Saved Himself.
As to the most embarrassing moment in his life, U. R. Treat related it to the club in this way:
"I had taken Gladys Harcourt to a swell cafe after the opera, and as we were both hungry I ordered without stint, while the score mounted up.

Golden West Coffee
Is "Just Right"

When the check fell beside my plate I was astounded on discovery that I had lost my purse, doubtless at the hands of a pickpocket. The assiduous and expectant waiter stood by. I was a stranger in this city, and of course knew no one in the restaurant. Already the waiter was beckoning to some one, perhaps an officer. I was sure to be arrested. Gladys, unaware of my dilemma, was drawing on her gloves. A great clock boomed the hour. I was saved, for at the twelfth stroke I awoke.—Oakland Tribune.

5,000,000 Corns Lifted Right Off!

Try 3 Drops of Magic "Gels-It."
There's a wonderful difference between getting rid of a corn now and the way they used to try to get rid of it only four or five years ago. "Gels-It" has revolutionized corn history. It's the only corn remedy.

"Just 3 Drops of 'Gels-It.' Now Tomorrow I'll Just Feel That Corn Right Off—and It's Gone!"

today that acts on the new principle, not only of shriveling up the corn, but of loosening the corn off—so loose that you can lift it right off with your fingers. Put 3 drops of "Gels-It" on that corn or callus tonight. That's all. The corn is doomed sure as sunrise. No pain, or trouble, or soreness. You do away once and for all with toe-bundling bandages, toe-eating salves and irresponsible what-nots. Try it—get surprised and lose a corn. "Gels-It" is sold everywhere, 15c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Sold in Grants Pass and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by George C. Sabin and C. H. Demaray.

GIVE THE CHILD A TREE.

If Possible, Let Him Plant One and Own It All Himself.

Every child should own a tree. A tree is a symbol of life. It lives. It stands for everything that is noble. It is rooted in the soil and stretches itself toward heaven. It stands for patience, humility, persistence, beauty, courage and God.

The child should plant the tree himself and thereafter watch it grow year by year. He should put his hands on its rough bark and say: "This is my tree, I will stand by it and live up to it." It is curious how blind we sometimes are to certain ideals because we cannot see and handle them. We need something to connect us with the invisible but none the less potent and formative world of aspiration and inspiration. What could be better than a tree?

There is something about the silent beauty of a tree that casts over us a spell of calmness and invincibility. The storms of life may sway us and break our branches; the grim and melancholy autumn may strip us of our brilliance, but the spring will come once more and clothe us in a new glory. So we go on fulfilling the majesty of the law. If your child owns a tree the memory of its beneficent influence will cling to him through life.—Country Gentleman

WINDOW BLINDS.

Called an invention of the Evil One to Keep Out Sunlight.

"God said, 'Let there be light.' The devil whispered to men and blinds were invented." So writes Dr. F. Robbins of New York in an article entitled "Heliophobia, a Menace to the Community," published in the Medical Record.

According to a bulletin of the American Association for the Conservation of Vision, at least half the educated population of the United States is afflicted with defects of eyesight.

As a matter of fact, sunlight so far from being injurious to the eyes is one of the most successful cures for trachoma, the commonest of eye diseases.

Dr. Robbins is amazed at the number of persons who find sunlight trying and at the number who still cling to the old and long exploded notion that sunshine is bad for the eyes. He blames the persons in authority in our libraries, postoffices and railroad companies for persistently pulling down the blinds in their institutions and cars.

He urges those who are oppressed by sunlight to wear smoked glasses and not to deprive others of the beneficent brightness. Sunlight kills more noxious bacteria than all other germicides put together.

Judging a Potato.

A good potato should be firm and crisp when cut, and a thin cross section when held between the eyes and the light should show a relatively uniform distribution of starch throughout its whole area, as opposed to a large, translucent, watery central area, which denotes a lack of starch in this portion of the tuber. The even distribution of starch insures greater uniformity in cooking and in texture of the flesh when cooked.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

HQW A CROW
FED GERDA

The Crow Led Gerda into the Garden.

(Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.)

THE children drank the last drop of their milk and ran to daddy. "The evening was quite dark before the crow went back to take Gerda to the palace," daddy began. "Caw, caw," he said to the little girl, who was waiting for him by the stile. "My sweetheart at the palace sends you greetings, and here is a nice roll for you. She got it in the kitchen, where there is plenty of bread, and I dare say you are a bit hungry. It is not possible for you to get into the palace, for you have bare feet, and the guards all have silver and gold on their coats and would never let you pass. Don't cry," begged the crow when Gerda remembered that she had thrown her beautiful new red shoes into the river, hoping they would please the river enough to make it take her to her playmate, Kay.

"Don't cry," begged the crow again. "We will get you in somehow. My sweetheart knows a little back staircase that leads up to the bedroom, and she also knows where the key is kept."

"So the crow led Gerda into the palace garden. Up the long avenue they passed, with the leaves falling gently all around them. When the palace lights went out, one by one, the crow led Gerda right up to the back door, which was ajar.

"Oh, how Gerda's heart kept beating with fear and longing. It was just as if she were doing something wrong, and yet all she wanted to know was whether this chap that was wooing the princess was really her playmate, Kay, or not. 'It must be Kay,' she kept saying to herself, picturing his bright eyes and long hair. She could even see his smile when they used to sit at home and play under the rose trees on the roof. She knew that he would be very glad to see her and hear what a long way she had come to find him. She wanted to tell him how sad they had all been at home when he did not come back to them.

"My dear little miss," said the crow's sweetheart, "my betrothed has told me all about you. The story of your life is most touching. If you will carry the lamp I will go on in front and lead the straight way. Then we shall meet no one."

"It seems to me that some one is coming up behind us," said Gerda. She fancied some one was rushing past and throwing great shadows on the wall. There were shadows of horses with flowing manes and slender legs, huntsmen, ladies and gentlemen on horseback.

"Oh, those are only dreams!" the two crows reassured Gerda. And daddy kissed the children good night.

The Egg and the Shell.

Eggs are made chiefly of carbonate of lime, and the yolk is half water, half oil and albumen, while the white of an egg, as it is called, consists of water chiefly with albumen and a little phosphorus and sulphur. The yolk always floats at the top of the white, so to be as near as possible to the hen when she sits upon it to hatch it, while two cords attached to the yolk, one at each end, prevent it from actually touching the shell.
