REVIVE FLAG RITUAL IN WASHINGTON STATE

Seattle, April 29.—After five years of rest, the state law requiring flag ritual and oath of allegiance to the flag in public schools was revived yesterday at Lincoln high school. The instructors led in the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" and spoke the oath, while more than 1,000 voices responded.

Just as the instructors were ready to admit that the rusty services had been impressively carried out, the students started singing "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier," and would not stop until the emergency gongs rang.

Social

Intermediate Epworthians

The Intermediate Epworthians and friends turned out en masse at the party given by the League in the M. E. church parlors Monday evening of last week. Each child came dressed in the representation of a prominent character in some well known book and a great deal of amusement was thus provided in guessing the characters represented by the incongruous book language and appropriate costumes. As winning guesser Miss Carmelita Poole was presented with a picture.

Music and other games were enjoyed during the evening at the close of which banana jello was served with whipped cream and wafers.

Easter Egg Hunt

The Misses Doris Howard and Corlyns Courtney were novelly entertained at the Dyre Club Saturday afternoon, April 22, at an Easter egg hunt at which the little Miss Eugenia Breeze was hostess.

The Hikers

Lawn Party

Saturday afternoon between 40 and 50 little tots gathered on the church lawn at the corner of 6th and B street to enjoy the lawn party given by the children's junior league of the church. Outdoor games supplied amusement for the happy children until refreshments of cake and sherbet were served.

Picnic At Dam

Ten High School students, accompanied by the Mesdames Herman and Hammond, left in autos during the late afternoon Tuesday of last week for the dam where they planned to spend the evening in general picnic rites.

Arriving at the Jones creek they left their cars and walked on to the dam, where they spent a jolly evening round the campfire. As the savory fumes of sizzling bacon and eggs pervaded the air a few prophetic rain drops roused the merry fun-seekers to a more hasty participation of the delicious picnic supper. It was not long ere the jolly dozen were again in their autos and before the heavy downpour began they were safe and happy in their city homes.

Campfire Girls Entertained

Nearly three hundred in ten and girls were guests of the campfire society at the formal reception given by the campfire lodge Saturday afternoon, April 29.

The object of the reception was to acquaint the ladies of Grants Pass with the purpose of campfire work. Charts were shown of different departments of work and exhibits of Ahly chaperoned by J. H. Harmon, minister of the Christian church, and greatly aided by walking sticks in the form of broom handles, clothes sticks and laurel boughs, the sturdy little chaps made the ascent in good time, enjoyed their picnic luncheon and a bird's eye view, and spent the day celebrating the rites of a genuine spring picnic.

STATE COMPLETES EVIDENCE IN TRIAL

Tacoma, April 27.—Hoary statutes of Romans, ancient German law volumes and musty English cases of centuries ago have been resurrected by Attorney P. L. Pendleton and will be introduced in evidence in the defense of Paul R. Haffer, on trial for criminally libelling George Washington, when the trial is resumed in superior court Monday. The state concluded presentation of its case last evening.

In denying a motion by the defense for a dismissal, Judge Card ruled that under the statutes of the state, any person is liable to arrest on a charge of criminal libel for the criticism of deceased persons, even as far back as Adam. The statute fixes no limit to the time within which the possibility of libel ceases, he held, and the question of whether malicious intent is involved must be the deciding factor in each case.

The case is without parallel in the annals of American jurisprudence, and no modern precedents of any sort are available, attorneys agree.

Attorney Pendleton's chief argument for dismissal was that unless the operation of the state libel statute were confined to the matter of libelling a deceased person within the life time of his family, prosecutions could be carried to an absurd length, and practically no person be free from liability of arrest.

"This is the most preposterous case I have ever heard of," Pendleton said. "There has never been anything like it, except one old English case that was dismissed. If we can have the libel of Washington, we can have also the libel of Adam, Jesus Christ, Napoleon, any one who is dead, and have cases in court every day just as silly as this one."
