CURING HAY WITHOUT STACKING IS WASTEFUL

O. A. C., Corvallis, June 24.—This is a good year for stacking hay. The practice of cutting hay, raking it, and curing it in cocks where it is left until it is baled saves some labor, but is an expensive and wasteful process from the standpoint of forage.

"Much hay is spoiled annually by bleaching and by wetting," says G. R. Hyslop, professor of farm crops in the Oregon Agricultural college. "Most of the loss in quality and shrinkage may be saved by stacking the hay. Less labor at baling time is required, and the hay is more uniform. In addition to this, the excessive drying out and brittleness may be avoided, giving a leafy, tough, palatable, nutritious type of hay with good color. This is the kind of hay most in demand by feeders and the hay which tops the market when offered for sale."

To build a hay stack a foundation preferably of poles or boards, or of old straw or weeds or some material of that sort should be put on the ground to prevent moisture drawing up in the stack, points out Professor Hyslop. The hay should if possible, be pitched on the stack from both sides, as the large amount of tramping on one side when hay is only pitched on from that side, results in uneven settling.

The middle of the stack must be kept built high so that in settling there is always a tendency for any moisture which may penetrate the stack to run out. Care should be taken not to build the stack too wide as it will necessitate extreme high handling in order to top it satisfactorily.

Mrs. Jewell Writes

Mineral Wells, Tex., June, 1918.

Editor Rogue River Courier:

With your permission, I will contribute a few lines to your paper for the benefit of my Grants Pass friends and avoid an extensive correspondence, and also save my good disposition during the extreme heat here at this time. I think the mineral water here beneficial in many ways, especially for rheumatism and similar ailments. There has been a decided improvement in my health during my visit here of only two weeks. This would be an ideal health resort with our southern Oregon climate, but the extreme heat is almost unbearable here at times.

People come here from all the states. Some are here now from Hot Springs, Ark., and other noted places. Many come only for pleasure. No closed season here.

The recent discovery of oil in this and adjoining counties has created quite an excitement and a great many are coming here to investigate oil lands. Some of the wells here are heavy producers and a great many are under construction. The oil men have their headquarters here.

Since my arrival there was quite an exciting occurrence on the landing station here for aviators. An airplane dropped from a height of 180 feet and was completely wrecked, but the occupants were not seriously injured. Another plane also went wrong, the wind carrying it into the limbs of a tree, but it was not damaged much and made the journey safely on to Camp Bowie. It is an interesting sight to watch them sail by apparently with ease and great speed.

I visited the Red Cross rooms here and find the women greatly interested in the work. The Lone Star State, like our own Oregon went "over the top" in her second Red Cross drive. But I find it so everywhere.

We expect to return home by the first of August.

MRS. STEPHEN JEWELL.

FIVE THOUSAND WAR GARDENS IN SALT LAKE

Salt Lake City, June 24.—Five thousand community war gardens and everyone producing and in excellent shape, is the report of the community war garden committee of Salt Lake City, and issuance of the report recently, brought with it an appeal to war gardeners to can, dry and preserve all excess fruits and vegetables. The war garden crop here will produce far more than can be used at the time of picking, and with saving uppermost, and prevention of waste, the local committee is now urging the people to preserve everything possible.

MOST FIRES CAUSED BY CARELESSNESS

Portland, June 24.—A letter urging renewed efforts toward fire prevention has been sent out by State Forester F. A. Elliott and Federal District Forester G. H. Cecil to 26 district fire wardens, 52 cooperative state and federal fire wardens, 100 forest rangers and 200 fire patrolmen in the state.

"The dry season is at hand," says the letter, "and fire protection plans must now be brought into effective operation. For a number of seasons forest losses are at this time particularly lamentable."

"Since the forest fire warning was first sounded in the United States an army of trained forest fire fighters of no mean efficiency has been developed. To this army you belong.

Many of your former co-workers, skilled in fire protection work, are now in France. Therefore it is up to you to carry an additional burden. "The huge drain on this country's resources because of war has drawn, hosts of men from productive industries and increased the cost of living. Every forest fire needing men and supplies for its extinguishment is a further economic drain. It is particularly our present duty to prevent this waste as well as waste of timber.

"Seventy five per cent of all fires are shown by our records to be caused by careless or evil design.

"In the coming fire season those against the government of the United States will not discourage destruction of government property. Loyal citizens will cooperate and on them you must rely for success. Every patriot must act as the representative of the public—put out small fires, himself and report the large ones immediately to the nearest forest ranger.
