

OBITUARY

William Sorenson
William Sorenson, one of the highly respected citizens of Jackson county, died on April 28, 1916, at his home near Provoit. He had been a resident of the Applegate about 46 years, and a citizen of the United States since 1853. He was born in Denmark August 11, 1833, a son of Matias and Catherine Sorenson, both natives of that country. He emigrated to California in 1853, sailing round Cape Horn in 1850, but settled temporarily in Chile, South America, later sailing up the coast to the Golden Gate. He followed mining, with more or less success, and was employed by various mine operators until 1859, when he moved to Oregon, settling in the old mining town of Williamsburg, situated on Williams creek, Josephine county, mining around Williamsburg until 1871, when he moved on the farm where death overtook him on Friday. Death was attributable to an attack of la grippe, contracted in December. Deceased chose as his life companion and helpmate Mary P. Woody, a daughter of James and Elisabeth Woody, who emigrated with her parents from Iowa in 1852. Mr. Sorenson was a member of the Lutheran church, and was one of the most respected citizens of his community and is mourned by his relatives and the whole community at large. His wife survives him.

The Penny of England.
Most ancient of English coins, the penny has experienced many changes in its long history. Until the time of Edward I, when halfpennies and farthings were first coined, the penny was deeply indented with a cross, so that it could easily be broken into four parts. It was originally of silver and was gradually reduced in weight, was debased at sundry times and in 1707 was coined in copper. The copper penny continued down to 1800, when the bronze penny, as it exists today, was first introduced.

MONARCH Malleable Range

- Why a malleable iron top heats through quickly, so that cooking utensils need not be set in the holes to smut up the bottoms.
How the MICRO-PROCESS Top needs no stove backing.
How the smooth nickel plating can be kept clean with an occasional wiping with a cloth.
That it is perfectly reasonable to expect better baking from a range with air-tight flues, secured through riveted construction, possible only with malleable iron.

edly this morning, causing the most sensational rumors, because the cabinet never meets on Saturday. Some rumors dealt with Ireland and the demand that Augustine Birrell, chief secretary for Ireland, resign. Many believed the meeting was for the purpose of considering conscription.

Rebel agents who attempted to cause outbreaks in Cork and other cities were promptly arrested. Troops left England yesterday for Ireland, and it is believed General Maxwell will be able to control the situation without further reinforcements.

The first boatload of passengers from Ireland brought the best accounts of the outbreaks. They agreed that it started at noon on Monday when 1,000 rebels wearing soft hats and carrying both old and modern rifles burst into the postoffice and ordered all employees to leave.

A number of women accompanying the rebels wore green sashes and cartridge belts. A rebel flag, white and yellow, with a large harp, was thrust from an upper window of the postoffice. A policeman who remonstrated was attacked by a crowd of rioters and thrown bodily from the second floor.

Another force of revolutionists, bursting mysteriously from public houses and shops on Sackville streets, moved upon St. Stephen's Green, gathering recruits as they marched. Several policemen were shot near the park gates. A nurse wheeling a perambulator was wounded and the baby in the carriage killed by flying bullets.

Other small bodies of rioters captured buildings occupying strategic positions, including the Guinness brewery and the Royal College of Surgeons. They attacked Dublin Castle but a small force of government troops equipped with machine guns quickly halted the marching insurgents.

Monday night was comparatively calm. The rebels threw up barricades and looted stores and homes for food. One old lady, indignant at being hit, slapped the face of a youthful rebel sentry. Government troops began a systematic attack on the rebel positions Tuesday. They quickly recaptured the brewery and several public houses. Artillery was trained on Liberty hall, headquarters of the rebels, and it crumbled into ruins.
