THURSDAY, DEC. 27, 1894.

It is noticeable that many who formerly indulged in expensive gift-making, have this year confined themselves to something useful and inexpensive.

It now appears that the motor extension into Washington county is assured. Let it come, Hillsboro is here first. Hillsboro wants it to come, as it will sometime. Keep your faith and your feet in Hillsboro. This town has the best business houses, neatest and cosiest residences, best all-round improvements, and best business men in the county. As for our fair sex—well—the whole county is noted for pretty women—this place has more of them, only on account of its population.

A government generally has all it can reasonably do to keep its treasury with a balance on hand, and can hardly go into the loan business. If it loan on realty it may as well instruct the treasurer to hang out the 3-ball sign, and loan on personal effects, for the owner of such property should have equal rights. How would the national capitol look with such a sign neatly gilded hanging before its main entrance. However those people who are strictly onto their job are not stopping at asking the government to loan money but are sending in requisitions for a team, tools and a hired man.

There is a great lesson to be learned from close observation. Industry has always a reward, whether or not the reward may be squandered immediately after. Communism, if all people were industrious, would be ideal. But if all were laboring for one fund, there would be those who would shirk their duty—the drones. In well regulated hives, apiarists tell us that the drones are annually destroyed. Drones always exist. Every community has them, and they are generally the first to complain. When there are no such creatures, and all mankind is perfect, the object of building a universe will have been discovered.

The concentration of wealth is a subject that has vexed all political economists since the days of Adam Smith. Wealth has purchased nine-tenths of all legislation for many decades. But legislation is not all that pours wealth into capitalistic coffers—extravagance, unthrift, improvidence—all these things do much to start the money of the country towards monopolistic centers. Reasonably speaking, the man who has lived prudently for a number of years is not suffering from the present hard times. It is the man who labored and lived beyond his means. This nation, as a whole, is full of this class. No one disputes this. And while the country is struggling for a more equal monetary law, the citizens should help the reform by looking to home for leaks

No nation can afford to go into a banking business. National government should be so simple that it would admit of no ambiguity. A government should only be in a banking business sufficiently to pay its running expenses, with here and there internal improvement. To loan money to farmers on real security will create a condition confusing in the extreme. In the first place, with a proper monetary system no farmer would need to borrow. The man who has but money enough to make a partial payment on a piece of property should not buy and encumber the same with a mortgage, for it is at the best but a speculation, and in many cases ends disastrously. No man should ask the community politic to help him more than to preserve such conditions that will enable him to pursue his vocation without interruption so long as he is a good citizen. A man who has a farm had better keep it unmortgaged.

Published for Comparison.

The Baltimore Plan and Secretary Carlisle's Proposition for Reforming the Currency.

For the reason that so many people are talking about the Secretary of the Treasury's financial system, and persist in calling it the "Baltimore Plan," The Argus submits both plans for public perusal, that the proper comparisons may be made. The Baltimore plan, in the ultimate, differs but little from the present banking system, inasmuch that the government must pay from its treasury, the notes of insolvent banks, whether or not there be sufficient to meet the same out of the guarantee fund." In the Carlisli plan, the banks must properly stand on their own bottom.

BALTIMORE PLAN.

Section 1. The provisions of the national banking act, requiring the deposit of bonds to secure circulating notes hereafter issued, shall be repealed.

Sec. 2. Allow the banks to issue circulating notes to the amount of 50 per cent of their paid up, unimpaired capital, subject to a tax of one-half of 1 per cent per annum upon the average amount of circulation outstanding for the year; and an additional circulation of 25 per cent of their paid up, unimpaired capital, subject both to the tax of one-half of 1 per cent per annum and to an additional heavy tax per annum upon the average amount of such circulation outstanding for the year; said additional 25 per cent to be known as "emergency circulation."

Sec. 3. The tax of one-half of 1 per cent per annum upon the average amount of circulation outstanding shall be paid to the treasurer of the United States as a means of revenue, out of which the expenses of the office of the comptroller of the currency, the printing of circulating notes, etc., shall be defrayed. The excess over one-half of 1 per cent of the tax imposed upon the "emergency circulation" shall be paid into the "guarantee fund," referred to in Section 6.

Sec. 4. The banks issuing circulation shall deposit and maintain with the treasurer of the United States a "redemption fund" equal to 5 per cent of their average outstanding circulation, as provided for under the existing law.

Sec. 5. The redemption of the notes of all banks, solvent or insolvent, to be made as provided for by the existing law.

Sec. 6. Create a "guarantee fund" through the deposit by each bank of 2 per cent upon the amount of circulation received the first year. Thereafter impose a tax of one-half of 1 per cent upon the average amount of outstanding circulation, the same to be paid into this fund until it shall equal 5 per cent of the entire circulation outstanding, when the collection of such tax shall be suspended, to be resumed whenever the comptroller of the currency shall deem it necessary.

The notes of insolvent banks shall be redeemed by the treasurer of the United States out of the guarantee fund, if it shall be sufficient, and if not sufficient then out of the money in the treasury, the same to be reimbursed to the treasury out of the guarantee fund when replenished either from the assets of the failed banks or from the tax aforesaid.

National banking associations organized after this plan shall have gone into operation may receive circulation from the comptroller of the currency upon paying into the guarantee fund a sum bearing the ratio to the circulation applied for and allowed that the guarantee fund bears to the total circulation outstanding, and to be subject to the tax of one-half of 1 per cent per annum, as called for by the treasury of the United States for the creation and maintenance of this fund.

No association or individual shall have any claim upon any part of the money in said guarantee fund, except for the redemption of the circulating notes of any insolvent national banking association. Any surplus or residue of said guarantee fund which may be hereafter ascertained or determined by law shall enure to the benefit of the United States.

Sec. 7. The government shall have a prior lien upon the assets of each failed bank, and upon the liability of share holders for the purpose of restoring the amount withdrawn from the guarantee fund for the redemption of its circulation, not to exceed, however, the amount of the failed bank's outstanding circulation after deducting the sum to its credit in the redemption fund (Section 4), already in the hands of the treasurer of the United States.

Sec. 8. Circulation can be retired at any time upon depositing with the treasurer of the United States lawful money in amount equal to the sum desired to be withdrawn, and, immediately upon such deposit the tax indicated in Section 2, 3 and 4 shall cease upon the circulation so retired.

Sec. 9. In the event of the winding up of the business of a bank by reason of insolvency, or otherwise, the treasurer of the United States, with the concurrence of the comptroller of the currency, may, on the application of the directors, or of the liquidator, receiver, assignee or other proper official, and upon being satisfied that proper arrangements have been made for the payment of the notes of the bank and any tax due thereon, pay over to such directors, liquidator, receiver, assignee, or other proper official, the amount at the credit of the bank in the "Redemption Fund" indicated in Section 4.

CARLISLE'S PLAN.

1. Repeal all laws requiring or authorizing the deposit of U. S. bonds as security for circulation.

2. Permit national banks to issue notes to an amount not exceeding 75 per cent. on their paid up and unimpaired capital, but require each bank before receiving notes to deposit a guarantee fund, consisting of U. S. legal-tender notes, including treasury notes of 1890, to the amount of 30 per cent. upon the circulating notes applied for, this percentage of deposits upon the circulating notes outstanding to be at all times maintained, and whenever a bank retires its circulation, in whole or in part, its guarantee fund to be returned to it in proportion to the amount of notes retired.

3. Retain the provision of the law making stockholders individually liable, and provide that the circulating notes shall constitute a first lien upon all assets of the bank.

4. Impose a tax of one-half of 1 percentum per annum, payable semi-annually, upon the average amount of notes in circulation, to defray the expenses of printing notes, official supervision, cancellation, etc.

5. No national bank note to be of less denomination than $10, and all notes of the same denomination to be uniform in design; but banks desiring to redeem their notes in gold may have them made payable in that coin. The Secretary of the Treasury to have authority to prepare and keep on hand ready for issue upon application a reserve of blank national bank notes for each banking association having circulation.

6. Require each national banking association to redeem its own notes at its own office, and at agencies to be designated by it.

7. To provide a safety fund for the immediatate redemption of the circulating notes of failed banks, impose a tax of — percentum per annum upon the average circulation of each bank until the fund is equivalent to 5 per cent. of the total circulation outstanding. Require each new bank and each bank taking out additional circulation to deposit its proper proportion of this fund before receiving notes. When a bank fails, its guarantee fund held on deposit to be paid into the safety fund and used in the redemption of its notes, and if this fund shall be impaired by the redemption of the notes of failed national banks, and the immediately available cash assets of such banks are insufficient to re-establish the fund, it shall at once be made good by pro rata assessments upon the other banks, according to the amounts of their outstanding circulation; but there shall be a first lien upon all the assets of the failed bank or banks to reimburse the contributing banks. The safety fund may be invested in outstanding U. S. bonds having the longest time to run, the bonds and the interest upon them to be held as part of the fund and sold whenever necessary to redeem notes of failed banks.

8. Repeal of the provisions of the reorganization and extension act of July 12, 1882, imposing limitations upon the reduction and in case of national bank circulation.

9. Repeal all provisions of law requiring banks to keep a reserve on account of deposits.

10. The Sec'y. of the Treasury may, in his discretion, use any surplus revenue of the U. S. in the redemption and retirement of U. S. legal tender notes, but such redemption shall not, in the aggregate, exceed an amount equal to 70 per cent. of the additional circulation taken out by national and State banks under the system herein proposed.

11. Circulating notes issued by a banking corporation duly organized under the laws of any state and which transacts no other than a banking business, shall be exempted from taxation under the laws of the United States, when it is shown to the satisfaction of the Sec'y. of the Treasury and Comptroller of the Currency.

1. That such bank has at no time had outstanding its circulating notes in excess of 75 per cent. of its paid-up and unimpaired capital

2. That its stockholders are individually liable for the redemption of its circulating notes to the full extent of their ownership of stock.

3. That the circulating notes constitute by law a first lien upon all the assets of the bank.

4. That the bank has at all times kept a guarantee fund in U. S. legal tender notes of 1890, equal to 30 per cent. of its outstanding circulating notes; and

5. That it has promptly redeemed its notes on demand at its principal office or at one or more of its branch offices, if it has branches.

12. The Sec' of the Treas. may, under proper rules and regulations to be established by him, permit state banks to procure and use in the preparation of their notes the distinctive paper used in printing U. S. securities, but no state bank shall print or engrave its notes in similitude of a U. S. note or certificate or national bank note.
