NEW JOAN OF ARC LEADS SLAV REGIMENT London, Oct. 2.—Mira Ivanovna, sister of charity, is Russia's Joan of Arc. Petrograd dispatches today told of how she had rallied the men of the Tenth company of her regiment when all its officers had fallen. The soldiers were in panic, and almost ready to flee before the Touts. Taking her position at the head of the forces, she commanded a charge against the Germans, drove their line back and captured a trench, only to fall fatally wounded by a German bullet. MASON TELLS WHAT WAR MOVES MEAN

New York, Oct. 2.—The second week of the Anglo-French offensive in the west begins with both sides seeking a respite. The early intensity of the allies' efforts has died, and the Germans are only feebly counter-attacking. This quick exhaustion striking differentiates this new struggle from the battle in Flanders a year ago.

The trench warfare has improved, and has become most elaborate since the Germans seized Ostend and attempted to advance on Dunkirk and Calais. Then the battles raged backward and forward with continuous intensity. Positions were won and lost repeatedly, and the struggle was fought largely in the open.

The present Artois and Champagne defenses have been strengthened as a result of continued experiments during the year. Great numbers of machine guns are in possession of the defense. Results have demonstrated the inability of conducting the present operations like those in the battle of Flanders a year since.

Frequent pauses are necessary now while the artillery tries to root up obstacles. Continuous attacking by infantry is impossible. A series of assaults, with rests between, is the only method that is not suicidal.

As a matter of fact, siege warfare is the only method open to the allies. A serious breach in the enemy lines is necessary before a major advantage can be obtained. This naturally is extremely difficult, because the enemy has many parallel defenses, and all must be captured before the breach is completed.

SPOONING IN AUTOMOBILES UNDER POLICE TABOO

Los Angeles, Oct. 2.—It seemed likely today that the police would start a war against spooning in automobiles in connection with their efforts to halt the epidemic of automobile accidents. Complaint was made that ardent romances endeavor to drive their machines along the smooth southern California boulevards in the moonlight with one or both arms entwined about their ladies fair, and as a result the tinkle of broken glass is heard off in the still night. Driving and hugging simultaneously probably will be characterized hereafter as disorderly conduct, while kissing in automobiles, especially loud kissing, may be deemed disturbing the peace.

CHICAGO GIRL HIKERS REACH SAN FRANCISCO San Francisco, Oct. 2.—Romance and chivalry dwell in every hobnob and health in every night beneath the stars, declared Miss Ruth Harsley, 20 years old, and Miss Maud Bridson, a former school teacher, following their arrival today from Chicago after a hike since March. "Chivalry is not dead," said Miss Harsley. "We were treated with great respect by the commonest hobo we met, unless he had been drinking—and some of our best citizens are fresh in their caps. We slept out-of-doors, under hay mows and sometimes in hotels, and gathered enough interesting data to fill a book."

ASK UNCLE SAM TO PROTEST TO ENGLAND Washington, Oct. 2.—Attorneys in Chicago packers today formally asked the state department to protest against Great Britain's detention of 29 great cargoes, valued at $12,000,000, under prize court proceedings.
