

AT THE MOVIES

"Thais"

Presenting a striking picture of life among the rich and pleasure-mad in ancient Alexandria, staged with a magnificence that has rarely been equalled in picture production, and featuring a star whose fame has spread to every part of the world.

Most of the scenes are laid amidst the magnificence of Alexandria, and one shudders when he pauses to consider what the sets for this production must have cost. And the scenes in the desert and the huts of the Christians are equally convincing in their striking contrast of utter simplicity. As a matter of fact, this picture might well be called a picture of contrasts, for two more different figures than Thais, the idol of Alexandria, the queen of love and passion, and Paphnutius, who gives up wealth and the life of pleasure to join the Christians, and to convert Thais from her paths of wickedness so that those who worship her in the orgies of the earthly may follow her to the simple faith of Christianity.

There are many sensational elements in this picture that are bound to have their effect on the box office results. The magnificence of the sets, and the gowns worn by Miss Garden are little short of wonderful. One scene reveals the rich of Alexandria in their feasts that so many historians have described. At another time Miss Garden appears in the desert in a diaphanous garb that reveals every line of her form. And yet these scenes are so centered about the main story that there is no trace of the vulgar to them.

Miss Garden proves herself the same wonderful actress on the screen that made her fame in the opera. She expresses the varying motions convincingly, and makes the character of Thais truly at one time a queen of worldly love, and at another the repentant daughter who is seeking happiness in Christianity.

From her work in this picture one feels sure that it is not necessary for to follow in other operas for the screen, for she is today as great a picture success as any of the others who have been known in the silent drama for years. It would be unfair to pass the work of Miss Garden by without mentioning the wonderful dance which she executes in the opening scenes.

"Mamma, don't give me Castor Oil"

Such is a familiar entreaty of childhood. All children hate castor oil. Grown people themselves won't take it.

No child minds Stanolax—it is tasteless, odorless, colorless. So it's not like a medicine.

Stanolax is not a cathartic, laden with habit-forming drugs. It does not stimulate the intestines to abnormal action.

Stanolax is a lubricant. It softens the bowel content, and oils and soothes the intestinal walls and makes elimination easy.

By this gentle but certain method, all toxic poisons are carried away. Thus auto-intoxication is prevented.

By the use of Stanolax one prevents chronic Constipation, with all its resultant ills.

Stanolax represents the new-day way—as opposed to harsh purgatives. The natural way as opposed to violent treatments.

Drug-laden cathartics afford only temporary relief.

Stanolax, taken regularly, say a teaspoon at bed time, will keep the intestinal tract clean and ever ready to function properly.

Your druggist has Stanolax. Buy one bottle. It will convince you that old cathartics are needless.
