swelling and such terrible pains that the nervous system is often shattered, the health undermined, and perhaps the patient becomes deformed and crippled for life. S. S. S. thoroughly cleanses the blood and renovates the circulation by neutralizing the acids and expelling all foreign matter from the system. It warms and invigorates the blood so that instead of a weak, sour stream, constantly depositing acrid and corrosive matter in the muscles, nerves, joints and bones, the body is fed and nourished by rich, health-sustaining blood which completely and permanently cures Rheumatism. S. S. S. is composed of both purifying and tonic properties—just what is needed in every case of Rheumatism. It contains no potash, alkali or other mineral ingredient, but is made entirely of purifying, healing extracts and juices of roots, herbs and barks. If you are suffering from Rheumatism do not waste valuable time trying to rub a blood disease away, but begin the use of S. S. S. and write us about your case and our physicians will give you any information or advice desired free of charge and will send our special treatise on Rheumatism.
