CANADIAN "BULLDOG" RESTING IN KENNEL

The Canadian "bulldog" seems to be a very harmless creature in his "kennel," but when he is let loose on the Germans he lives up to his name.

COOLS OFF IN JAIL

Party by Name of Chill Gets Heated Over War.

August Chill of Pine Bluff, Ark., undertook to chill the efforts of the United States to whip Germany. Now Chill is cooling off in jail, awaiting action of the federal grand jury. Chill, despite his worldly prosperity, remained loyal to the Fatherland, and when the United States entered the war against Germany Chill got busy. He is specifically charged with obstructing the draft, failing to register as an alien enemy and declaring publicly that the Germans would win the war and that within two years Americans would be living under German rule.

Peculiar Coincidence.

Confusion of names took place at a wedding recently solemnized at Llanstadwell, Neyland, Wales, in which the bride, bridegroom, best man and bridesmaid all bore the names of Thomas, and with the exception that the bridesmaid was a cousin of the bride were all unrelated.

POTATO BREAD FORBIDDEN

Shortage of Tubers Results in Change of Swiss Order.

The Swiss military department has rescinded its order to bakers commanding them to use potato flour or potatoes, either raw or boiled, in making bread.

The potato supply is very scarce in Switzerland. While the bakers formerly were commanded to mix potatoes with bread flour, they now are expressly forbidden to use any potatoes in making bread.

WANT TO MAKE THEIR OWN MUSIC

Soldiers "Over There" Demand Musical Instruments.

HERE'S CHANCE TO "HORN IN"

Dehorn the Amateur Cornetist and Send His Machine to France—Calliopes, Pipe Organs and Grand Pianos Would Not Be Appropriate Donations and the Slide Trombone Has Its Limitations.

Dehorn, the apartment house air-shaft cornetist, and send his musical instrument to the borders of No Man's Land. Here is a chance for patriotic sacrifice which, at the same time, will confer a great relief on the neighbors and brighten the life of some musically-inclined Yankee soldier in the trenches or the billets or the rest camps of the war zone.

There is a great demand for musical instruments by the soldiers over there. This is the word received here by the war work council of the Y. M. C. A. from their hundreds of secretaries and workers in the war zone. Of course there is music there, regimental bands, field music, talking machines and pianos in the "Y" huts, but the soldiers who have the yearning do not want self-starting music. They want the kind they can "push out" themselves, no matter how hard it is, as long as it expresses them.

Would Make His Own Music.

Music's charms are notorious for their soothing effects, and one can imagine the depression of a soldier, who has nothing of a musical outfit but a pair of ear-drums, when he wishes to hide away with a saxophone, to snort and sounds from it. That man is not going to be satisfied with the best band music, the finest phonograph records or the piano playing of other persons who may be experts, not as long as he yearns to blow, scrape or pound out notes or sounds of his own manufacture.

Anyone who has listened to a beginner, under the pretext of practicing, groan with a base horn, sob ripplingly with a slide trombone or cry aloud with a blat-blat alto horn, has realized that the performer wasn't playing, but was relieving his feelings. Well, soldiers with a weakness for music have that same desire to relieve their feelings after the strain of battle or monotony of camp. And they need some instruments by which they can generate musical noises which will soothe their own savage breasts and at the same time put their comrades in such fighting mood that they are ready to sweep the Huns into the Rhine.

Soldiers enjoy teasing tunes from solo instruments, the Y. M. C. A. men report, and it is up to sound-shatterers here to provide the apparatus. They have "come across" with bank notes, why not part with their high notes? The "Y" will pass them along to the yearners.

Discrimination in Donations.

Calliopes, pipe organs, grand pianos and bass drums are hardly convenient for soldiers to keep in dugouts or to carry on hikes. A slide trombone would be all right for open warfare, but in a trench it could only be played sideways. At that, a trench greatly resembles an orchestra pit. Discrimination should be used as to the type as well as the size. A bass horn would be suitable for a man detailed to base headquarters and it would be all right to send a soldier a French horn if he understands that language.

This does not limit the list to mouth organs, jewsharps, "sweet potatoes" and accordions. It should include reeds and small brasses. If American soldiers are to turn the scale they should be allowed to run it, also. Instrumentalists—horn in!

Attacks German Armada.

"The biggest thing the Germans have done in a naval way in this war was the landing on the islands of Messel and Dago. Certainly the only effective opposition they met at sea came from British vessels, three in number. Of the four Beta boats one was undergoing repairs at the time, leaving three available—29, 30, and 33. These three went into the thick of things and gave the Germans a very unwelcome surprise. Failing an adequate intelligence service, the British submarines took sight for themselves of the oncoming armada of dreadnoughts, cruisers, destroyers, and transports, and plunged into their midst. Everything was against our submarines, but they all came out of it alive, and the enemy did not.

"Captain Senley, in Beta 30, was of the true British type, the finished article of the British navy. Beta 29 was commanded by Commander Downie, whose record proves him perfectly true to type; but it was his first command.

"The Germans, notwithstanding convenient arrangements made for the maximum of immunity, were mistrustful of the British boats, and the armada moved inside a ring of destroyers and other smaller craft. Senley, taking a comprehensive glance at their dispositions, dived under five of the destroyers nearest to him, the same tactics being imitated by Commander Downie and by Beta 33. They came up inside the protective ring, to be immediately assailed from aircraft and ships with a rain of missiles—in particular with so-called deep-sea bombs.

"Senley coined his objective—one of the dreadnoughts—dived and fired two torpedoes at a range probably too short for the run of either torpedo, for the dreadnought escaped. But one of the torpedoes passed on and put down a destroyer on the other side of the encircling ring.

"Senley then passed practically under a dreadnought and came up on the other side, still within the encircling ring of destroyers. Turning, he rapidly selected another objective, and then dived to get it. This time he put down a transport carrying hydroplanes—a particularly useful shot, for these hornets, besides bombarding our craft, which, of course, quite viable at fighting depths under water, also kept the ships informed where deep-sea bombs would best serve the Germans. Senley damaged a cruiser so badly that he was able to chase her for many hours, but could not overtake her.

"All this time hydroaeroplanes were dropping deep-sea bombs upon all three boats, while every ship was pumping shell and deep-sea bombs in their direction, according to the signals of the hydroaeroplanes spotters. Whether by good luck or more artful dodging Beta 30 got no more than a few tremendous jerks from these deep-sea bomb explosions. Beta 33, though never actually struck, suffered so terribly from these repeated shocks that she was left helpless, unable to tell anything about herself except that her skin was unpierced. Smashed gauge glasses left her ignorant of her depth, her margin of buoyancy, what power was still available to move or lift, sink or drive her, and she was absolutely blind besides. She simply carried on and finally beached herself and was blown up by her own crew after all her valuable fittings had been removed. Beta 29 had the extremely bad luck to get aground in a tight place and suffered injuries which would be summarized in the case of an ordinary ship as 'in a sinking condition.' Commander Downie, however, stuck to it and got off."

WRITE CHEERFUL LETTERS

Only cheerful letters from home to the boys overseas are the kind to send, according to numerous Y. M. C. A. war work secretaries. A gloomy letter, they assert, lowers morale and does real harm.
