She left her husband's body lying in the dust and put the other two in the wagon and covered them up. The two men killed were Dan Lovelock, proprietor of the stage line, and a young man named Fred Sullivan. Logan's wife had left him and brought proceedings for divorce. Logan was jealous without cause, according to the people who know all the parties. Later the bank gave the company a further loan of $4,000, and stood to lose the $12,000.
