"The Tanks"

IN ACTION AT THE BATTLE OF ANCRE

These marvelous motion pictures, photographed by authority of the British government and taken during the actual battle of the Ancre, one of the most momentous and colossal battles in the world's history, take you out upon the field of conflict, show the allied soldiers actually leap from the first line trenches and charge across "No Man's Land" to attack the German positions. It pictures the torrential rain of artillery fire that swept the enemy trenches, it shows in actual battle the giant "TANKS," the mammoth war monsters, the dreadnoughts of the land, leaping trenches, cutting their way through barb-wire entanglements and spitting out their deathlike colossal fire-breathing dragons. It shows the capture of whole regiments of German troops, scenes in dressing and commissary camps and pictures, as only the unlying eye of the camera can, the grim reality and stupendous drama of modern warfare.
