

Little Ad — and Big Ad

No man would expect to hire a clerk for a day, then lay him off a month and hire him again for a day.

Still, that's the way many merchants hire Advertisements.

They expect their advertising to work one or two or three days a month and sell more goods than all of the people in the store put together.

There are some who keep their Advertising working week in and week out—calling at thousands of homes often enough to get acquainted with people, and to build a reputation for the store.

By keeping everlastingly at it a very little Advertisement will eventually do more work than the Big Ad that works a day and lays off a month.

Little Ad and Big Ad working together make a team that's hard to beat for selling goods.

WAR SWEPT CHIOS

The Historic Aegean Island and Its Stormy Career.

BATHED IN BLOOD BY TURKS.

In 1822 an Army of Moslems slaughtered 30,000 of its People and Pillaged and Burned the Island—Twice Laid Waste by Earthquakes.

The Aegean island of Chios is the subject of a striking communication to the National Geographic society from Ernest Lloyd Harris, a part of which is issued as the following bulletin:

"Chios, which is separated from the mainland of Asia Minor by the strait of Chios, only four and a half miles wide, has long been a bone of contention between Turk and Greek, and during the earlier part of the nineteenth century it was the scene of some of the bloodiest tragedies known to history.

"As early as 700 B. C. it was one of the richest and most important members of the Ionian union. It has disputed with Smyrna the honor of being the birthplace of Homer. When the Ionian cities rebelled against the Per-ian yoke Chios manned and equipped 100 ships and sent them to the battle of Lade. This stands for something when we take into consideration the fact that at that time—namely, 494 B. C.—the population of the island numbered only 30,000 freemen and 100,000 slaves.

"Chios has been, in turn, Ionian, Persian, Athenian, Roman, Italian, Turkish, and finally, in 1913, after a separation of nearly 2300 years, it was united once more to the parent country, Greece. As one may well imagine, a little island of 318 square miles which has changed masters so many times necessarily must have suffered much from the strife which swept over it.

"Twice has this island been visited by terrible earthquakes. The first was away back in 17 A. D. and it was only through the fostering care of the Emperor Tiberius that the people were able to make a fresh start. The second was in 1881, when the town of Kastro was practically laid waste. Mosques, churches and dwelling houses disappeared into the bowels of the earth, engulfing no less than 5,000 people. This earthquake visited the whole island, and many beautiful and historic monasteries, some of which contained priceless objects of art, valuable libraries and monuments of antiquity were completely lost.

"But in spite of all these vicissitudes Chios has also seen many happy days. Even in the old days of the Ionian union it was celebrated on account of its commerce and industries, especially for its native wine and the manufacture of beds and sofas! Under Rome the island was ruled as an insular province and enjoyed several hundred years of almost unbroken peace and prosperity.

"Chios' real troubles virtually began with the Greek war of independence. Somewhat against the will of the people, the island became involved in this struggle and was visited by a massacre which appalled humanity. In 1822 the captain-pasha appeared before Kastro with a powerful fleet and landed an army of Moslems, who slaughtered in the space of two months no less than 30,000 Chians, while 32,000 were sold into slavery. The entire island was given over to pillage, and scarcely a village, church or convent was spared the flames.

"These acts of ferocity did not go unavenged. While the Moslems were ravaging Chios the islanders of Psara and Hydra were planning an attempt on the Turkish fleet, which was lying in the outer harbor of Kastro, just off the Genoese citadel. The authors of this bold strike were Constantine Canaris and George Pepines. They arranged two brigs as fire ships, and manned them with a chosen band of desperate men.

"The lights hanging at the masts of the Turkish ships were so dim that the Chians were enabled completely to surprise the unsuspecting crew at midnight. The brig commanded by Canaris immediately grappled with the captain-pasha's flagship and set it on fire. Pepine was equally successful, and another battleship went up in flames. With shouts of 'Victory to the Cross!' the old time war cry of Byzantium, the islanders escaped in a launch which they had in tow without the loss of a single man. Practically the whole of the captain-pasha's fleet was destroyed, and 2,300 lives were lost.

"There is an old Greek monastery about an hour's ride from Kastro which is a grecous monument of this period. Its walls and alcoves are faced with the skeletons of the Chians massacred in this neighborhood.

"One of the chief products of Chios is gum mastic, an astringent which is grown in the southern part of the island. It is used as a gum and also distilled as a liquid, which is used throughout the Levant as an appetizer immediately before meals. It is an intoxicant if used immoderately.

"One feature of the scenery of Chios is the picturesque old windmills which crown the ridges and slopes along the coast. The wheels are of very large dimensions and are fitted with sails, which supply the motive power for grinding corn. Owing to the possible visitation of earthquakes, the houses are rarely more than two stories high and when scattered along the countryside are usually surrounded by olive or pepper trees, which add much to the beauty and charm of the island."

Hunting the Emu.
The natives of Australia are ingenious. A black on discovering emus feeding on a plain will cover his back and head with an emu skin, allowing it to hang down well on the side toward the unsuspecting birds. In his right hand he will carry hidden by the skin a boomerang and one or two throwing sticks or "waddles." Then his left arm will protrude beyond the skin straight out to the elbow, and the forearm will be bent up with the hand at right angles to it, thereby making a capital imitation of an emu's head and neck. Now and then his hand or head will be brought to the ground as if for feeding, and as the black walks along he imitates every motion of the bird while at the same time by means of the big toe he draws a spear along the ground. He proceeds thus until close enough to spear his bird.

His Trademarks.
Little redheaded Johnny got a job as office boy for the president of a large western railway. After he had been upon the job several days they gave him a form to fill out with his "Personal Record."

When young Johnny came to a particular paragraph that said, "Have you any visible marks for identification in case of accident or death?" he rose from his chair and rushed over to a mirror near by to give himself a general inspection; then he returned to his task and wrote as his answer to this personal query, "Nothing except freckles."—Youth's Companion.

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw has been a pioneer in many fields. She was the first woman ordained a minister in the Methodist Episcopal church. Her efforts to obtain a college education marked an epoch in coeducation. She carried the gospel of equal suffrage into the most remote places, undeterred by the inconvenience of primitive travel. Dr. Shaw was born on Feb. 14, 1847.
