HUGO MAKES GOOD USE OF LIBRARY BOOKS

A bit of news that shows the practical use to which the public library is put by its patrons in the county, comes through a report from the newest deposit station. This is at Hugo, where they had their first supply of books in January.

As their second exchange, 30 books, were sent for the usual six week's period. The circulation during that time for the 30 books was 92,—an average of more than three times for each book.

The record kept by the custodian at Hugo shows the names of over 30 borrowers. The books sent were for both children and adults, among them some on food preparation, war narratives, poetry, and some of the best type of fiction.

CHROME MINERS WANT HELP

and elasticity of the product, and in the manufacture of cannon, rifles, large shells and many other articles of war, not to mention steel plates for ships, its use is indispensable. The government must have it.

And this is the part that the Dalleys, Casey and many other men in this county have been devoting themselves to in helping win the war. Unless the supply is discovered and mined it can be of no use, and prospectors, spurred on by the greatly increased prices now offered for the metal have turned to the task of finding it in paying quantities. And it seems to be here in abundance.

Now the three men mentioned in this story have come to town and are making an appeal for help in getting out the metal. They promise to pay a good sum per ton to any person who will dig it out of their properties and transport it by motor truck to the main truck road. Here is what they say:

"As we are interested in the welfare of our glorious country. We want the people to know what we have accomplished by a little hard work as we all know that chromium is something the government must have if we beat the Kaiser.

"So far in the last six months we have bent every effort to find all of this metal we could, and as a result we have found several promising prospects. During all of this time we have had men developing some of these prospects, one of which we only figured on getting 10 or 15 tons has already yielded over 150 tons with lots more in sight.

"From the number of claims we have, there should be thousands of tons. We are doing all we can to get it out, but as it will be impossible for us to mine it all we will give anyone a contract to mine and deliver to the truck road. We will pay a good price per ton, which will enable any one to make good wages.

"We are now building half a mile of auto truck road to connect with the main road at a cost of from $500 to $700, so that all our chrome will be from one-half to two miles on an all down-hill pull to the dumping station."

JANE COWL, STAR OF MANY BROADWAY SUCCESSES

(Goldwyn Six-Reel Production)

Jane Cowl, the star of many Broadway successes and who made such a decided hit in "Common Clay" and "Lilac Time," two of the most popular stage successes of the last two seasons, is to be seen in a Goldwyn production, titled "The Spreading Dawn" a story of love and war. At this time, when almost the entire world is at war, "The Spreading Dawn" strikes a most timely note and with Miss Cowl interpreting the featured role of Patricia Vanderpyl, a belle of New York society during the Civil war, it has added assurance of success. Georgina Vanderpyl, a descendant of the old Vanderpyl family of Civil war days, wishes to marry her soldier boy before he leaves for France, but her aged aunt discourages the marriage because, as she explains, Patricia Vanderpyl, who married her soldier lover at the outbreak of the Civil war, was made unhappy for the remaining days of her life, because of the unfaithfulness of her husband. Miss Cowl presents the part of Patricia, and she takes you back to the days of the war, and shows how her husband's unfaithfulness destroyed every happiness she had ever known. This is enacted while the aunt relates to Georgina the story. The aunt remembers a letter written by the husband, which had never been opened. Georgina insists that it be read, and in it is revealed the fact that her (Patricia's) husband had been misjudged. Georgina's marriage is sanctioned, and Patricia is, after many years, convinced that love still exists. "The Spreading Dawn" was adapted from the story by Basil King.

At the Joy theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday this week, Jane Cowl in "The Spreading Dawn."

Five Hundred Thousand American Soldiers in France

We dare not delay the VICTORY now. American lives are at stake, our own safety, the safety of the whole world. If we are not to prolong the slaughter and the suffering, if we are not to risk defeat or an inconclusive peace, we must act quickly; we must put forth our every effort now.

The army is doing its part. Five hundred thousand American soldiers are in France today. There will be more tomorrow. And more the day after. We are going to send an army large enough so that when we strike, with our Allies, we can drive the German hordes back across the Rhine—so that we can win the decisive VICTORY that will make American freedom safe, and establish a just and lasting peace.

But the whole nation must take part. Our armies in France are looking to us to furnish them in ever greater abundance, the ordnance, the munitions, the supplies that will make their VICTORY possible. We must not fail them.

The Third Liberty Loan is our share in the winning of this war. Upon it depends the safety and success of five hundred thousand American soldiers in France.
